Apparently, though this was not proved, the cost of these pensions was ultimately defrayed by the Government of Ceylon. These pensions were attached in execution of certain decrees. Upon application being made by the pensioners to have the attachments set aside: Held, that the pensions were exempt from attachment, as being "political pensions" within the meaning of s. 266 (g). Per Sir ARNOLD WHITE, C.J. If the Government of India were to be regarded as merely the agent of the Ceylon Government for the purpose of paying the pensions, the Courts of British India would have no jurisdiction to proceed by way of attachment, since the rights of the pensioners (assuming them to be enforceable at law) would only be enforceable in Ceylon. Ghamsham Lal v. *Bhansali, I. The will did not give expressly the widow power to dispose of it. The plaintiff, in execution of a decree against V, sought to attach V's interest in the house. The lower Court held that, as the interest taken by the defendant in the house under her husband's will was only a widow's estate, V, as her husband's son, had an interest in the house which might be attached by the plaintiffs. Held (reversing the decree), that V had no interest in the house. He had only a spes successionis—an expectancy of succession by survivorship, and such a hope or expectancy is not attachable under s. 266 (k) of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The entire estate was vested by the testator in the defendant. No doubt, her estate was a widow's estate. Her estate in it closely resembled that of a married woman in England, to whom property is given with a restraint against alienation. That being so, she was unable to dispose of it, but still she was its full owner. The whole property passed to her from the testator. Nothing was left in him. conveyed the 105 bighas to K, and ultimately died on 26th January 1883. Plaintiffs then sued to set aside the gift and for possession of the land. The learned Judge found that the land was given to G in lieu of her maintenance, which she was to hold rent free for her life, and that she had been in possession thereof for twenty years. Further, that U had the right to resume the land and assess it to rent on the death of G, and that all the rights and interests of U in the land were attached and sold in 1874. On second appeal it was contended that the interest of U in the land at the time of the sale of the village by auction was in the nature of a mere expectancy, and therefore could not be sold and was not sold. Held, that U gave to G the usufruct of the land for her life in lieu of her maintenance ; that after the gift the interest of U in the land was of the same character and carried with it the same consequences as the reversion which the lessor would have for land leased for life or years, and analogous to the right which a mortgagor who had granted a usufructuary mortgage would have ; that U had a vested right in the land which was capable of being sold, and that right passed to the auction-purchaser at the sale of 1874. Koraj Koonwar v. *Komul Koonwar, 6 W. The defendant, who was 80 years of age, claimed the house as her absolute property alleging that her son by a deed had given it to her as a provision for her maintenance. The deed stated that she had been made the owner of the house, that the donor had no right to it, and that it wholly belonged to her. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the declaration prayed for. The surrounding circumstances showed that the house was revertible to the donor on the defendant's death. He had what in English law would be termed a vested remainder on her death, and he had, therefore, a saleable interest during her life. There was sold in execution of a decree the judgment-debtor's right to get by division a quantity of land which had been reserved by him for his own use in a deed of gift, but which, at the time of the execution-sale, was in the possession of the donee of the estate, the land never having been appropriated by measurement as provided in the deed. In a suit brought by the auction-purchaser (decree-holder) for the area of the land reserved by measurement and division: Held, that the claim of the judgment-debtor to the land was a transferable claim, and therefore capable of being attached and sold in execution under s. 266 of the Civil Procedure Code. The property in Calcutta was sold under the decree and did not realize sufficient to satisfy the decree. D M thereupon, in August 1873, obtained an order for the transfer of the decree to the mofussil Court for execution. After the transfer B C died, in December 1874, leaving a widow and an adopted son his representatives, against whom the suit was revived. The decree, however, was returned to the High Court unexecuted. In a suit for partition of the estate of R C, deceased, brought by P C against B C in the High Court, a decree was made in February 1871 for an injunction to restrain B C from intermeddling with the estate or the accumulations, and for the appointment of the Receiver of the Court as Receiver, to whom all parties were to give up quiet possession. B C was in that suit declared entitled to a moiety of the property in suit. Held, on application by D M to the High Court for an order that the Receiver should sell the right, title, and interest of the widow and son of B C in the estate in his hands to satisfy the balance of his debt, that D M was entitled to an order that their interest should be attached in the hands of the Receiver, and that the Receiver should proceed to sell the same. On completion of the works, the Executive Engineer handed over to the plaintiff a cheque on the Government treasury for the amount due on the first contract. The Executive Engineer thereupon stopped payment of the cheque, the amount of which was eventually paid to the defendant. Held, that at the date of the attachment the cheque had become the property of the plaintiff, and that the defendant should refund the amount received by him. The second contract was sold to the plaintiff by R, and the account in the Executive Engineer's office relating to it was closed, showing a sum of money to R's credit at the date of the defendant's attachment. Held, that the plaintiff, being the only person really interested, was entitled to this sum also; for although the Executive Engineer would have been legally justified in paying it to R, he was not bound, it being really the plaintiff's property, to pay it to a third person such as the defendant, the judgment-creditor, who, if the sum was paid to him, must refund it to the plaintiff. By his will he bequeathed the residue of his property to trustees (of whom his widow was one) in trust to pay the rents and income thereof to his widow for life, "she thereout maintaining, educating, and bringing up" his children in a manner suitable to their degree in life. After his death the property, moveable and immoveable, was to be divided among his sons equally when D should attain the age of twenty-five. He attained majority in October 1895. At the date of suit, D was eighteen years old and P was twenty-five. It was contended that the widow was only a trustee of the rents for the benefit of her sons P and D. On the 13th June 1895, the plaintiffs obtained a decree for R3,976-10-10 against the widow and her son P. In execution of that decree, they attached, under an order dated 2nd July 1895, the immoveable properties which had belonged to the testator's estate on the ground that both the widow and P had an interest in them. The attachment was issued under s. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The defendants contended that the widow had no attachable interest at all in the said properties, she being under the will merely a trustee as abovementioned for her sons, and that, if she had, it was an interest in moveable property, which should have been attached under s. 268 of the Code, that the attachment under s. 274 was ineffectual and inoperative. They further alleged that by an assignment dated the 20th February 1896 she had assigned and surrendered her life-interest to her son D, and that such interest was, therefore, not available to satisfy the plaintiff's decree against her. As to P's interest, the defendants alleged that by a deed of settlement, dated the 9th February 1895, it was validly settled for the benefit of himself and his family, and that, therefore, he had no interest in him which could be attached under the order of the 2nd July 1895. Held, (i) that the widow had an attachable interest in the property. (ii) That her interest was an interest in immoveable property, and was validly attached under s. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code. (iii) That her assignment of the 20th February 1896 was invalid as against the plaintiffs under s. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code. NATHA KERRA v. DHUNBAIJI . . . I. L. R. 23 Bom. 1

By law and usage, a certain relationship grows up between certain pilgrims or worshippers and a particular priest, and when such relationship exists, such pilgrims or worshippers are called yajmans, or clients of the priest, whose right to offer and perform the religious ceremonies in question for such yajmans becomes exclusive against rival priests so far that, under the Hindu law as applied and followed in this Presidency, if any such yajmans accept the religious services of another priest, they must compensate the priest, whose yajmans they are, by giving to him a reasonable fee." Held, that such a vritti is a "right of personal service" within the meaning of cl. Where a trust had been created for specific purposes, viz., the performance of religious and other duties, and the trustee had duly appointed another trustee in his place, the latter being entitled to hold the trust estate :—Held, that, a decree having been made against the trustee personally, the corpus of the trust estate could not be sold to satisfy the claim of the judgment-creditor, nor could any specific portion of the corpus of the estate be taken out of the hands of the trustee on the ground that there was, or might be, a margin of profit coming to him personally after the performance of the trusts. 135.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 622—Decree, execution of—Attachment of trust property—Jurisdiction—Small Cause Court—Notice—Procedure, irregularity of. Under a decree of the Presidency Small Cause Court (the decree being a personal one against the judgment-debtor), trust property, of which the judgment-debtor was the trustee, was attached in execution, the beneficiaries under the trust not being parties to the proceedings. Held, that the attachment of the trust property was irregular and improper ; and that the judgment-creditors were not justified under the decree in attaching any property other than the personal property of the judgment-debtor. And that, before the creditors could obtain a decree which they could execute against the trust property, they would have to show (i) that the trust property, under the terms of the settlement, was devoted to the purpose of the business of an hotel ; (ii) that the circumstances were such that the defendant as trustee would be entitled to be indemnified by the trust property to the extent of the claim, and (iii) that the plaintiffs, as creditors of the hotel business, were entitled to stand in the shoes of the trustee in respect of the indemnity, and to be recouped out of the trust estate. Held, also, that the mere fact that the trustee in carrying on the business of a trust, had rendered himself personally liable for the business-debts, would not of itself give creditors a right to proceed against the trust property ; but the creditors would be at liberty to take such steps as they might be advised to proceed against the trust property in proceedings properly constituted for that purpose. Strickland v. *Symons, L. 136. ——— Money paid to sirdar as wages of coolies—Act VIII of 1859, ss. 236, 237. The defendants were sirdars of coolies. It was proved that by virtue of custom, a sirdar of coolies was entitled to have the wages of coolies paid to him so that he might deduct the amounts due to him by the respective coolies for food supplied by him to them ; but it was not found that the coolies were hired on the basis of such custom. In execution of the decree, an order was made upon the officer of the Public Works Department in whose employ the coolies were, attaching " all moneys which are or may become payable to the debtors, whether on their own personal account or on account of the coolies over whom they were sirdars." Held, the attachment could not be maintained. Where in a suit on an hypothecation bond the plaintiff sought to attach before judgment immoveable property of the defendant other than that hypothecated:—Held, that it was not necessary in order that the Court might be satisfied that the proceeds of the sale of the hypothecated property were likely to prove insufficient to meet the decree which the plaintiff might obtain in his suit, that such property should be actually brought to sale. 11. ——— Attachment of money deposited in Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 483 and 484. The term "property," as used in ss. 483 and 484 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is wide enough to include property of every description, moveable and immoveable, whether in the actual possession of the defendant or of some other person on his behalf; and the words "the Court may require him . . . to produce and place at the disposal of the Court" only refer to such property as is capable of being produced in Court. Where property ordered to be attached is deposited in the Court which made the order for attachment, that order is sufficient notice to itself that the property ordered to be attached is to be held subject to the further orders of the Court, and it is not necessary that a separate formal notice should be drawn up. 12. ——— Attachment before judgment of Company's property—Winding up Company—Suit against manager of Company—Company not a party to the suit—Remedy of liquidator—Appeal—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 283, 485, 487, 588, and 622. The Dhulia manufacturing Company, Limited, carried on business at Dhulia and had its registered office at Bombay. One M, was the manager at Dhulia, and he had authority to borrow money and draw hundis on behalf of the company. In August 1894, the directors opened negotiations for the sale of the company's factory to one H, and in September 1894, while the negotiations were pending, a special resolution was passed to wind up the company voluntarily. The resolution was confirmed in October 1894, and A was appointed liquidator under s. 177 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). In December 1894, the liquidator agreed to sell the factory to H for the said sum of R38,000. Under the agreement, H was to enter into possession of the factory, but the company was to have a lien upon it until the completion of the purchase, which was to take place in May 1895. A month before the date fixed for the completion of the sale, the plaintiff filed a suit in the Court of the first class Subordinate Judge of Dhulia against M, the manager of the company, in his individual capacity and as manager of the company. His claim was professedly against the company, but he did not make the company, which was then in liquidation, a party to the suit. Subsequently the plaintiff applied for and obtained an order for attachment before judgment of the company's factory at Dhulia. No notice of the application or of the order made on it was given to the liquidator. He at once applied to the Court to raise the attachment, contending that the Court had no power to attach the property of the company, which was not a party to the suit. The Court made the company a party, and dismissed the liquidator's application, confirming its previous order for attachment. The liquidator appealed to the High Court. Held, that the order of attachment should be reversed. The intended sale by the liquidator, which was the sole reason for making the order, was not with intent to obstruct any decree that the plaintiff might obtain against the company, but was being effected by the liquidator in the course of his duty and in pursuance of a contract entered into long before the suit was instituted. The plaintiff's claim, if established, would be satisfied pari passu with the other debts of the company. The plaintiff was not entitled to security for his claim in preference to the other creditors. It was contended that no appeal lay against the order of the Subordinate Judge, and that the liquidator's sole remedy was by suit under ss. 283 and 487 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882): Held, that, the company having been made a party to the suit, the order of attachment was made under s. 485 of the Civil Procedure Code, and consequently under s. 588 an appeal lay from that order. If the company had not been made a party, the High Court would have set aside the order of attachment under s. 622 of the Code, as in that case the Subordinate Judge would have had no jurisdiction to make it. 13. ——— Attachment, effect of—Necessity of subsequent attachment—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 89. R R filed a plaint against I R on the 15th, and obtained a decree on the 27th of February, and a prohibitory order was made against I R's property on the 18th of March, subject to three prior attachments : one by J S, whose plaint was filed on the 30th of January, and who obtained a prohibitory order on the 13th and a decree on the 16th of February ; a second by N S, who filed his plaint and obtained a prohibitory order on the 30th of January, and obtained a decree on February 22nd ; and a third by K S, who also filed his plaint and got a prohibitory order on January 30th, and a decree on February 28th for an order for the sale of the goods on notice to the other three plaintiffs ; and the Court ruled that N S and K S were entitled to priority over R R. Held, that the process in attachment before judgment is in all respects the same as in cases of attachment after judgment, and the effect in binding the property attached, so as to prevent alienation, is the same. That an attachment, whether before or after judgment, places the property in the custody of the law. That if property have been attached before judgment, there is no need of a second attachment in the same suit after judgment. That the words " attachment before judgment " in s. 89 of Act VIII of 1859 must be read as equivalent to " attachments in pending suits," or, in other words, the phrase " before judgment " must be read as meaning " until after judgment." 28. ——— Security for personal appearance of defendant—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 477, 479—Bonâ-fide suit. A suit was instituted against the master of a vessel for repairs done to his vessel and for hire of a dock in which the vessel had been. The master being about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court with his vessel, the plaintiffs, under s. 477 of the Code of Civil Procedure, applied for an order that the defendant should give security for his appearance to answer any decree that might be passed against him, and a rule was issued calling on him to show cause why such security should not be furnished. The defendant showed cause, and alleged that the amount claimed for the repairs was excessive, that the repairs were badly done, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to dock-hire, and that some of the repairs charged for had not been executed. He further counter-claimed for a large sum for demurrage owing to the detention of his vessel and damages caused to it by the wrongful act of the plaintiffs. It was contended that, as the claim was on a contested account which on the face of it was stated, but unsettled, on the principle of the English authorities, the plaintiffs were not entitled to the order asked for. It was further contended that the suit was not a bonâ fide one, brought merely to harass the defendant, and that for this reason security should not be ordered to be given. It was not disputed that the defendant had no domicile in this country, and that he was shortly leaving in his vessel in the ordinary course of his business. The Court found the plaintiffs were undoubtedly entitled to recover some amount on account of repairs, and that the mere fact that the plaintiffs added on to such a claim one of a disputable character did not go to show that the suit was not a bonâ fide one. Held, that there is no authority for saying that the principles applied in England to the granting of writs ne exeat regno should be applied in this country ; that the Court can only look to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure ; that when a person comes on business to this country in which he has no property or domicile, and enters into a contract with a person to do work in connection with that business, and which must be done before he leaves the country, and it is known he intends to leave as soon as the work is completed, there is an implied understanding, if the work was done on his credit, that it should be paid for before he leaves. Held, also, that the case fell within the provisions of s. 477 of the Code, and that the defendant should furnish security for his appearance while the suit was pending within a week in terms of s. 479, such security to be for the amount of the claim. Where a decree upon a hypothecation-bond allows satisfaction of the debt from the hypothecated property and also from the judgment-debtor personally, and contains no condition that execution shall first be enforced against the property, and where there is no question of fraud being perpetrated on the judgment-debtor, there is no principle of equity which prevents the decree-holder from enforcing his decree against the judgment-debtor's person or property, whichever he may think best. Wali Muhammad v. *Tarab Ali, I. 12. ——— Imprisonment, period of— Subsequent arrest in execution—Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882, ss. 481 and 342. The defendant was arrested before judgment, and on the 5th February 1883 committed to jail under s. 481 of the Civil Procedure Code. On the 6th March following a decree in the suit was passed against him. On the 28th July, the defendant being then still in jail under the order of the 5th February, the plaintiff took out a fresh warrant of arrest in execution of the decree, and sought to have the defendant further imprisoned for the full period of six months limited by s. 342 of the Code. Held, that the defendant could be re-committed to jail, in execution of the decree, only for such a period as together with the period of imprisonment that had elapsed since the passing of the decree, would complete a period of six months, and that consequently he would be entitled to be liberated on the 5th September 1883. Imprisonment under s. 481 becomes, after decree, imprisonment in execution of the decree, and the imprisonment suffered after that date must consequently be taken into consideration in calculating the period of six months, which, by s. 342 of the Code, is the limit allowed for an imprisonment in execution of a decree. In a suit on the bonds against D, as the principal defendant with J, M, B, P, R, and I joined as parties:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to enforce the lien created by the bonds against the immoveable property specified in them, notwithstanding that no attachment had been made in accordance with the provisions of s. 274 of the Code; a debt secured by a mortgage lien on immoveable property not being "immoveable property" within the meaning of that section. Meanwhile, in December 1885, a decree for pre-emption in respect of a sale by the judgment-debtors in 1881 of their muafi interests in the village was decreed in favour of persons who were not parties to the litigation in which the attachment of 1884 was effected. The plaintiffs (who were in possession) sued for a declaration of their right to the muafi interests as against the auction-purchaser under the sale of January 1886. Held, that the attachment in 1884 was not a good attachment of the muafi interests of the judgment-debtors, and the auction-purchaser could not be held to have purchased those muafi interests, and the title of the plaintiffs under their pre-emptive decree of December 1885 must prevail. By an order of attachment issued, at the plaintiff's instance, by the Bhusaval Court to the defendant's disbursing officer at Nagpore, a moiety of pay having been withheld by that officer, the defendant applied to the Bhusaval Court to cancel the order, contending that it was illegal, as neither he nor his disbursing officer resided at Bhusaval. On reference to the High Court:—Held, that the order of attachment was ultra vires, as neither the defendant nor his disbursing officer resided within the jurisdiction of the Bhusaval Court. 24. ——— Attachment before judgment—Termination of attachment—Sale in execution—Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale without attachment—Waiver—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 311, 483. The plaintiff instituted a suit against the defendant for recovery of money, and previous to judgment, that is, on the 8th January 1885, applied for, and on the 11th obtained, orders for attachment of several houses and premises belonging to defendant, and such attachment was made. The suit was dismissed, but eventually on appeal it was decreed, but the attachment was never withdrawn. Plaintiff then applied for execution of his decree, and his application was granted by an order directing that the property of the judgment-debtor should be notified for sale on the 1st February 1887, and accordingly, on the 21st December 1880, a sale notification was issued. Judgment-debtor twice applied for postponement of sale, but his applications were refused, and the sale took place on the date fixed. The judgment-debtor then objected to the confirmation of the sale, urging that the property sold was never attached in execution of the decree, and the attachment previous to judgment was infructuous, because afterwards the claim was dismissed by the Court of first instance; that there had been several other irregularities in publishing and conducting the sale; and that, owing to the irregularities, property had been sold at a grossly inadequate price, causing substantial injury. The Subordinate Judge, overruling the objections, confirmed the sale. On appeal by the judgment-debtor:—Held, following Mahadeo Dubey v. Bhola Nath Dichit, I. L. R. 5 All. 86, that a regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of decrees for money; and where there has been no such attachment, any sale that may have taken place is not simply voidable, but de facto void, and may be set aside without any inquiry as to substantial injury being sustained by the judgment-debtor for want of a valid attachment; and that an attachment before judgment, like a temporary injunction, becomes functus officio as soon as the suit terminates. Further, that the phrase "a material irregularity in publishing or conducting" in the first paragraph of s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be liberally construed, and that absence of attachment of property at the time of sale thereof is "a material irregularity," attachment being the first step which a Court in executing a simple money-decree has to take to

1. ——— Question of priority of attachment—Attachment under decree of High Court of property already attached under decree of Small Cause Court—Claim to attached property, by what Court to be decided—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 272. In execution of a decree obtained in the High Court, the plaintiffs, on the 22nd of March 1895, attached certain property of the defendant, which, however, had been already attached on the 22nd of February 1895 by one R, who had obtained a decree against defendant in the Court of Small Causes. The plaintiffs' attachment was therefore effected under s. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) by a notice addressed by the Prothonotary of the High Court to the Registrar of the Small Cause Court. The claimant was mortgagee in possession, and the defendants were his tenants. On the 26th February he had lodged a claim in the Small Cause Court to the said property as mortgagee in possession, and on the 25th March 1895 a consent order was passed by the Chief Judge of that Court directing that R's attachment should stand subject to the claimant's claim. On the 22nd April 1895, the claimant applied to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court to issue a notice to the plaintiffs in this suit, under s. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code, to determine the question of priority of claim to the attached property between him and the plaintiffs. His application was refused, the Chief Judge being of opinion that he could not interfere in a High Court suit. The claimant then filed his claim in the High Court, and took out this summons to remove the plaintiffs' attachment. Held, that, under s. 272 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Small Cause Court was the only Court to decide the question of priority between the claimant and the plaintiffs. Twelve years after the attachment no further steps having been taken in the matter, the execution case was struck off the file, and the property was afterwards mortgaged by the judgment-debtors to R. Subsequently, a fresh attachment was issued at the instance of the heirs of the former attaching creditor, under which the property was put up for sale subject to R's mortgage, and R herself became the purchaser. In a suit by R to set aside the pottahs granted during the continuance of the first attachment:—Held, that the prohibition against alienation of property under attachment avoids such alienation only as against the execution-creditor or person entitled to claim under him. The present plaintiff claimed as assignee from the holder of the attached decree to execute it against the same land, and now sued for a declaration that it was liable to be brought to sale by him, and that the defendant's purchase was void as against him. Held, (1) that under the circumstances of the case the attachment in execution of the decree of 1885 was subsisting at the time of the purchase by the defendant ; (2) that a judgment-creditor who attaches a decree is competent to execute it. When either the decree-holder or his assignee applies to have attachment under the decree of property which has been previously attached under the decree, it lies upon the decree-holder or the assignee of the decree, as the case may be, if the question is raised, to show that the second application was unnecessary by reason of the first attachment being still subsisting. The attaching creditor thereupon sued for and obtained, under s. 283 of the Code, a declaration that the mortgaged property was nevertheless liable to be sold under this attachment. A few days after obtaining such decree, he again attached the judgment-debtor's property. The mortgagees then sued on their mortgage, and obtained a decree for sale. The sale in execution of the attaching creditor's decree and that ordered by the decree in favour of the mortgagees were both advertised for the same day. The plaintiff purchased at the sale under the attaching creditor's decree, and then sued for a declaration that the property was not liable to be sold in execution of the mortgage-decree on the ground that the judgment-creditor's attachment was restored by the decree under s. 283 of the Code, and that the mortgage executed by the judgment-debtors was invalid as against the plaintiff, the purchaser at the execution sale. Held (affirming the decisions of the Subordinate Judge and the District Judge), that the plaintiff was entitled to the decree sought. Mahommed Waris v. *Pitumber Sein, 21 W. Subsequently to the attachment of the land, the judgment-debtor privately alienated it by sale. Held, that, as the attachment had not been made known as prescribed by law, the provisions of s. 240 of Act VIII of 1859 did not apply, and the sale was not null and void. Indra Chandra v. *Agra and Masterman's Bank, 1 B. While under attachment, B sold the property to C, and out of the proceeds paid into Court the full amount of the debt then due and for which the property had been attached. A took out the money, but applied for and obtained an order from the Munsif that the property should remain under attachment, in order to satisfy any future sum which should fall due under the decree and in payment of which B should make default. B failed to pay a further instalment when due, and A obtained an order for sale of the property. A himself became the purchaser, and was put in possession by the Court, notwithstanding the claim of C, who had been in possession ever since his purchase. In a suit by C to recover possession:—Held, that the Court had no power to make the order continuing the attachment, the right of attachment being only for sums actually due, and the whole amount for which execution issued being satisfied out of the proceeds, the alienation of the property to C was not void as against A. The third defendant claimed under a mortgage prior in date to the hypothecation to the plaintiff, and under a sale prior in date to the sale to the plaintiff, made to the third defendant whilst the land was under attachment in execution of the decree to the plaintiff. Held, that the sale to the third defendant, which was made not under any agreement with the plaintiff for the satisfaction of the decree through the Court, was invalid by reason of s. 240 of the Civil Procedure Code; but that the alienation to the plaintiff, the decree-holder, during the attachment to satisfy the decree, which was duly sanctioned by the approval of the Court which issued the process of attachment, was valid. in, and benefited by, the mortgage. The property was subsequently released from attachment, but was again attached, and was brought to sale in execution of the decree held by the Delhi Bank, and purchased by the defendants. The Mussoorie Savings Bank sued the auction-purchasers, claiming the right to bring the property to sale on the ground of its being under mortgage to the Bank prior to its purchase by the defendants. It was held that under the circumstances the defendants must take the consequences of having purchased the property without having satisfied themselves as to its condition. Had it not been for the conduct of the Delhi Bank, however, the rule that a private bonâ fide alienation for value of property attached under Act VIII of 1859 is, by virtue of s. 240 of the Act, null and void only as against the attaching creditor or persons who may acquire rights under or through the attachment, would have saved the defendants, and it would have done so, notwithstanding that the sale of the property in suit took place in pursuance of a second attachment. On or before the date of the said kanom, plaintiff's father had placed under attachment the properties covered by the kanom deed in execution of one of the said decrees; but the claim having been satisfied, no Court-sale followed. While the said attachment was still subsisting, and at a date later than that of the kanom, first defendant and other judgment-creditors applied for and obtained orders for the attachment of the same properties. On plaintiff's suing to establish the validity of his kanom, it was contended that in consequence of the said attachment first defendant would be entitled to rateable distribution under s. 295 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that this was a claim enforceable under the attachment within the meaning of s. 276. Held, that the kanom was valid. The attachment subject to which the kanom had been granted ceased to be operative both as regards the attaching creditor and the other judgment-creditors when the judgment-debt was discharged, and there could be no sale by the Court, and no right on the part of the other creditors, in the circumstances, to apply for such a sale. s. 240. The title obtained by the purchaser on a private sale of property in satisfaction of a decree differs from that acquired upon a sale in execution. Under a private sale, the purchaser derives title through the vendor, and cannot acquire a title better than his. Under an execution-sale, the purchaser, notwithstanding that he acquires merely the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor, acquires that title, by operation of law, adversely to the judgment-debtor and freed from all alienations and incumbrances effected by him after the attachment of the property sold. In 1858 the respondent obtained a decree against B. In 1863, in satisfaction thereof, he caused to be attached a decree for mesne profits made in favour of B against the appellants in 1860. In May 1865 the respondent obtained an order for the sale thereof; but instead of proceeding to execution-sale, he purchased, in 1866, the whole of the mesne profits due under the decree of 1860 by private sale from B. Meanwhile in September 1865, an order of Court had been made, between B and the appellants, on their consent (but without the respondent being a party to it), whereby the decree for mesne profits was set off, pro tanto, against a prior decree for a larger amount, which the appellants had obtained against B. Held, that, the sale of 1866 having been a private one and not in process of execution, the respondent only obtained such title as B had in the decree of 1860, viz., a title subject to the effect of the order of September 1865. s. 276 of Act X of 1877. Held, that, having regard to the description given in the application for attachment and the order of attachment, it could not be said that the muafi holding alienated by the judgment-debtor was under attachment at the time of the alienation, and its alienation was therefore not void under s. 276 of Act X of 1877. Held, also, that the material misdescription of the property in this case in the order of attachment protected the alienees, who are bonâ fide purchasers, from having the alienation set aside as void under s. 276, as the attachment could not under the circumstances be held to have been "duly intimated and made known" as required by that section. 141. A judgment-debtor, whose property had been attached in execution of a money decree, sold the property, and out of the price paid into Court the amount of the decree, and prayed that the attachment might be removed While the attachment was subsisting, and prior to the sale, the holders of other money-decrees against the same judgment-debtor preferred applications, purporting to be made under s. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, and praying that the proceeds of the sale of the property might be rateably divided between themselves and the attaching creditor. The Court refused to remove the attachment until these creditors had been paid. It was found that the sale by the judgment-debtor was a bonâ fide transaction, entered into for valuable consideration. Held, that, inasmuch as no order for attachment of the property was passed in favour of the decree-holders in manner provided by s. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code, their claims were not entitled to the protection conferred by s. 276 against private alienations of property under attachment; that these claims were not enforceable under the attachment which was made; that the sale by the judgment-debtor was valid; and that execution of the decrees could not take place. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That s. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code, being a restriction of private rights of alienation, should be strictly construed; that before property can be subjected to such restriction, there must be a perfected attachment; that the orders passed under s. 295 did not amount to such attachment, and that, even assuming them to amount to such attachment, they, not having been duly intimated and notified, could not make the prohibition of s. 276 applicable to the case. Mahadeo Dubey v. Bhola Nath Dichit, *I. On the 2nd June 1884 the parties came to an arrangement, by which it was agreed that B's claims should be satisfied by means of all the attached properties with the exception of one, which should be left free for the benefit of the other judgment-creditors. By a deed dated the 16th June, but which was found to have been actually executed on the 17th, T conveyed this property to A, and on the 17th June all the other attached properties were sold in execution of B's decree, and on the same day B put in an application for the removal of his attachment from this property. D, another decree-holder, on the 16th June, applied to be included in the rateable distribution of the properties attached by B, and on the 30th June D attached the property sold to A in execution of his decree. A preferred a claim to the property, which was disallowed, and A thereupon brought a suit to establish her right to it on the ground (inter alia) that B's attachment had ceased to exist on the date of her purchase, and that the sale was a valid one. Held, that the sale to A was valid against D. 1. ——— Claim to attach property—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 278, 283, 483—Attachment before judgment—Liability of creditor who caused attachment of goods not belonging to the debtor—Damages after sale—Difference between English and Indian law on the subject. Orders for attachment in security under s. 483 of the Civil Procedure Code being issued on the ex-parte application of the creditor, who is bound to specify the property which he desires to have attached and its estimated value, it follows that the attachment is the direct act of the creditor for which he is immediately responsible. Should the goods be proved not to belong to the debtor, the litigation and delay, and also any depreciation of the goods by an intermediate fall in the market, between attachment and sale, are the natural and necessary consequences of the creditor's unlawful act. success, the summary proceeding under s. 278, to get the release of goods attached under s. 487, in a suit to which he was not a party, afterwards, in a suit brought by him in accordance with s. 283, established his right of property in the goods. Held, that (a) in order to entitle him to the full indemnity for the wrongful attachment he was not bound to allege and prove that the defendants had resisted his previous application under s. 278 maliciously, or without probable cause ; and that (b) the goods having been sold under the Court's order the difference in market-value of the goods at the time of their attachment (November 1883) and their price when they were sold (June 1884), the selling prices having fallen intermediately, must be added to the damages. Held, also, that without bringing under review the judgment under s. 278, the effect of the judgment in the suit brought in accordance with s. 283 was to supersede the order under s. 278, and to render it inconclusive. The procedure on attachment not being the same in India as in England, where a judgment-creditor is not responsible for the consequence of a sale, under a judicial order, or goods taken in execution in satisfaction of his debt, that proposition does not hold good under the Indian procedure ; and Walker v. *Olding, 1 H. & C. 621 : 9 Jur. 4. ——— Extinguishment of attachment—Act VIII of 1859, s. 270—Execution of decree—Striking off execution case—Money-decree. A obtained a decree against C for possession and mesne profits, but no specific amount of mesne profits was then assessed. In 1864 A, in execution of his decree, attached land belonging to C, but the execution case was struck off the file in 1865. After several ineffectual proceedings, A re-attached the property in March 1869. In execution of a decree against C, B had in February 1869 attached the same property. The property was sold under A's attachment in May 1869, and on the application of A, the Subordinate Judge, on the strength of A's attachment in 1864, gave priority to A's claim over that of B. The balance of the sale-proceeds, after satisfaction of A's decree, was only sufficient to cover a small portion of the decree obtained by B. In a suit by B against A, under s. 270, Act VIII of 1859, to recover the amount of her claim which remained unsatisfied:—Held, that the attachment of A in 1864, on the strength of which A's claim was considered by the Subordinate Judge to have priority over that of B, was not a sufficient and valid attachment under s. 270. The attachment contemplated by that section means an attachment after a final money-decree. Held, also, that the striking off of the execution case of A in 1865 caused an extinguishment of the effect of the attachment of 1864. The decree-holder having failed to furnish adequate security, the execution case was struck off. The appeal to the Privy Council having been dismissed, the decree-holder revived execution proceedings, adding costs and interest to her original claim. Upon this a third party intervened, and objected to the attachment on the ground that he had obtained a mokurari pottah of the properties from B's representative. The objection having been allowed under Act VIII of 1859, s. 246, M brought a suit to have the mokurari declared to be invalid and fictitious. Held, that plaintiff was not required to cause M's admitted proprietary right to be sold before she could maintain her suit. Held, that the act of the Court in

1. ——— Acts necessary to constitute an attempt—Penal Code, s. 511. S. 511 of the Penal Code was not meant to cover only the penultimate act towards completion of an offence and not acts precedent, if those acts are done in the course of the attempt to commit the offence, are done with the intent to commit it, and done towards its commission. Whether any given act or series of act amounts to an attempt of which the law will take notice, or merely to preparation, is a question of fact in each case. In the matter of the petition of MACCREA . . . . I. Held*, by GLOVER, J., that incendiarism having, on several occasions, occurred in a village, produced by a ball of rag, with a piece of burning charcoal within it, and the prisoner one evening being discovered to have a ball of that description concealed in his dhoti, which contained burning charcoal, he is, under s. 511 of the Penal Code, guilty of an attempt to commit mischief by fire. The possession of the instrument to commit mischief by fire, and the going about of the person with it, are sufficient to raise a presumption that he intended to commit the act, and had already begun to move towards the execution. These facts are sufficient to constitute an attempt. Held, by MITTER, J., that the possession of a fire-ball and moving about it cannot support a conviction under ss. 436 and 511 of the Penal Code. These facts are not sufficiently indicative of an intention to destroy a building used for human dwelling. To constitute an offence under s. 511 of the Penal Code, it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act towards commission of the offence, but that the act itself should have been done in the attempt to commit it. 11. ——— Attempt to commit forgery—Penal Code, ss. 467, 511—Intention to commit offence. To constitute the offence of attempt under s. 511, Penal Code, there must be an act done with the intention of committing an offence, and for the purpose of committing that offence, and it must be done in attempting the commission of the offence. The provisions of s. 511, Penal Code, do not extend to make punishable as attempts acts done in the mere stage of preparation. In consequence of this discovery, no certificate was given to him, and he was charged and convicted as above mentioned. The procedure necessary for obtaining a refund of octroi duty was that the central office, on satisfying itself that the articles produced were of the nature stated, would grant a certificate, which certificate would have to be indorsed by the outpost clerk when he passed the goods (on which refund was claimed) out of the town, and the owner would have to take back the certificate so indorsed to the central office and present it to be cashed. Held, that, even assuming the accused to have falsely represented the contents of the kuppas as alleged, he had not completed an attempt to cheat, but had only made preparation for cheating, and that the conviction must therefore be set aside. After this, on the 23rd of November 1901, Durga Charan took his servant Daulat to the town of Padrauna, and there purchased an 8-anna stamp paper in the name of Ram Ghulam. Daulat personated Ram Ghulam, and told the stamp vendor that he was Ram Ghulam, so that the stamp vendor put down the name of Ram Ghulam on the stamp paper as the purchaser of it. The stamp paper was subsequently found in the possession of Durga Charan, who had locked it up in a chest in his house. Held, upon the above facts, that Durga Charan was properly convicted of the offence of abetting the fabrication of false evidence, though his acts did not amount to an attempt to commit forgery. Queen-Empress v. *Mula, I. 1. ——— Striking off the roll—Misconduct. Where an attorney knowingly prepares a conveyance containing untrue recitals of the transaction between the parties thereto, and attests the deed and a receipt for consideration-money, which, to his knowledge, was never paid, or intended to be paid, the production of such a document to the Court is sufficient ground for calling upon the attorney for an explanation of his conduct. But if such explanation be given, supported by evidence to the effect that there was no fraudulent intent, and if no fraudulent use of the deed has in fact been made or attempted, nor any injury caused thereby, it is not sufficient ground for striking the attorney off the rolls of the Court. Semble : The High Court in Calcutta is not authorized in striking an attorney off the rolls when such a step would not be sanctioned by the practice of the Courts in England. In the matter of STEWART 1 B. Held, that such a contract stands on a different footing from one between private persons, and that the Court, before enforcing it, should require the plaintiff clearly to show its fairness, and that no undue advantage has been taken of the client. 6. ——— Taxation of bill of costs—Interest on costs—Rate of interest. The plaintiff, an attorney of the High Court, made advances to the defendant, a banker and merchant, for whom he had been and was then acting in certain litigation in which the defendant was engaged in the High Court. At the time of the first loan in 1869, the defendant was considerably indebted, and one creditor had issued execution against his property, and he also owed the plaintiff a large sum for costs, for which, however, up to that time, no bills of costs had been delivered. Before the first loan the plaintiff delivered bills for all his costs then due, of which some were incurred in completed and others in pending suits, and offered to have them taxed; but the defendant then said there was no need for taxation, which would only increase his expenses. The advances were made on the security of mortgages executed by the defendant. The first was executed in August 1869, and the principal was repayable in February 1871. Interest was to be payable at 12 per cent. per annum, and compound interest at the same rate was also to be charged on all interest in arrear. In September 1870 a further advance on the same terms was made and a further mortgage executed, which included the original sum, with the interest then due, and the further advance. Further advances were made in the same way in October 1871 and March 1876. In all these transactions the defendant had no independent professional advice, and the mortgages were prepared in the plaintiff's office, but not charged for. In a suit to recover the sum due on the mortgages by sale of the mortgaged property, the plaintiff abandoned any accumulation of interest since the date of the third mortgage. Held, that the defendant, notwithstanding he had declined the offer of the plaintiff in 1869 to tax the bills, and notwithstanding the delay that had taken place, was entitled (having regard to the relation between the parties and to the fact that a portion of the costs was incurred in suits then pending) to have the bills taxed and to re-open the account. Under the circumstances the Court would not infer acquiescence from the delay on the part of the defendant, nor did the plaintiff's offer to tax, and the defendant's refusal of that offer, debar the defendant of his right to have the bills taxed in the usual way. Held, also, that there is no rule which prevents an attorney from taking security or otherwise arranging with his client for the payment of costs which have actually become due, and that the plaintiff was entitled to sale of the property, to accumulations of interest prior to the date of the third mortgage calculated by allowing annual rests, to interest at 10 per cent. as being a fair rate for the client to have undertaken to pay when the mortgages were executed, and to interest on his costs. On an application by the attorney for the plaintiff that the defendant might be ordered to pay to him his costs of suit out of the sum which had been attached in the defendant's hands, and on which the attorney claimed to have a lien, the Court held that the attorney had a lien for his costs on the sum so attached, but that the only order it could make was an order to the defendant not to pay the sum attached to any one without notice to the attorney. 11. ——— Lien for costs—Lien on documents—Discharge by dissolution of partnership—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 1, 171. Where a firm of attorneys dissolved partnership after the death of a client, there being at that time papers and documents belonging to the client in their hands and a debt due in respect of costs from the client to them :—Held, that the dissolution of partnership operated as a discharge by the firm, and that the attorneys were not entitled to retain the papers and documents until their costs were paid, but were bound to hand them over to the administrator of the client. S. 171 of the Contract Act does not give an attorney an absolute lien. S. 1 provides that nothing in the Act contained shall affect any usage or custom of trade, and, as no part of the English law is inconsistent with s. 171, cases arising in this country must be governed by the English authorities. According to those authorities, while the relation of attorney and client exists, the client may either continue to employ the attorney or change him. When he claims to do the latter, the attorney being willing to act, he cannot ask the attorney to give up papers in his possession without first satisfying the lien. The attorney has his option, —he may, if he chooses, either go on acting for his client, or cease to act ; if he adopt the latter course he must give up the papers. On the death of the client, his representative stands in exactly the same position with respect to the attorney as the client did. In the matter of MCCORKINDALE

They received no reply from the plaintiff, who afterwards obtained leave to sue as a pauper and appeared by other solicitors. Messrs. P and W were subsequently served with a subpœna to produce, at the hearing, certain translations and other documents relating to the plaintiff's case which had remained in their possession, and upon which they claimed a lien in respect of costs due to them by the plaintiff. Held, that Messrs. P and W could not be compelled to produce. A solicitor who is discharged

A solicitor has the same lien upon translations as he has upon other documents, and the fact that they have been made by the Court's interpreters makes no difference. The plaintiff not having satisfied in full his attorney's taxed bill of costs, the attorney applied for payment out of the fund in Court. Previously to this application, the fund had been attached by a third party. Held, that the attorney was entitled to enforce his lien as against the attaching creditor for all costs incurred up to the date of attachment ; that the attaching creditor was then entitled to be satisfied before the attorney could claim payment out of the balance in Court of any sum remaining due to him on account of his costs. 23. ——— Managing clerk—Agreement for remuneration—Agreement kept secret from client—Fiduciary relationship.* The plaintiff was managing clerk of a firm of Solicitors in Bombay, who were acting as Solicitors for one Cursondas in a suit which he (Cursondas) had filed in the High Court to recover a large amount of property. This suit was managed for Cursondas by a friend of his, Harivalabhdas Haridas (the defendant), and Cursondas agreed that, if he succeeded, he (Cursondas) would give Harivalabhdas a sum of R50,000. Harivalabhdas desired to obtain the assistance of the plaintiff in conducting Cursondas' suit, and agreed to give him a half share of the R50,000. The plaintiff alleged that Cursondas knew of this arrangement with the defendant at the time the R50,000 were promised, but the Court held that this was not proved. Subsequently, on the 10th January, 1893, Harivalabhdas gave the plaintiff a writing agreeing to pay him, as already agreed, a half share in case the litigation was successful. The suit was successful, and the plaintiff now sued Harivalabhdas for the R25,000 promised to him by the agreement of the 10th January, 1893. The Court found that the agreement by the defendant to give the plaintiff R25,000 out of the R50,000 promised by Cursondas was proved. Held, (i) that there was a fiduciary relationship existing between the plaintiff and Cursondas: the plaintiff was the managing clerk of the firm of Solicitors who were acting for Cursondas, and he was in charge of the suit; (ii) that, being in such relationship to Cursondas, the plaintiff had, by his agreement with defendant, attempted to acquire a benefit to the extent of R25,000 from Cursondas, who had no knowledge originally of the agreement and never subsequently acquiesced in it; (iii) that, under the above circumstances, the plaintiff could not recover anything under the agreement. Per JENKINS, C.J. If the transaction was not known to Cursondas (and this is the view we hold), it was vitiated as against him, so far as Bhai Jivanji (the plaintiff) is concerned, by reason of the secrecy of the profit sought; if it was known to him, and he was a party to it, the transaction was incapable of supporting Bhai Jivanji's claim, in that it was unconscionable, without consideration, and unsustainable by reason of the fiduciary relation in which he stood to the donor and the absence of independent advice. It is true that Cursondas is not now before us resisting the claim; but, in our opinion, the transaction which forms the foundation of the plaintiff's claim infringes so gravely those essential principles on which equity insists, that we cannot assist him in this Court. He cannot be permitted to profit indirectly by a transaction in which he could not have recovered from Cursondas directly. HARIVALAVHDAS HARIDAS v. BHAI JIVANJI (1902)

The Government revenue was conditioned to be paid by the grantee, or the person to whom the property descended, not directly to Government but through the Maharaja:—Held, that such property, though impartible, was not by reason of that fact inalienable. Notwithstanding its impartibility the subject of such a grant came, in the absence of any special custom regulating its enjoyment, within the principle laid down in Mayne's Hindu Law, 7th edition, page 415, paragraph 321, that "in cases governed by the Mitakshara Law a father may sell or mortgage, not only his own property in order to satisfy an antecedent debt of his own, not being of an illegal or immoral character . . . and such transactions may be enforced against his sons by a suit, and by proceedings in execution to which they are no parties." Semble: If the male descendant, in whom property so granted was for the time being vested, failed to pay the Government revenue as stipulated, and the Maharaja was himself obliged to discharge the claim of the Government, he might sue the defaulter for the amount so paid, and execute his decree by sale of the "babuana" property. A family custom to the effect that property granted for maintenance by a "babuana" grant was inalienable, was held to be not established. Absence of evidence of alienation without any evidence of facts which would make it probable that an alienation would have been made, cannot be accepted as proof of a custom of alienability. Sartaj Kuari v. *Deoraj Kuari, I. 6. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, ss. 190, 194—Remand of case for evidence—Judicial proceeding—Reasonable ground for remand not supported by sworn testimony. The proceeding in which it has to be determined whether an accused person should be admitted to bail by a Magistrate is a judicial proceeding, and, as such, cognizable by the High Court under s. 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1872. S. 194 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, must be read as a proviso to s. 190, and authorizes a Magistrate for reasonable cause to remand an accused person to jail without examining any witnesses. Where evidence was available, but it appeared necessary to the Magistrate to defer the examination of witnesses in order that further evidence might be produced (so that the enquiry, when commenced, might be continuous) :—Held, that such a reason recorded by the Magistrate, although not sworn to, justified a remand for five days and a further remand for four days. An accused person has a right to have the evidence against him recorded at as early a period as possible, and the fact that there is or may be a great body of evidence forthcoming against him is not a ground for detention for an inordinate period. Per KERNAN, J. When a Magistrate defers the examination of witnesses, adjourns the enquiry, and remands the prisoner under s. 194 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1872, he is bound to express clearly on the record the reasonable cause from which such action became necessary or advisable. BAIL—contd.

for consideration in determining matters of bail is whether there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused guilty of the offences charged. Other considerations must also arise in deciding this question, and one of these, which has always guided the English and Indian Courts, is whether there are any grounds for supposing that the accused would abscond. Under s. 497 of the Criminal Procedure Code an accused should ordinarily be released on substantial bail until reasonable grounds are made out for presuming his guilt. In re Johur Mull, 10 C. W. N. 1093, followed. If after a remand incriminating evidence is not adduced, and if the prosecution has already had sufficient time to adduce such evidence, the Court will reasonably conclude that such evidence is not forthcoming at the time. It should then under s. 497, sub-s. (2), release the accused on bail, whatever be the nature of the offence, though the preliminary enquiry should proceed. Manikam Mudali v. Queen, I. L. R. 6 Mad. 63, followed. Whether there are reasonable grounds or not must be decided judicially, that is to say, there should be some tangible evidence on the record on which, if unrebutted, the Court can conclude that the accused might be convicted. The statement by a witness that he has seen a certain act of an incriminating character done by the accused might be sufficient. But if there be no evidence whatsoever, or evidence of a very flimsy character on the face of it, the inference will be, after a reasonable time has elapsed since the beginning of the enquiry, that there are no reasonable grounds for supposing the accused to be guilty. The prosecution must, however, have a fair opportunity of adducing evidence of a really incriminating nature. At all events, the first information report should indicate with sufficient exactness, the character of the evidence likely to be forthcoming. The detention of an accused under trial is not intended to be penal, but its object is to secure attendance. The gravity of the offence and some evidence of its perpetration by the accused will, however, justify detention. JAMINI MULLICK v. EMPEROR (1908)

16. ——— Ground for granting or refusing—Remand to custody—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) ss. 344, 497 and 498. In exercising its discretion under s. 498 of the Criminal Procedure Code the High Court should not confine its attention only to the question, whether the prisoner is likely to abscond or not. There may be other circumstances, which may also affect the question of granting bail to accused persons charged with crimes of a grave character. If a person is accused before a Magistrate of a non-bailable offence then, unless he considers that there are no reasonable grounds for believing him to be guilty, he must refuse bail, though he may be certain that the accused will stand his trial. It is the right of an accused to demand that the charges against him should be tried without any unreasonable delay, and such delay will dispose the High Court to grant bail. Where a police officer of superior rank deposed that he had evidence which he believed, implicating the accused, and swore also to the truth of the first information, which alleged association of the accused in certain places and stated that the police had in their possession incriminating correspondence between the accused and a secret society in Calcutta, it was held that there was sufficient evidence for a remand under s. 344 of the Code, but that there had been unreasonable delay as regards the prisoners, who had been in custody for about six weeks, though not in the case of those who were in jail for three weeks. A bail-bond to produce the accused in the Sessions Court on every date fixed for the hearing of an appeal, or whenever required, is also complied with by the attendance of the accused during the hearing; and, though a requisition might be made by the Court of Session for their subsequent production in that Court, the sureties are not bound to produce them thereafter before the District Magistrate. A bail-bond should contain a clear proviso for the production of the accused before the Court or officer who is to take measures to secure their surrender and to re-commit them to jail in terms of the warrant. *General Rules and Circular Orders (Criminal) of the High Court, Chap. 2. ——— Entry in Pass book—Cheque lodged by customer for collection—Effect of entry in customer's pass-book of such cheque as if collected—Estoppel. Early in March, 1900, the Hope Mills Company purchased 600 bales of cotton from the plaintiff at R278 per candy, but, being unable to accept and pay for them, it was arranged between the Company and the plaintiffs that one Shridhan should take them over from the plaintiffs at R243-8-0 per candy (the price having fallen in the meantime), and that the Company should pay the plaintiffs the difference of price. In fulfilment of this agreement, the Company sent to the plaintiffs a cheque for R9,500, drawn by them on the Commercial Bank, being approximately the amount of the difference. This cheque was given to the plaintiffs on the 23rd March, 1900, but was post-dated the 3rd April. It was sent by the plaintiffs for collection to the defendant Bank (with which the plaintiffs had an account) on the next day (the 4th), at about 12 o'clock, together with the plaintiff's pass-book. The pass-book was asked for by the plaintiffs, and was returned to them at about 4-30 o'clock on the same day with R9,500 duly credited therein and initialled by one of the Bank's officers. On the same afternoon plaintiffs delivered 100 of the bales to Shridhan. On the next day (the 5th April) another 100 bales were delivered by the plaintiffs, to Shridhan, and after the delivery had proceeded thus far the plaintiffs at about 1-30 o'clock on the 5th April, received notice from the defendant Bank that the Company's cheque for R9,500 had been dishonoured. Subsequently to the receipt of this notice, the plaintiffs delivered the remaining 400 bales to Shridhan. The plaintiffs now sued the defendant Bank to recover the sum of R9,500, alleging that it was impossible to recover the amount from the drawers of the cheque (the Company), and contending that the defendant Bank, by entering the said amount in the plaintiffs' pass-book and delivering the said book to them, had led them to believe that the cheque had been duly honoured and the amount paid into their account, and they alleged that they would not have delivered the said bales to Shridhan if it had not been for the said representation by the Bank. They contended that the Bank was estopped from alleging the dishonour and non-payment of the cheque. Held, that the returning of the pass-book to the plaintiffs by the Bank, and the noting and initialling of the entry of R9,500 therein, was a representation by the Bank that it had received payment of the cheque and was prepared to give the plaintiffs credit for the amount. But held, upon the evidence, that the delivery of the bales by the plaintiffs to Shridhan was not made on the faith of such representation by the Bank. Held, further, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover, and that the Bank was not estopped by the entry in the pass-book from alleging the non-payment of the cheque. The cheque having been lodged by the plaintiffs for collection of the 4th April, the Bank in the ordinary course of business had until the next day to give notice of its dishonour, and the entry in the pass-book made on the 4th was not intended to be an acknowledgment of cash received. The Bank never intended the plaintiffs to act upon the entry in the pass-book, made on the 4th upon the faith of its being an entry of cash actually received, and, further, the cheque was a post-dated cheque, and the plaintiffs when lodging it clearly had doubts as to whether it would be honoured or not, while the defendant Bank had no knowledge of any circumstance justifying doubts as to its payment. The parties thus did not deal on equal terms, and the defendant Bank was therefore not bound by the entry in the pass-book as a receipt. Martin v. Morgan, 1 Bro. & B. 289, referred to. 4. ——— Banking company registered under Companies Act (VI of 1882)—Criminal breach of trust by banker—Payment of dividends dishonestly out of deposits—Directors—Manager and accountant—Person entrusted with property or with dominion over property—Agent—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 109, 191, 409, and 418—Cheating—Making false balance-sheet—Companies Act (VI of 1882), s. 215—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 239. When a bank takes a deposit from its customer, it takes it on the understanding that that deposit is not to be used to pay dividends to shareholders at a time when the bank is insolvent and cannot legally pay dividends. In the case of a bank registered under the Indian Companies Act as a company limited by shares, and governed by the regulations contained in table A in the first schedule to the Act, it was held that the directors had dominion over the property and the management of the funds of the bank; that they were bound not to pay dividends except out of the profits of the bank; and that, if they dishonestly, that is, knowingly and intentionally, paid dividends to the shareholders out of deposits when there were no profits, intending to cause gain to themselves or others to which they were not entitled, or to cause wrongful loss to other persons, they were guilty of criminal breach of trust as bankers under s. 409 of the Penal Code; but that the manager and the accountant or assistant manager were not, within the meaning of the section, persons who were entrusted with property or with dominion over property as bankers or agents, and therefore did not come directly under s. 409, though they might be guilty of abetment under s. 409 read with s. 109, by conspiring with the directors to commit criminal breach of trust if they assisted the directors to obtain the sanction of the shareholders to the illegal payment of dividends, and did so for the dishonest purpose of causing wrongful gain or wrongful loss. Whether the illegal payment of dividends under the circumstances stated could be regarded as causing wrongful loss to the bank as a corporate body. Quære: Whether moneys deposited in the bank by its customers and not in any way ear-marked could, after such deposit, be regarded as "property" of the depositors within the meaning of s. 409. Held, also, that if the directors, manager, and accountant dishonestly, that is, to obtain wrongful gain for themselves or to cause wrongful loss to others, put before the shareholders balance-sheets which they knew to be materially false and misleading and likely to mislead the public as to the condition of the bank, and concealed its true condition, and thereby induced depositors to allow their money to remain in deposit in the bank, they were guilty of cheating in the aggravated form made punishable by s. 418 of the Penal Code; and if they acted together to put forward such a false balance-sheet, they were guilty of abetment by conspiracy to cheat. Semble: The making of such a false balance-sheet is not an offence within s. 191 of the Penal Code, and, where it is made prior to the commencement of the winding up of the company, is not an offence within s. 215 of the Companies Act (VI of 1882). A balance-sheet of a company under the Indian Companies Act must be a true balance-sheet, in the sense that it must represent the actual state of the company's assets and liabilities. If it falsely states the condition of the company, it is a false balance-sheet, though it follows the accounts as shown in the books of the company, and correctly represents what is in the books. A balance-sheet which showed all the debts owing to the company, amounting to R28 lakhs, under the head of assets, without specifying in accordance with the form of balance-sheet annexed to table A, which of such debts were good and secured, which good and unsecured, and which considered bad and doubtful, and also showed a divisible balance of profits amounting to R19,000, the facts being that out of the R28 lakhs some R13 lakhs were bad and irrecoverable, and that the capital, reserve fund, and other provision for bad debts had been lost, and that the company, instead of making profits, was, and long had been, insolvent, was found to be false and misleading. Having regard to the nature of the charges above referred to, the Court, under s. 239 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, rejected an application by the defence that the accused should be tried separately. 3. ——— Right of client to sue for return of fee when barrister was absent—Advocate and client. Taking it that the rule of English law, that the relation of counsel or advocate and client creates mutual incapacity to make a binding contract of hiring and service, either express or implied, governs the relation of advocate and client generally in this country, there must be the relation of advocate and client to give rise to the incapacity, and the incapacity is strictly confined to contracts relating to service as an advocate in litigation and matters ancillary to such service. The degree of barrister is but one of the qualifications for admission and enrolment as an advocate of the High Court. Where the defendant, a barrister who was not admitted an advocate of the High Court, or specially authorized to plead in the superior Court, accepted a vakalatnamah from the plaintiff to defend him upon a charge pending in the Session Court, and the defendant failed to appear on the day to which the trial of the plaintiff was adjourned, and the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover the amount of the fee paid:—Held, that the suit was maintainable. Notwithstanding that a transaction purported to be a sale and a price was mentioned in the conveyance, it was held on the evidence to be a gift and not a sale—the question being regarded as purely one of intention. When transfers of property made by a mother in favour of a daughter were challenged on the ground of the unsoundness of mind of the donor, but no case of undue influence exercised by the donee on the donor was raised in the pleadings, and evidence was given with reference to the question of unsoundness of mind only. Held, that the question of undue influence could not properly be discussed and considered upon such evidence. The mere relation of daughter to mother in itself suggests nothing in the way of special influence or control. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee did not treat as purdanashin a lady, who had no objection to communicate, when necessary, in matters of business, with men other than members of her own family, who was able to go to Court to give evidence and to attend at the Registrar's office in person to acknowledge her deeds for the purpose of registration. II, Articles 91, 144—Deed declared inoperative and fraudulent.* In order to defeat the claim of an equitable mortgagee of certain property, the predecessor in title of the respondent and co-member with him of a joint Hindu family executed on 11th June 1895, what purported to be a deed of sale of the property in favour of the predecessor in title of the appellant. The claim, however, was decreed, the Court finding that the vendee under the alleged deed of sale was aware of the equitable mortgage, when the deed was executed ; and the decree was satisfied by money raised on the security of the property by the vendee. In a suit by the respondent against the appellant to have it declared that the deed of 11th June 1895, was merely a benami transaction, and recover possession of the property, it was found on the facts that the deed was benami and fraudulent and inoperative as against the plaintiff. Held, that the purpose of the fraud not having been effected, there was nothing to prevent the plaintiff from repudiating the transaction as being benami and recovering possession of the property. Taylor v. *Bowers, L. 1. GENERAL CASES.

1. ——— Custom—Recognition of benami transactions. Benami transactions are a custom of the country, and must be recognized till otherwise ordered by law. Meanwhile the extent of their compatibility with an honest purchase depends upon the peculiar circumstances of each case. KALLY MOHUN PAL v. BHOLANATH CHAKLADAR.
7 W. R. 138

2. ——— Presumption as to ownership. The habit of holding land benami, though inveterate in India, does not justify the Courts in making every presumption against apparent ownership. JUDOONATH BOSE v. SHUMSOONNISSA BEGUM BUSLOOR RUHEEM v. SHUMSOONNISSA BEGUM . 8 W. R. P. C. 3: 11 Moo. I. A. 551

3. ——— Presumption—Evidence justifying benami purchase. Evidence raising presumption of purchase at a sale in execution being made benami for the judgment-debtor discussed. RAM CHUNDER BYSACK v. DINO NATH SURMA SIRKAR
5 C. L. R. 470

4. ——— Purchase of property by manager of joint family property. When the manager of a joint Hindu family re-purchases benami property sold for arrears of revenue, the presumption is that the property so purchased is held by him for the benefit of the joint family. KALEE DOSS MOOKERJEE v. MOTHOORANATH BANERJEE . . . . 5 W. R. 154

5. _____ Use of farzi name. In the case of a benami purchase, the mere use of the farzi name is sufficiently disposed of if the party whose name is used sets up no claim, and if there appears to have been long-continued possession on the part of the person claiming to be the beneficial owner. HOYMOBUTTY DASSEE v. SREEKISSEN NUNDY . . . 14 W. R. 58

6. _____ Purchase by father in name of son. Where the father of a joint Hindu family purchases property in the name of his minor son, the presumption is that it is a benami purchase by the father on whose death it becomes the property of the family. BHAGBUT CHUNDER DEY v. HURO GOBIND PAL . 20 W. R. 269

7. _____ Lease taken in name of wife and son. Where a father obtained, once and again, a lease in the name of his wife and son, paying the consideration-money out of his own funds, and on the decease of his wife obtained the lease in the joint names of the son and of his daughter by the deceased, and it was found that latterly the possession was not with the father:—Held, that there was no error in law in the Judge's coming to the conclusion that the property was not intended by the father for his own benefit, but was given to his wife and children for their maintenance. ZEEMUT ALI v. ALIMOONISSA . . . . 10 W. R. 277

8. _____ Purchase in the name of Hindu wife. The question for decision was whether a purchase in 1842, in the name of a Hindu wife of an interest in part of her husband's ancestral estate, was for herself, or for her husband, her name being used benami for him. The High Court, at the hearing in appeal, considered certain previous decisions in cases arising out of benami transactions. But in arriving at its conclusion, which was that the property was the wife's, it proceeded entirely on the evidence in the particular case. The judgment of the Judicial Committee, which also went upon the evidence, was, on the contrary, that the husband was, in fact, the purchaser, the purchase being benami in his wife's name. 9. _____ Purchase by husband in name of wife—Claim by husband when property is attached. A husband who puts his wife into the position of being the true owner of an estate and allows her to deal with the world as the true owner, deprives himself of the right to set up, or rely on, his benami title. NIDHEE SINGH v. BISSONATH DOSS . . . . . 24 W. R. 79

10. _____ Property of husband bought from wife. Where property is bought from a wife as the ostensible owner, the husband consenting to the sale, and the transaction is bonâ fide on the part of the purchaser for a consideration, the purchase is a good one, even if the property is not the wife's, but the husband's. GOLAM RUSSOOL v. ABDOOL RUHEEM.

11. _____ Property of husband standing in name of wife. Certain property standing in the name of a wife was mortgaged by her. The mortgage debt was paid off. The mortgagee, having a decree against the husband, attached and sold the property. Held, that, though payment of the mortgage debt by the wife might have given her a lien on the property to the extent of any money paid by her out of her own fund, the mortgagee's acting on the wife's assertion of title did not prevent him, when he subsequently discovered that the property was really the deceased husband's, from making it available for the satisfaction of his decree against the husband. AMEEROONISSA BEEBEE v. BENODE RAM SEIN . . . 2 W. R. 29

12. _____ Property acquired by Mahomedan married woman. Where property is acquired by a Mahomedan lady living in a state of wedlock, and also by her legitimate daughter, a very small amount of evidence would suffice to dispose of the presumption arising from the fact of title deeds being with the lady, against the supposition of a benami purchase. KUDEERUN v. LALLUN

13. _____ Purchase in name of daughters—Right of bonâ fide purchaser from daughter. A, having two daughters, B and C, granted a patni talukh of certain lands in his zamindari to them in their infancy, and transacted the business connected therewith as manager down to the time of his death. After his death, B sold her interest to her sister C, and C sold the patni talukh to D. The heirs of A brought a suit against D for the lands. Held, that the lower Court might, upon these facts, infer that the grant of the patni talukh by A to his daughters was by way of provision for them, and that it was not a case in which the daughters held benami for the father. Secondly, that even if it were so, D, acquiring by a bonâ fide purchase and without notice, had a good title against the heirs of A, since they claimed through the person by whose act the apparent ownership was vested in his vendor. 15. ——— Benami purchase —Alienation by benamidar. Property bought by P in the name of S was mortgaged by P through his benamidar S by conditional sale to L, who, dying after foreclosure, left it in possession of his widows defendants Nos. 3 and 4, from whom plaintiff purchased it at a sale in execution of a decree against them. Defendants Nos. 1 and 2 resisted on the ground that S's conditional sale did not pass the rights and interest of P, which they bought at an auction sale in execution of a decree against P. Held, that the decree of foreclosure was good and binding against Nos. 1 and 2, unless they could show fraud. If property is purchased in the name of a benamidar, and the indicia of ownership are placed in his hands, the true owner can only get rid of the effect of an alienation by showing that it was made without his acquiescence, and the purchaser took with notice of the fact. BHUGWAN DOSS v. UPOOCH SINGH . 10 W. R. 185

16. ——— Benami possession. Where the property belonging to one family is conveyed to another by a deed of such a nature as secures the continuance of the profits to the former, the possession by the latter must be held to be on behalf of the former, until by some unequivocal act they show a distinct intention to hold on their own behalf. 17. ——— Purchaser at execution-sale—Representative—Mortgage by alleged benamidar—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115 —Onus of proof. E, being in possession of the documents of title, mortgaged land to the plaintiff. E and his father A borrowed money from one R, who obtained a decree against A, and purchased the land at the execution-sale. In suit for foreclosure of the plaintiffs mortgage against E and R, the lower Courts held that A was the true owner, but the lower Appellate Court did not decide whether the plaintiff's mortgage was a valid transaction. Held, on second appeal, that R acquired the property adversely to A and not as his representative, and that there was no estoppel against him. Dinendranath Sannial v. Ramkumar Ghose, I. L. R. 7 Calc. 107 : L. R. 8 I. A. 65, and Lala Parbhu Lal v. Mylne, I. L. R. 14 Calc. 401, followed. Held, further, that it was not necessary to decide whether the plaintiff's mortgage was valid as against A, the plaintiff not having raised the question in the lower Courts, but that, assuming the mortgage to be valid, the onus did not lie upon R to prove that the mortgage was not binding upon A. Bhugwan Doss v. *Upooch Singh, 10 W. 18. ——— Benami purchase —Alienation by benamidar—Consent of true owner—Equitable rights of purchaser. Where a benamidar purchased property with moneys borrowed from the plaintiff, and afterwards mortgaged the purchased property to the plaintiff to secure the debt, the plaintiff being aware of the benami character of the title, and the real purchaser being cognizant of the mortgage : Held, in a suit against the benamidar and the beneficial owner, that even if the mortgagor had not created a valid hypothecation of the property still the plaintiff was entitled in equity to a declaration that the sums advanced with interest were a charge thereon. SARJU PARSHAD v. BIR BHADDAR SEWAK PANDAY

19. ——— Covenants by benamidar—Effect of, on beneficial owners. All the covenants made by a benamidar in the sale of a property are not necessarily binding upon the true owners, though there may be circumstances under which a person whose name does not appear upon a contract may be liable to perform its conditions. BISSESSUREE DEBIA v. GOVIND PERSHAD TEWAREE

20. ——— Covenant for quiet enjoyment—Vendor and purchaser—Suit for purchase money. Land forming part of a zamindari was brought to sale in execution of a decree, and was purchased by A benami for the zamindarni. After the zamindarni's death, B, her son and supposed heir, together with A, sold the land under a conveyance, which contained a joint covenant to remove any hindrance in the vendee's enjoyment of the land. Persons claiming under the lawful successor of the deceased zamindarni obtained an ejectment decree against the representatives of the vendee, then deceased, and they were permitted to retain possession only on a payment made to the decree-holders. They now sued A and B for the amount of the purchase-money paid on the conveyance and the costs incurred in the ejectment suit. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the decree sought by them against A notwithstanding that he was a benamidar merely. 21. ——— Assignment of decree—Allegation of benami transaction. Before shutting out a decree-holder who has taken by assignment, on the ground that he is a mere benami-holder from one of the judgment-debtors, it is necessary to be very careful, and to ascertain beyond a doubt that the fact is so. 23. ——— Evidence of ownership—Title to property seized in execution—Evidence—Suspicion. In determining the right to property seized in execution, the Court must not declare a person claiming as purchaser to be a benamidar for the debtor upon suspicion merely, but its decision must rest upon legal grounds established by legal testimony. 24. ——— Breach of covenant—Cause of action—Plaint—Consent of benamidar. The plaint alleged that the three first defendants with a brother, since deceased, purchased a patni mehal therein described; that the same was thereafter sold for arrears of rent, and purchased by the said three defendants with their own funds; but that the collector, in compliance with their petition, entered the name of their mother, the fourth defendant, as the purchaser. The plaint then alleged a subsequent sale by the three first defendants to the plaintiff; that they, the said defendants, caused a kobala to be executed by the fourth defendant, and that they being the real owners, became witnesses to the deed, and received the whole of the consideration-money, and prayed by reason of ouster and disturbance, alleged for damages against all the defendants for breach of the following covenant contained in the kobala: "If any one making any objection to the sale by me of the said mehal give you trouble in any way, then I will put matters straight. If I fail to do so, I will return the consideration-money. If I do not return it, you will realize it by means of a suit." The Civil Judge in whose Court the plaint was filed held that no cause of action was shown, and the High Court on appeal remanded the case to try whether there had been the ouster and disturbance alleged, and whether, under the circumstances, they constituted a breach of the contract. The High Court, however, dismissed the suit against the three first defendants, holding that the mother only was bound by the contract. Held, by the Privy Council, that the plaint disclosed a cause of action against all the defendants, and that the case must be remanded accordingly. One issue raised by the plaint was whether the kobala was really entered into by the mother as the agent and on behalf of the three first defendants, and by their authority. 25. ——— Suit on bond executed benami—Money lent by wife for husband.—Where a woman sues to recover money advanced on a bond executed in her name, it is open to the obligor to plead that the money was not lent by the woman, but that the bond was merely an acknowledgment of indebtedness from him to her husband. BHOOBUNESSUR ROY CHOWDHRY v. JUGGESSUREE CHOWDHRANI . 22 W. R. 413

26. ——— Money lent by person other than holder of bond. In a suit upon a bond where defendant pleads that the bond, though executed in the name of the plaintiff, was really executed in favour of a third party, if it is found that plaintiff is not the real holder of the bond, the suit must be dismissed. JUDOONAUTH DEY v. GIRIJA BHOOSUN MITTER . . 23 W. R. 446

27. ——— Benami purchase by judgment-debtor of property subject to mortgage decree—Effect of. P L brought a suit against H, and, while it was pending, executed a bond in favour of R C hypothecating the property in dispute. The suit was dismissed with costs, and another suit was brought by one P M upon the bond, and, while it was pending, the property in dispute was sold in execution of H's decree for costs and purchased by S. The day after this, i.e., on 10th November 1868, P M obtained a mortgage decree, which he transferred to R B, who executed it and attached the property in dispute when S intervened objecting that the mortgage, the mortgage decree, and the transfer of the decree were all fictitious and collusive, and brought about by P L. This objection having been rejected, a suit was brought on the same ground against R B, P M, and the widow of P L to establish S's rights and to stop the pending sale. The property was, however, sold and purchased by D, who was then made a defendant in the suit. Both the lower Courts found that R B was a benamidar for P L, and upheld the title of S in preference to that of D. Held, on the principle of In re Suroop Chunder Hazra, B. L. R., Sup. Vol., 938: 9 W. R. 230,—viz., that the purchase by a judgment-debtor extinguishes the decree,—that the same result followed in a benami transaction when the decree was a mortgage decree, and, therefore, although S by virtue of his auction-purchase was not entitled to the property in dispute, yet he was entitled to a declaration that so far as the amount of his purchase-money went to satisfy the decree of November 1868, it should be considered a charge on the property. 28. ——— Benami transfer—Mutation of names in settlement record. A transfer from a husband of a share in a village was not formally carried out otherwise than by its being evidenced by mutation of names in the settlement record; and a son, claiming as his father's heir, alleged that his mother's name was only used benami by the father. Held, that a finding that such mutation was not for the purpose of putting the property into the name of the wife benami for the husband, but for her own benefit, was substantially correct. 29. ——— Person allowing property to be purchased benami—Sale by ostensible owner. If a person allows property to be purchased for him in the name of another, and takes no steps to show to the world that he is the owner, he must make out a clear right to relief against any one who purchases that property bonâ fide from the ostensible owner. 30. ——— Suit on bond, the consideration for which was advanced benami—Right of assignee of bond. Where, in a bond given by A to secure the repayment of money lent by B to A, it is stated that the money was lent by C, it is no answer to a suit on the bond, brought against A by a person who has purchased the bond from C bonâ fide, without notice, that the money advanced belonged to A. 31. ——— Benamidar, right of, to sue in his own name—Purchase by a non-agriculturist in name of an agriculturist—Suit by benamidar for redemption—Court-fees payable as if real purchaser was plaintiff—Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (Act XVII of 1879). Where a purchase is made benami and a suit is brought by the benamidar in order that the real purchaser may escape the consequences to which the latter would be liable if he purchased and sued in his own name, the Court will look behind the record to see who the real purchaser is. A benamidar may maintain a suit in his own name, but the Court will put the defendant in the same position as if the real purchaser were the actual plaintiff. One D, an agriculturist, purchased certain land benami for K, a non-agriculturist, and brought a suit for redemption under the provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act. Under the notification of the Government of India, No. 2092, dated the 29th July 1881, the fees in case of suits by, agriculturists for redemption were remitted, and the plaintiff, therefore, paid no stamp duty on the plaint. Held, that D might maintain the suit in his own name, but must pay the usual stamp fees, and that the suit should proceed as an ordinary suit, as though K was the nominal as well as the real plaintiff. 35. ——— Benami deed executed with intention to defraud creditor—Relief against fraudulent benami deeds executed by predecessor in title. K executed in 1850 four benami documents with intent to defeat the claim of his employer on account of money embezzled by him: two of the documents were hibas (deeds of gift) in favour of P, his elder wife, in respect of a moiety of properties 1, 2, and 3; and two were kobalas (conveyances) in favour of G, that wife's brother, in respect of the other moiety of those properties. K remained in possession of the properties till his death in 1860. After his death P remained in possession of the properties 1, 2, and 3, and S, the younger widow, remained in possession of other properties. In November P executed, in respect of the 8 annas of the properties covered by the hibas, a kobala in favour of G's son, then a minor. S died in 1868, and P died in 1871. A daughter of K by S succeeded them, and that daughter died in August 1882. In a suit brought by a son of that daughter on 4th January 1893 for the recovery (inter alia) of possession of his share of properties 1, 2, and 3 from G's son, with mesne profits and for a declaration that the deeds executed by K were colourable transactions, and that the kobala executed by P was not valid and binding:—Held, as to the contention that plaintiff was not entitled to be relieved against the consequences of the fraud of his predecessors in title, that the balance of authority is decidedly in favour of the proposition that it is always open to a party to show that a document simply executed, but not carried into effect, is a benami and colourable document, and to recover possession of property against the party claiming under such document.

The transferee then conveyed the property to a third party, who took possession. Held, following the case of Kali Charan Pal v. *Rasik Lal Pal, I. L. 2. SOURCE OF PURCHASE-MONEY.

1. ——— Source of purchase-money —Evidence of beneficial ownership. It is not a principle of law that the issue to be framed in a case of benami purchase is from what source the purchase-money came, though that is an excellent criterion and test for determining the character of the purchase. BRIJO BEHAREE SINGH v. WAJED HOSSEIN . . . . 14 W. R. 372

2. ——— Evidence of beneficial ownership. In cases of benami purchase in India, the criterion of beneficial ownership is the source from which the purchase-money is derived. GOPEEKRIST GOSSAIN v. GUNGAPERSAUD GOSSAIN 6 Moo. I. A. 53

AKBUR ALI v. MAHOMED FAIZ BUKSH 15 W. R. 12

3. ——— Possession. In coming to a conclusion in a case of a benami purchase, the circumstances and probabilities are to be carefully considered and weighed,—e.g., the object of the purchase, whether the purchase-money really belonged to the purchasers, and whether possession was taken after purchase; and, if not, why possession was not taken. BHOOBUN MOHUN BURRAL v. NAGOREE DOSSIA . 15 W. R. 15

4. ——— Proof of consideration. Where a deed of sale is executed benami under circumstances which suggest an intention to defraud creditors, it is not sufficient that the sale was formally made and the deed duly registered; the Court must be satisfied as to consideration having actually passed from the purchaser to the former owner, and as to the source from which the purchase-money was derived. by her bonâ fide in the name of her son, but with her own funds :—Held, that this case could not be judged by the criterion laid down by the Privy Council in the case of Gossain v. Gossain, *6 Moo. 7. ——— Hindu and Mahomedan Law—Presumption. In cases where the question is, whether property bought and held in the name of another than the party claiming as the real purchaser is the property of that other or merely bought and held in his name (benami) for the claimant, the criterion is to consider from what source the purchase-money came ; the presumption is, that a purchase made with the money of A in the name of B is for the benefit of A ; and where the purchase is by a father, whether Mahomedan or Hindu, in the name of his son, there is no presumption of an advancement in favour of the son. Upon the facts, the decision of the Court below reversed. AZHAR ALI v. ALTAF FATIMA 4 B. L. R. P. C. 1 : 13 W. R. P. C. 1

8. ——— Benami purchase—Whether property was held benami for the claimant or was a gift to the holder—Evidence of ownership—Source of purchase-money. The claimant, having supplied the purchase-money on the sale of the village in suit, took the transfer by sale-deed in the name of the first defendant, who remained in possession of it, receiving rents. The claim was for proprietary possession by the purchaser on the ground that the property was held benami for him. The first Court decreed the claim. The Appellate Court reversed this decision. The first Court had attributed too much to the fact that the plaintiff had supplied the purchase-money—an important fact in most of the cases raising the question of benami, or not benami, but not the only test of ownership. Here the source of that money was consistent with the claimant's having, as the defence alleged, intended to make a gift of the property to the holder of it ; and the right inference from the fact was that it was not held benami for the claimant, but belonged to the defendant. 9. ——— Apparent title in one person—Beneficial title in another, how proved—Burden of proof—Acquisition out of funds supplied by alleged beneficiary, necessity to prove—Possession presumption of title from—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 21, 110—Admission. Plaintiffs brought this suit to recover a certain coffee garden from their paternal uncle, the defendant. Plaintiffs' father and the defendant had separated and partitioned their ancestral property in 1870, but after their father's death in 1886, the plaintiffs, who were young, had lived in the defendant's protection. The plaintiffs' case was that the disputed garden had belonged to their father. Previous to the suit one of the plaintiffs alone, but describing himself as the guardian of his minor brother, had executed a sale deed in favour of the defendant, in which the disputed property was described as having been enjoyed by plaintiffs' father and as belonging to the plaintiffs after his death. It was nobody's case that this was a real sale. The High Court in decreeing the suit in plaintiffs' favour relied inter aliâ on this document as containing an important admission of plaintiffs' title in the property : Held, that the High Court was right in so using the document ; that in order to displace this apparent title in the plaintiffs and to establish a beneficial title in himself, it was incumbent upon the defendant to show by satisfactory evidence that the funds, out of which the graden was purchased and developed, were his own funds. Among Hindus the grounds against assuming advancement are specially unfavourable to the claim of a widow to an absolute estate. BAI MOTIVAHOO v. PURSHOTAM DAYAL (1905) . I. L. R. 29 Bom. 306

3. ONUS OF PROOF.

1. ——— Onus probandi—Purchase by member of joint Hindu family in name of son—Presumption—Conveyance in English form. Where a purchase of real estate is made by a Hindu in the name of one of his sons, the presumption of the Hindu law is in favour of its being a benami purchase, and the burden of proof lies on the party in whose name it was purchased to prove that he was solely entitled to the legal and beneficial interest in such purchased estate. Purchase of a talukh in Bengal by a Hindu in his eldest son's name, the conveyance, though in the English form of lease and release, held to be a benami purchase, and the son in whose name it was purchased declared to be

2. ——— Registration of name. The benami system being one of the recognized institutions of the country, a purchaser does not discharge himself of the onus which lies upon him, by looking only to the apparent title. Nor is the onus discharged by the mere fact of the name of the defendant's vendor being alone registered in the zamindar's books as the exclusive owner of the patni, or of the vendor only being sued by the zamindar for the rent of the patni. JEEBUNISAS v. UMUL CHUNDRA CHACKLANUVIS 18 W. R. 151

7. ——— Property purchased at sale in execution of decree. A decree-holder, in execution of his decree, put up for sale certain property of his judgment-debtor which was purchased by plaintiff ostensibly on his own account. Having reason, however, to believe that the purchase was benami for the judgment-debtor, the decree-holder again took out execution against the same property and advertised it for sale. Plaintiff intervened, but his objections were disallowed by the Court, which found the judgment-debtor in bonâ fide possession on his own account. The property was then sold, and one of the defendants bought it. Plaintiff then sued to have the execution proceedings set aside, and to have it declared that the property had been bought on his own account and with his own money. Held, that the onus of proof lay on the plaintiff. 8. ——— Presumption—Creditors claiming against benamidar—Evidence— Although a purchase by a Mahomedan with his own money of an estate in the name of his son raises a presumption of the son's name being used benami for his father, proof that the father's object was to affect the ordinary rule of succession as from him to that property is sufficient to give, as respects strangers, a title to the son independent of, and adverse to, the father. Where bonâ fide creditors of the ostensible owner of property are claimants on that property, the Court will require strict proof on the part of any one seeking to have it declared that he held it only benami. 9. ——— Proof of beneficial ownership—Presumption from possession on receipt of rents. Where there are benami transactions, and the question is who is the real owner, the actual possession on receipt of the rents of the property is most important. In a suit against a purchaser at a sale under Act XI of 1859, s 13, the plaintiff claimed to have incumbrance by virtue of two mokurari pottahs, executed by the heirs of the last of a series of benamidars, and it appearing that the last benamidar had actual ownership of one-fourth of the property comprised therein:—Held, that the incumbrance was good to the extent of such fourth. Out of the produce she bought properties for her nephew in the name of other parties. Held, under the circumstances, that the purchased property, on her death, went to the nephew, and not to the step-son as heir of her husband. Although the defendant, by his written statement, denied the fact of the purchases being with the widow's money, and it was proved that they were made with her money:—Held, that this did not remove from the plaintiff the burden of proving that the purchases were made benami for her. 11. ——— Creditors of benamidar, right of—Credit given to benamidar in good faith. Certain property having been attached in execution of a decree against B, the plaintiff instituted a suit claiming the property and alleging that B was his benamidar. The allegation was established. It was contended that the public and the creditor at whose instance the attachment was made in execution of a decree for money advanced to B had been misled by the benami transaction. Held, that the creditor was bound to prove that he had actually advanced the money believing in good faith that the property belonged to B. 12. ——— Benami purchase by Hindu or Mahomedan—Property bought by a father in his son's name—Advancement—Presumption—Evidence—Nature of evidence to rebut. When purchase is made by a Hindu or a Mahomedan in the name of his son, the presumption is in favour of its being a benami purchase; and it lies on the party in whose name it was purchased to prove that he is solely entitled to the legal and beneficial interest in the estate. When the rights of creditors are in issue in such a transaction, very strict proof of the nature of the transaction should be required from the objector to such rights, and the burden of proof lies with more than ordinary weight on the person alleging that the purchase was intended for the benefit of the son. NAGINBHAI v. ABDULLA

Afterwards B conveyed his share to E and delivered D's kabuliat to him, the conveyance which was registered reciting payment of the consideration. Subsequently E sold the share to C for valuable consideration. In a suit brought by C for possession, B alleged that his conveyance to E was a benami transaction of which C was cognizant. Held, that the onus of showing that was on B, and that, primâ facie, C was justified in supposing that E had a good title to convey. In the absence of proof sufficient to establish the title of H B, and to show that the money was advanced by H B, the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. BHAWUN DOSS v. MAHOMED HOSSEIN also a small sum of money. In after years the husband, now plaintiff, and the wife, defendant, contested which of the two was the real purchaser. Held, that the burden of proving that the mortgagee gave the consideration for the sale was upon him at the outset, as he claimed contrary to the tenor of the admitted document, which burden had been discharged by his evidence that the substantial consideration for the sale by the mortgagors was the extinction of the mortgage debt due to him. This proof shifted on to the wife the burden of showing that this extinction was effected by her money or of showing that she had continuous possession in accordance with the sale deed. She did not prove that any money was paid by her, either to the vendors or to the mortgagee; nor was there such an amount of possession proved as affected the question either way. 11. ——— Suit to oust certified purchaser. A purchased a mehal in the name of B's brother, and obtained possession. He then sued B, who was acting as his tahsildar, for an account and for delivery of certain papers connected with that mehal. Held, that the terms of s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 did not apply to bar the suit. 12. ——— Penal section, Construction of—Suit to oust an assignee from a certified purchaser—Maintainability of suit. Plaintiff instructed defendant No. 2 to purchase a certain property at a revenue sale on his behalf; defendant No. 2 purchased it in his own name, but with the money of the plaintiff, and afterwards agreed to execute a deed of release in favour of plaintiff, but without doing that he fraudulently executed a deed of sale in favour of defendant No. 1, who had notice of plaintiff's title. In a suit by plaintiff for recovery of possession and declaration of title of the property it was contended that s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 was a bar. Held per MACLEAN, C.J., and GHOSE, J., that s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 is a penal section and ought to be construed strictly and literally, and in construing the section the Court ought not to go beyond the strict letter of the language used or to put a construction upon that language which would have the effect of materially extending the operation of the section. Held, further, by MACLEAN, C J., that s. 36 is no bar to the suit, inasmuch as this is not a suit "to oust the certified purchaser," but to oust somebody else, although he claims through the former; and the true ground upon which the suit is based is the fraud of defendant No. 2, of which defendant No. 1 had notice. Held per GHOSE, J., that the suit might well be regarded as based upon the ground of fraud, and in this view of the matter the case falls outside the provisions of s. 36 of the Revenue Sale Law. Buhuns Kowur v. Lalla Beharee Lall, 14 Moo. I. A. 496, Lokhee Narain Roy Chowdhry v. Kalypuddo Bandopadhya, L. R. 2 I. A. 154, Toondun Singh v. Pokhnarain Singh, L. R. 1 I. A. 342, referred to. Per TREVELYAN, J. (dissenting)— S. 36 of Act XI of 1859 applies just as much to a suit to oust the assignee of a certified purchaser as it does to a suit to oust that purchaser. The Legislature, in enacting s. 36, intended to give to a certified purchaser in possession a statutory title against the person, if any, on whose behalf he had purchased, and therefore this protection should devolve upon his heir or assignee who would take a title in continuation of that of the certified purchaser. 13. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 317—Sale for arrears of revenue—Act XI of 1859, s. 36—Certified purchaser, suit against. A, the certified purchaser of a talukh at a sale held under the provisions of Act XI of 1859 for arrears of revenue, and who had obtained symbolical possession, had at the time of the sale agreed with B, the former owner of the talukh, to re-convey to him (B) after the sale had been completed. In a suit by B to compel specific performance of the contract, alleging that he had never quitted actual possession of the talukh, objection was taken that the suit was not maintainable under s. 36 of Act XI of 1859 and s. 317 of Act XIV of 1882. Held, that the suit, not being one to oust the certified purchaser from possession, was not barred by s. 36; and that neither was it barred by s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code, that section applying only to sales in execution of decrees of Civil Courts held under the Procedure Code. tion sale. Defendant in possession not only denied plaintiff's title, but that of his vendor, whose purchase was clearly fraudulent, being made in collusion with the judgment-debtor to defraud creditors. Held, that s. 260, Act VIII of 1859, did not prohibit a defendant under such circumstances from questioning the plaintiff's title; that it provided for the dismissal of a suit brought to question the title of the certified purchaser, but did not prohibit a defendant from questioning that title when the auction-purchaser sought to oust him. KHYRAT ALI v. SYFULLAH KHAN . 8 W. R. 130

19. _____ Previous possession of party claiming to be the real purchaser. The correct interpretation of s. 260, Act VIII of 1859, is to the effect that a suit by a party claiming to be the real purchaser of immoveable property sold in execution of a decree cannot be brought aganst the certified auction-purchaser, even though the claimant has had previous possession. 20. _____ Certified purchase—Purchaser under second sale in execution of decree. The certified purchaser of property which had been a second time attached and sold in the execution of a decree as the property of the judgment-debtors sued to be confirmed in possession of the property by virtue of his certificate of sale and to obtain the cancelment of the second sale and the order disallowing his objections to that sale. Held, that the provisions of s. 260 of Act VIII of 1859 did not prohibit the consideration of the circumstances of the first sale, when the question for determination was whether, at the time of the second attachment, the judgment-debtors were in possession as owners of the property, or merely as lessees of the certified purchaser. GANESH PRESHAD v. SHEO CHURUN LALL 6 N. W. 197

21. _____ Suit by decree-holder against certified purchaser. S. 260 of Act VIII of 1859 does not preclude the Courts from entertaining a suit brought by a decree-holder against the certified purchaser of property to bring the property to sale in execution of his decree as the property of his judgment-debtor, on the allegation that the certified purchaser had purchased the property benami for the judgment-debtor, who had remained in possession as owner from the date of purchase, and was in possession as such at the time of attachment. SOHUN LALL v. LALA GYA PERSHAD 6 N. W. 265

22. _____ Onus probandi. Where plaintiff, as heir of the ostensible auction-purchaser, sued to oust defendant, who had been twelve years in possession, and the latter pleaded that the sale was made benami:—Held, that the long possession would go to prove the truth of defendant's allegation that the auction-purchaser was merely a trustee for him, and it would be for plaintiff to show that his ancestor paid for the purchased property. Held, that ss. 259 and 260, Act VIII of 1859, did not apply, as the sale was made before that law came into operation. ZOOLFEKAR ALI v. MAHOMED TUKEE . . . . . 9 W. R. 438

23. _____ Certified purchaser. The purchaser of immoveable property, sold in execution of a decree of a Civil Court, got a certificate under s. 259 of Act VIII of 1859, and subsequently sued for possession of that which he had purchased. Held, that the defendant (who was in possession) was by s. 260 debarred from pleading that he himself was the real purchaser, and that the purchase was made benami for him in the name of the plaintiff, the "certified purchaser." 24. _____ Certified purchaser—Certificate of sale, form of—Liability of property to son's creditors. There is nothing fraudulent or illegal in a father making provision that property over which he has complete control shall not go into the hands of an insolvent son; but a benami conveyance to female members, the father continuing the absolute and uncontrolled owner during his life, and the son entering into possession after his death, cannot exclude the claim of the son's creditors. Where a purchaser at a sale in execution was named in the sale certificate as "mother and guardian of her infant son," the title to the property was held to be vested by the certificate in the minor absolutely. HEMANGINEE DOSSEE v. JOGENDRO NARAIN ROY . . . . 12 W. R. 236

27. ——— Right of suit—Fraud. J and B borrowed a sum of money on a mortgage of property. Shortly after this they granted a mokurari of the property to plaintiff and afterwards sold their rights as proprietors to one R R. Subsequently to this the mortgagee brought a suit against the mortgagors, and obtained a decree declaring the property liable to be sold in satisfaction of his debt. The property was accordingly sold in execution and purchased by one R D, and the sale-proceeds were made over to the judgment-creditor. Plaintiff as mokuraridar now sues to obtain possession on the ground that, the debt being paid off, the mortgage is no longer in existence. The Judge having found that the purchase by R D was not bonâ fide, but for and on the part of R R., who was in actual possession:—Held, that s. 260 of the Civil of Code Procedure was no bar to the suit, the ground of fraud alone giving plaintiff sufficient right to question the legality of the sale. SHAMA KESHEE v. RAJ KISHORE . . 14 W. R. 179

28. ——— Suit against certified purchaser. If a person is the person to whom under s. 259, Act VIII of 1859, a Court is directed to grant a sale certificate, he is entitled to be regarded as the "certified purchaser" at any time after the acceptance of his bid at the execution sale, even though the certificate may not actually have been granted to him before any suit against him, in connection with the property purchased by him, has been instituted; and s. 260 applies so as to bar a suit by the alleged real purchaser against him. BUNDA ALI KHAN v. AMEERUN . 25 W. R. 493

29. ——— Suit by certified purchaser. S. 260 of Act VIII of 1859 must be construed strictly and literally, and is applicable only to a suit brought against a certified purchaser to assert a benami title against him. Where the certified purchaser is a plaintiff, the real owner, if in possession, and if that possession has been honestly obtained, may show in defence that the holder of the certificate is a mere trustee. only by s. 260, but by the general provisions of the Act, from pleading that the plaintiff, the certified purchaser, purchased not on his own behalf, but benami for him, the defendant. Such defendant must show a transfer of title to him from the purchaser, in whom alone, under the certificate, the title of the judgment-debtor has vested. The object of s. 260 is to prevent any enquiry between the purchaser de facto and any person on whose behalf he is alleged to have purchased. Held, on appeal (reversing the decision of the High Court) that s. 260 of Act VIII of 1859 is to be construed strictly, and that no suit would lie by A against the mortgagee to redeem. In 1886, eleven years after the execution-sale, M sold the property to H, whose name was subsequently registered as owner, notwithstanding the plaintiff's objections. The plaintiff thereupon, in 1888, brought a suit against H for a declaration of his title to the property on the grounds that it had originally been purchased on his behalf at the execution-sale, and that he had been in possession for more than twelve years:—Held, that the suit did not fall within s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. Buhuns Koonwur v. *Lalla Buhoree Lall, 10 B. After it was instituted, he applied for and obtained a sale-certificate under s. 317 of Act X of 1877. Held, that, when the suit was instituted, it was maintainable, as, the defendant not being a certified purchaser under s. 260 of Act VIII of 1859, that section did not apply; and that, when the defendant obtained a certificate under s. 317 of Act X of 1877, he became a certified purchaser, and the suit would only be maintainable if the plaintiff made out a case falling within the provisions of the last part of s. 317. Subsequently the mother mortgaged the property, and the mortgagee brought a suit, obtained a decree, and had the property sold and purchased it himself. Upon his being resisted by the daughter in attempts to get his name registered as proprietor, he instituted a suit against both mother and daughter to establish his rights to the property. suit to redeem a kanom brought by the plaintiff who had purchased the land in execution of a decree against the jenmi, it appeared that the land had previously been purchased in the name of one who was joined as a supplementary defendant, with the funds of the jenmi's tarwad, and with the object of defrauding the creditors of that tarwad. A decree for redemption was passed, which was reversed on appeals filed by the supplementary defendant and the kanomdar respectively. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal against the decree in the first-mentioned appeal, joining the kanomdar as respondent. Held, that the plaintiffs could not succeed, as the kanomdar was not a party to the appeal against which the second appeal was preferred. Semble: apart from the above objection, the plaintiff was not entitled to a declaration that the purchase by the supplementary defendant was benami for the tarwad of the original jenmi and consequently invalid as against the plaintiff. Kanizak Sukina v. *Monohur Das, I. In execution of that decree, the property now in question was purchased by the predecessor in title of the plaintiff, who now brought this suit for redemption, averring that the purchase of 1883 was benami for the mortgagors. Held, that the plaintiff was not debarred by the Civil Procedure Code, s. 317, from proving this averment. 49. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 294, 317—Trusts Act (II of 1882), ss. 82, 88—Purchase by alleged agent of decree-holder at sale in execution. Certain decree-holders (appellants) were refused permission to purchase at the sale in execution, and subsequently the defendant, alleged by the decree-holders to be their agent, but of whose general duty the making of such purchase was not a part, purchased the property and got his name entered in the sale certificate. The decree-holders, hearing of the purchase, supplied the purchase-money, ratified the purchase, and agreed to take a conveyance of the property after confirmation of the sale. On the refusal of the defendant to execute the conveyance, the decree-holders sued for a declaration that they were the real purchasers and for possession of the property. Held, that under such circumstances the second paragraph of s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not exclude the application of the first paragraph of that section. Held, further, that ss. 82, 88 of the Indian Trusts Act (II of 1882) did not apply. Sankunni Nayar v. *Narayanan Nambudri, I. The plaintiffs thereupon brought this suit against the defendants (the pleader and his mohurrir) for a declaration that the pleader-defendant, in so purchasing, was a trustee on their behalf, for an order directing the defendants to reconvey the property to the plaintiffs, and for other relief. At the time of filing the suit, possession of the land sold had not been given to anybody. Held, affirming the decision of the Subordinate Judge, that the suit was not barred, having regard to the case made in the plaint, by s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Held, also (on the merits), that the pleader could not, according to equity and good conscience, retain for his own benefit the property so purchased by him. After this decree had been obtained, it was settled, by a suit ending in a consent decree, that one Musammat Pano was entitled along with Durga to a certain portion of the property of Kishan Lal. Kishan Lal and Todar brought their decree into execution, and caused the mortgaged property to be sold, and purchased it themselves. Thereupon the representatives of Musammat Pano sued Durga to recover that portion of the property which they alleged ought to have come to Pano. Held, that the suit would not lie, as being in contravention of s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure. ——— s. 1—Estate—Lands not permanently settled—Sunderbund estate—District of which portion only is permanently settled—Bengal Regulations IX of 1816 and III of 1828—Estate—Bengal Act VII of 1868. The plaintiff was the auction-purchaser at a sale under Act XI of 1859 by the Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs for arrears of revenue of an estate in the Sunderbunds on which the defendant was the holder of a mokurari mourasi jungleburi tenure, under which he was to clear away the jungle and then to cultivate the land with paddy. The estate was one borne on the register of revenue-paying estates in the Collectorate of the 24-Pergunnahs, and therefore within that Collectorate with regard to the provisions of Bengal Act VII of 1868, s. 10. The district of the 24-Pergunnahs is a permanently settled district, but the portion of it forming the Sunderbunds was declared by Regulation III of 1828, s. 13, not to be included in the permanent settlement. The Sunderbunds tract was, moreover, under Regulation IX of 1816, formed into a separate jurisdiction for settlement purposes under an officer styled the Commissioner of Sunderbunds, who is subject to the direct control of the the Board of Revenue, and independent of the Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs. Held, that, though there was no permanent settlement of the lands sold to the plaintiff, they fell within the definition of an "estate" as given in Bengal Act VII of 1868. On appeal, the Judge held that the Deputy Collector had no jurisdiction to entertain the application for review, or to hear the case, the decree having been transferred under Bengal Act III of 1870 to the Munsif for execution, and reversed the judgment of the Deputy Collector. Held, that, the suit having been decided by the Deputy Collector before Bengal Act VIII of 1869 came into operation, the procedure, therefore, would be that laid down by s. 108 of the Act, i.e., under Act X of 1859, and the appeal would lie to the Collector, not to the Judge, under ss. 153 and 155 of that Act. In 1876 A brought a suit against B for arrears of rent. B, under the contract, claimed to have set off, as a tax on income, a sum which he had paid under the Road Cess Act, which had been passed in 1871, after the Income Tax Act had been repealed. Held, that the tax imposed by the Road Cess Act passed by the Bengal Council could not be considered to be a tax on income; the income tax having been a tax imposed by the Government of India on a person's annual income, levied upon whatever actually came to his hands as income, and not upon the value of his property; and that, therefore, B could not set off the amount as being income tax. Held, also that, although the Road Cess Act contains no saving clause in favour of contracts, it does not prohibit in future the making of contracts which shall interfere with the incidence of the road cess as directed by the Act, nor vacate contracts that may have been made before the passing of the Act; and in the absence of any provisions to that effect, an agreement entered into before the passing of the Act could not be affected by the subsequent passing of the Act. In a suit by the zamindar for increase of rent, the defendants claimed to set off a sum representing the amount which the zamindar was bound to contribute under the Road Cess Act and Public Works Cess Act, and which amount they had paid to the Collector. Held, that the amount in question came within the terms of the kabuliat, and that the defendants were not entitled to the set off claimed by them. Surnomoyee Dabee v. Purresh Narain Roy, *I. Although the effect of an interpretation clause is to give the meaning assigned by it to the word interpreted in all places in the Act in which that word occurs, it is not the effect of an interpretation clause that the thing defined has annexed to it every incident which may seem to be attached to it by any other Act of the Legislature. It does not follow, therefore, that because lakhiraj property is defined in the Road Cess Act, 1871, to be a tenure, all the interests and consequences attached by other Acts to tenures generally, or to particular classes of tenures, become annexed to lakhiraj property. It was found that no notice of the valuation had been published as required by s. 52 of the Act, and it was held by the lower Court that the plaintiffs were therefore not entitled to recover double the amount under s. 58. It was then contended that he was, at any rate, entitled to recover the amount of the cesses with interest under s. 62. Held, that the latter section did not give the holder of the estate or tenure a right to recover the cesses payable under s. 56 before publication of notice, and that the plaintiff was therefore not entitled to a decree, and that his suit must be dismissed. 1. ——— Hindu Law—Mahomedan Law—Convert—"Justice, equity, and good conscience." To entitle a person to have the Hindu or Mahomedan law applied to him under the first paragraph of s. 24 of Act VI of 1871, he must be an orthodox believer in the Hindu or Mahomedan religion. The mere circumstance that he calls himself, or is called by others, a Hindu or Mahomedan, as the case may be, is not enough. His only claim to have a special kind of law applied to him is that he follows and observes a particular religion that of itself creates his law for him. If he fails to establish his religion, his privilege to the application of its law fails also, and he must be relegated to that class of persons whose cases have to be dealt with under the latter paragraph of s. 24 of Act VI of 1871 according to justice, equity, and good conscience. B, alleging that his family was a joint undivided Hindu family, sued R, his father, for a declaration that certain property was joint ancestral property, and for partition of his share according to the Hindu law of inheritance of such property, viz., one moiety. R set up as a defence to the suit that the members of the family were Mahomedans, and were therefore not governed by the Hindu law. The evidence in the suit established that the members of the family were neither orthodox Hindus nor Mahomedans. It also established that the Hindu law of inheritance had always been followed in the family. Held, following the principle enunciated above, that the family not being Hindus nor Mahomedans, the rule of decision applicable to the suit was neither Hindu nor Mahomedan law, but justice, equity, and good conscience; that the Hindu law of inheritance having always been followed in the family, it was justice, equity, and good conscience to apply that law to the suit; and that therefore B was entitled to demand partition of half of the family estate. Abraham v. *Abraham, 9 Moo. 2. ——— Mahomedan Law—Pre-emption. Under s. 24 of Act VI of 1871, Mahomedan law is not strictly applicable in suits for pre-emption between Mahomedans not based on local custom or contract, but it is equitable in such suits to apply that law. The application of Mahomedan law in a suit for pre-emption between a Mahomedan claimant of pre-emption and a Mahomedan vendee, on the basis of that law, is not precluded by the circumstances of the vendor not being a Mahomedan. (b) and s. 44, sub-s. (1) of the Bengal Drainage Act is governed by cl. (2) of Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act and must be brought within 3 years from the last day of the Bengali year in which the sum claimed fell due. Drainage charges payable by the tenant to the landlord as above are included within the definition of "rent" in s. 3, sub-s. (5) of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Monmohini v. *Preo Nath, 8 C. W. 1. ——— Sale of liquor—License—Agreement in contravention of Excise Act. The object of the Excise Act is to prohibit persons from selling or carrying on the business of selling exciseable articles without a license. The prohibition by the Act of sale of liquor without a license is based upon the principle of public policy and on moral grounds and the purpose of the Act is not confined to the protection of the Revenue. Boistub Churn Naun v. Wooma Churn Sen, I. L. R. 16 Calc. 436, referred to. The principle deduced from the licensing Act of 1856 clearly underlies the later Act that an agreement, which contravenes the policy of the Act or which has for its object the carrying on of a business in contravention of the Excise law, is illegal. Jadoo Nath Shaha v. *Novin Chundra Shaha, 21 W. The accused were sentenced by the Presidency Magistrate, under ss. 58 and 74 of the Bengal Excise Act, to a fine of R200 each, in default to three months' imprisonment, and in addition to six months' imprisonment, which was the maximum term that could be awarded under s. 74. Held, that the sentence of imprisonment was not in excess of the powers given to the Magistrate by s. 12 of the Presidency Magistrates Act, the imposition of the additional sentence of imprisonment not affecting the Magistrate's powers as regarded the original sentence under s. 58. The sale charged against him was of a quantity of puchawai in excess of that allowed to be sold under the license of his master. The sale was made in the presence of the master, the licensee, the accused merely handing the liquor to the purchaser at his master's request. Held, that the conviction was bad, as the facts did not establish a sale by the accused, the mere mechanical act of handing the liquor to the purchaser not constituting a sale by the accused. It cannot be held to apply to a general authority, verbally given by a Chairman to a Vice-Chairman to institute prosecutions under the Act as such power can only, under the body of the section, be delegated by a written order. In a prosecution instituted by a Vice-Chairman for obstructing a drain, where it appeared that the Chairman had some months previously verbally given the Vice-Chairman general authority to institute all such prosecutions under s. 353 of the Act, and it appeared that a conviction had been obtained before a Bench of Magistrates, and that on appeal to the Magistrate the conviction had been upheld, the Magistrate himself being the Chairman and hearing the appeal with the express consent of the accused, and where it was contended in revision before the High Court that, although there was no written order by the Chairman delegating his powers, it must be taken upon the facts proved and the circumstances of the case that the prosecution had been instituted with the express or implied consent of the Chairman obtained both previously and subsequently, within the terms of the proviso to s. 45 :—Held, that the proviso did not apply to the case, that the prosecution had not been properly instituted, and that the conviction and sentence must be set aside. He took exception to the assessment under s. 113 of the Bengal Municipal Act (III of 1884), but his application was rejected by the Municipal authorities without recourse to the procedure laid down in s. 114 of the Act and he declined to pay the sum assessed. The Municipality brought a suit against him for recovery of arrears of tax. Upon an objection taken by the defendant that the assessment was ultra vires and that it was not made according to his "circumstances and property within the Municipality." Held, that the assessment was rightly made and that "the circumstances and property" meant the whole amount he earned, and not what he spent within the Municipality. ss. 113, 116—Persons occupying holdings—Liability to assessment—Municipal Commissioners' power to tax—Assessment to tax. The word "liability" in the second paragraph of s. 113 of Bengal Act III of 1884 means liability apart from the question of occupation, and must be taken to refer to the liability to assessment or rating of a person who is the occupier of a holding. The same restricted meaning must be placed upon the word "liability" in s. 116, which section has no application to a dispute as to whether a person assessed to a tax does or does not occupy a holding, and a suit brought to set aside an assessment on the ground that the person assessed does not occupy a holding is not therefore barred by the provisions of s. 116. The sum payable in respect of the license was received, and the license asked for by C was granted to him, and at the same time the statement was sent to an overseer of the Municipality for verification. On the 7th May the overseer reported that C had in his possession eight ponies and one horse. On the 8th May the Chairman of the Municipality passed an order directing C to be prosecuted for making a false statement in the schedule to his statement regarding the number of animals in respect of which he applied for the license. On the 9th May C presented a petition asking that the tax on the three animals might be received, and stating that he did not think he was liable to take out a license for them, as they were old and diseased and unfit for work. On the 13th May the Chairman passed an order on this application that he had no power to interfere, as the prosecution of C had already been ordered. Meanwhile on the 9th May a paper was sent to the Magistrate headed "List of municipal cases under Act III of 1884" in which C appeared as charged with an offence under s. 199 of the Penal Code for "filing a false statement, that is to say, putting down in the schedule six ponies only instead of eight ponies and one horse." On the 12th May the Deputy Magistrate directed a summons to issue to C, returnable on the 23rd. On the 18th May the District Magistrate passed an order to the effect that the Municipality could not institute a prosecution under the Penal Code, but that the Deputy Magistrate had power to do so, and that he should consider the provisions of ss. 182 and 417, read with s. 511, of the Penal Code as applicable to the facts of the case. On the 19th May the summons was issued, and the case was heard on the 23rd and 24th May and 19th June, on which date formal charges under ss. 199, 182, 417, and 511 of the Penal Code were framed. Thereafter the hearing proceeded till the 16th July, when, on an application to the High Court, the proceedings were stayed, and a rule issued to show cause why they should not be quashed. It was contended at the hearing of that rule that the High Court should not interfere at that stage of the proceedings under its revisional jurisdiction. Held, that the High Court has power to interfere at any stage of a case, and that, when it is brought to its notice that a person has been subjected, as in this case, for over two months to the harassment of an illegal prosecution, it is its bounden duty to interfere. Held, further, that it was quite clear that the Municipality had no power to institute the proceedings, and that, having regard to the provisions of s. 191 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it did not appear that the Deputy Magistrate, having no private complainant before him, had power of his own motion to institute them; but that, whether he had such power or not, the admitted facts of the case did not in law constitute any of the offences with which C was charged, and that the whole proceedings must be quashed. The Municipal Act is intended to be complete in itself as regards offences committed against the Municipal Commissioners, and there is no indication of any intention to render a delinquent also liable to punishment under the Penal Code. There is no penalty in the Act attached to the omission to make a return under s. 133, and no words in the Act constituting the making a false return a penal offence; and as there are no such words in the Act as are necessary to make the provisions of the Penal Code applicable, the Court has no power to import them. The Municipal Commissioners in such a case have the remedy provided by the Act itself. CHANDI PERSHAD v. ABDUR RAHMAN I. L. R. 22 Calc. 131 prescribed limits of ferry—Right of ferryman to demand tolls. The expression "a ferry" in the Bengal Municipal Act means the exclusive right to carry passengers across the stream from one bank to the other on payment of certain prescribed tolls. The object of s. 155 of that Act appears to be to prevent the crossing of passengers from one bank of the river to the opposite bank by a boat plying for hire without a license within the prescribed limits. Semble: therefore, that the mere crossing of the bar of a khal leading into the limits of a municipal ferry would not constitute a breach of the Act. A ferryman has no authority to demand tolls from persons who are merely passengers in an unlicensed boat. The remedy against the person who keeps a ferry-boat without a license plying within the prescribed limits is provided by s. 156 of that Act. GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL v. SENAYAT ALI

Chairman of the Motihari Municipality, I. L. R. 17 Calc. 329*, approved. A landowner on whose land a market had been held for some years previous, and which land lay within the bounds of a municipality, was prosecuted under s. 344 of the Bengal Municipal Act, and convicted and fined for using such market without having obtained a license under s. 338. He alleged that he had applied for a license, and that it had not been granted him, and that the neglect to grant it was due to the fact that his market interfered with a new market established by the Municipal Commissioners, and their desire to close his market. It appeared that some time previous to the institution of the prosecution, the Municipal Commissioners at a meeting passed a resolution "that the provisions of s. 337 of the Municipal Act (Bengal Act III of 1884) be extended to this municipality," and it was contended that by this resolution licenses became necessary to sell at any market any of the provisions mentioned in that section, and that selling without such license rendered the accused liable to prosecution and fine under s. 344. It appeared, further, that Part X of the Act, which includes s. 337, had been previously extended to the municipality by an order of the Government of Bengal. Held, that the resolution of the Commissioners was not an order such as is contemplated by s. 337, as it was not sufficiently precise to convey any definite meaning, and purported only to do what the Bengal Government had already done some time previously. Held, further, that the conviction and sentence must be set aside, there being no proper order under s. 337. IV, c. 85, s. 43.* Regulation III of 1818 was applicable only to natives and those subject to the jurisdiction of the provincial Courts. It was passed under 37 Geo. III, c. 142, s. 28, not 13 Geo. III, c. 63, s. 36. It was passed by a legislative authority having full power in that behalf. The detention, to be legal, need only be covered by an actually existing warrant of the Governor General in Council in the form prescribed, without regard to the lawfulness of the arrest. The Regulation is not confined to prisoners of war or foreigners held in confinement for political reasons. The substance of Regulation III of 1818 was expressly re-enacted by Act XXXIV of 1850 and Act III of 1858, and therefore, as the result of these later Acts alone, the detention would be legal. Those Acts are not contrary to the power conferred on the Indian Legislature by 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 85, s. 43. In the matter of AMEER KHAN

The proceeding is not in the nature of a conviction of the person placed under restraint; therefore the person so placed under restraint cannot, in any future proceeding taken, against him, plead that he has been already tried, convicted and punished. ——— Assessment of land formerly occupied for Government salt-works. Upon the relinquishment by the Government of lands, within the ambit of a permanently-settled zamindari, continuously used before and since the perpetual settlement of salt-works from the commencement of salt-making by the Government, until after the passing of Regulation I of 1824, the provisions of that Regulation are applicable to the mutual rights of the zamindar and of the Government. Such lands were held by the officers of the Salt Department, in terms of cl. 11 of that Regulation, "free of rent" and "under a perpetual title of occupancy," whether belonging to a permanently-settled estate or not. The force of the Regulation and the right of the Government to assess such land are not affected by "khalari," payments having been made, among other compensations, by the Government to the zamindar; and cl. 11 appears to contemplate some such payment. On a settlement of the relinquished lands, "khalari" payments, being "sums remitted to the zamindars and to be allowed in perpetuity" within the meaning of cl. 4 of s. 9 of Regulation I of 1824, must be continued to the zamindar; or, if a settlement should be made with others, he should be assessed only for the land retained by him. It was found by the Judicial Committee that the predecessors of the respondent were the original owners of the land claimed; that there had been no slow and gradual pushing northward of the northern boundary of the appellant's land; and that there was still a channel of the river between the properties of the appellant and respondent, although the main stream had shifted to the north. Held, that it was not a case of accretion by gradual slow and imperceptible means, in which, as laid down in Lopez v. Muddun Mohan Thakur, 13 Moo, I. A. 467; 5 B. L. R. 521, the accreted land belongs to the owner of the adjoining land; but the principle applicable to it was that laid down in para. 2 of s. 4 of Regulation XI of 1825 (which was applied to Oudh by Act XVIII of 1876), that in cases in which a river by a sudden change in its course or by the violence of its stream separates land from one estate and joins it to another without destroying its identity and preventing the recognition of the land so removed, in such cases the land on being clearly recognized remains the property of the original owners—in this case the respondents. Mayor of Carlisle v. *Graham, L. 44. ——— Suit for possession—Landlord and tenant—Limitation. In a suit for possession of land, it appeared that the defendants had obtained a darpatni lease of the land in question in 1271 (1865), and that they had immediately dispossessed the plaintiff, and had never acknowledged him to be their tenant. The plaintiff instituted his suit within twelve years from the date of dispossession. Held, that the suit was not barred by limitation under s. 27 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. That section only applies to cases where the relation of landlord and tenant exists, and cannot be pleaded in bar by a defendant who does not admit that such relation has existed. It was found, although the alleged title was not proved, that the plaintiffs had established an occupancy right, but had been dispossessed by the defendant. On appeal it was contended that the suit was barred under s. 27 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, as not having been brought within one year from the date of the dispossession. Held, that the suit involved a question of title, and that the limitation of a year prescribed by s. 27 of the Rent Act, therefore, did not apply. The suit was first brought in the Revenue Court, and as their co-sharers had not joined in the suit, the plaintiffs made them defendants, and their being defendants preventing the plaintiffs from continuing the suit in the Revenue Court, they instituted it afresh in the Civil Court after Bengal Act VIII of 1869 came into operation. The defendants objected that, under the limitation provided by s. 29 of that Act, no more than three years' rent could be recovered ; but the Judge held, affirming the decision of the Munsif, that the case was governed by cl. 16, s. 1, Act VIII of 1869, and that six years' rent could be decreed. Held, on special appeal to the High Court, that the fact of the co-sharers being made pro formâ defendants did not alter the real character of the suit, which was to recover arrears of rent, and that, therefore, the provisions of s. 29, Act VIII of 1869, were applicable. and a decree for three years' rent only was given. 25. ——— Act X of 1859, s. 32—Cause of action—Suit for enhancement of arrears of rent. A suit for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate, brought more than three years after the rent had accrued due, was held to be barred by lapse of time under s. 32 of Act X of 1859, notwithstanding that it was commenced within one year from the date of a decree made in a suit brought in the Civil Court declaring that the plaintiff was entitled to enhance. The cause of action was the non-payment of the rent at the enhanced rate, and not the declaration of the Civil Court that the plaintiff had a right to enhance. The litigation lasted till 1276, when the plaintiff obtained a decree, which, however, was not executed, as the defendant paid the amount and costs within fifteen days. In 1276 the plaintiff brought this suit to recover the rents of 1272 and of subsequent years. Held, that the plaintiff's claim for the rents of 1272 was not barred by the lapse of

27. ———Act X of 1859, s. 32—Sale for arrears of rent—Sale afterwards set aside—Subsequent suit for arrears of rent. A, a zamindar, sold the rights of B, his patnidar, for arrears of rent under Regulation VIII of 1819. This sale was subsequently set aside at the suit of B for irregularity. A then sued B for the arrears under Act X of 1859, and B raised the defence that the suit was barred, more than three years having elapsed from the close of the year in which the arrears became due. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court), that, upon the setting aside of the patni sale, the patnidar took back the estate subject to the obligation to pay the rent, and that the particular arrears of rent claimed must be taken to have become due in the year in which that restoration to possession took place, and plaintiff could sue within three years from the close of that year. 29. ——— Act X of 1859, s. 32—Suit for arrears of rent—Assignment of rent in payment of bond. Plaintiff, a zamindar, being indebted on a bond, gave the bond-holder an assignment on the patnidars for the greater portion of the patni rent to be paid to the bond-holder until the debt was liquidated. The bond-holder, not receiving his money, sued the zamindar in the Small Cause Court, whereupon the zamindar brought this suit against the patnidars for the rent due. The lower Appellate Court, reversing the decision of the first Court, held that the claim for the rent of 1273 was not barred by limitation, because brought within three years from the time that plaintiff knew of the non-payment of the rent by defendants. Held, upon the principle of the decision of the Privy Council in Swarnamayi v. Shashi Mukhi Barmani, *2 B. 30. ——— Suit delayed pending final decision as to rent. A previous suit was brought in 1859, which was not finally decided in appeal by the High Court until December 1855, the effect of which decision was to take the talukh then in dispute out of the class of those protected by s. 51, Regulation VIII, 1793, and to make it liable to enhancement. Held, that the plaintiff's cause of action for rent did not accrue until ascertainment of the rent by that decision, and that her present suit for about five years' rent from 1st July 1859, having been brought within one year from the date of that decision, could be maintained. 32. ——— Tenancy in abeyance—Res judicata—Limitation. A, the zamindar, granted a patni lease of certain talukhs to B, who assigned it to C and D. On B's death, C and D applied to the Collector for registration of the patnitalukh in their names as assignees of B. A objected to the registration on the ground that the lease insured only for the life of B. A's objection being overruled, he instituted a regular suit to eject C and D, the present defendants, which was decided against A finally by the Privy Council in 1874. During the pendency of this litigation, the zamindar sued to recover the rent for the year 1868, not upon the basis of the patni lease, but for use and occupation, treating the tenants as mere trespassers. This suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff ought to have sued on the lease. In 1875 the plaintiff brought the present suit for the rent of 1868 on the patni lease. The defendants pleaded res judicata and limitation. The plaintiff contended that the suit was within time on the ground that the right to recover the rent was in suspense during the pendency of the litigation regarding the lease. Held, that the suit, though not res judicata, was barred under s. 29 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. Swarnamayi v. *Shashi Mukhi Bramani, 2 B. 35. ——— Limitation—Suit for arrears of rent. After the expiration of the period prescribed by s. 29 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, a plaintiff suing for arrears of rent cannot insist on the pendency of another suit, brought by him for possession of the land, as preventing limitation from running, where there has been no time during which such rent could not have been recovered if he had acted on his right of suing for it. In Rani Surnomoyee v. Shoshee Mookhee Burmonia, 12 Moo. I. A. 244 : 2 B. L. R. P. C. 10, the claimant of rent was, until the setting aside of the sale that had taken place, in the position of a person whose claim had been satisfied. The right to sue in that case had been suspended, and it was therefore distinguishable from the present. The plaintiff's ancestor purchased a talukh from the Government, subject to an ijara therein held by the defendants, which expired in 1866. A suit brought by the plaintiff in 1874 for possession was dismissed finally in 1876, the defendant's claim to remain in possession under another tenure being allowed. The plaintiff in 1876 sued the defendants for arrears of rent for the years 1866—1872. Held, that the suit was barred under s. 29, notwithstanding the proceedings of 1874. Upon non-payment of rent for the year 1281, a suit for khas possession of the lands was brought against A and B. The defendants claimed an equitable right to prevent forfeiture by paying all arrears according to the terms of the dar-patni, together with all costs. Held, that, whether or not the provisions of the Rent Law actually applied to the case, the Court was bound by the analogy of that law to apply in favour of the defendants an equity similar to the equity there given, and accordingly a decree was passed, that if the defendants should pay the whole of the rent due up to date, with interest according to the conditions of the dar-patni, together with the costs in the High Court and Courts below, they should be released from the effect of the forfeiture. Where the lower Court's decree was altered to this effect by a decision of the High Court, the fifteen days were held to date from the later decision. The tenant paid the decretal amount into Court within fifteen days of the appellate decree. Held, that, inasmuch as the appellate decree must be presumed to incorporate the terms of the original decree, and was the only decree of which execution could be taken, the tenant (judgment-debtor), having paid the decretal amount within fifteen days of that decree, was protected from ejectment. Application for execution was made, in December 1877, against property other than that for which the rent was due; but was, in the first Court, opposed successfully by the judgment-debtor on the ground that the under-tenure should first be proceeded against, though such under-tenure had already been sold away in execution of another decree and the execution proceeding was struck off on the 15th March 1878, and the property released from attachment. The judgment-creditor appealed, and was successful both in lower Appellate Court and the High Court, the latter decision being dated 26th February 1879. The costs awarded him in these proceedings, if added to the amount of the decree, would amount to a sum of more than R500. The next application for execution was made on 19th August 1879. Held, that the costs of the appeals in the execution-proceedings should not be added to the decree, and, therefore, the decree being for less than R500, the provisions of s. 58, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, applied to it. Held, also, that the attachment having been removed in March 1878, the execution of the decree was barred under that section. which had been sold under Bengal Act VIII of 1865 was dismissed on the ground that the suit in which the zamindar had obtained the decree was a fraudulent one and the purchaser knew that it had been against the wrong party. In special appeal, Act X of 1859, s. 106, was pleaded in justification of the zamindar. Held, that the zamindar could not bring such a suit as he had brought against a person other than the one whom he knew to be the proprietor of the under-tenure, and from whom for a series of years he had been receiving rent. 1. ——— Rent, arrears of—Purchase—Sale—Unregistered tenant—Defaulter. The expression the previous holder in s. 66 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 includes a person beneficially interested in a tenure, who is in a position to protect his interest by paying the rent into Court and yet omits to do so with the result that the tenure is brought to sale by the superior landlord. That he is not a registered tenant or is only interested in a portion of the tenure or that he is not liable directly to the zamindar is not sufficient to prevent the last clause of the section from applying to him. Default "which deprives a person of the benefit of the section does not necessarily imply moral obliquity or breach of contractual obligation : it simply means non-payment, failure or omission to pay. ——— Suit for value of crops —Distraint—Jurisdiction—Small Cause Court. The plaintiff made a complaint to the Magistrate against the defendant, his landlord, for forcibly carrying away his crops ; whereupon the defendant was tried, convicted of theft, and punished. The plaintiff then instituted a suit against the defendant in the Munsif's Court, apparently under s. 95 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, and obtained a decree declaring the distraint to be illegal, and directing the crops to be given up to him. The defendant offered to give up a smaller quantity than was mentioned in the decree. The plaintiff refused to take the same, and brought a suit in the Small Cause Court to recover the value of the quantity he had claimed before the Munsif and something additional. Held, that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction, and that the suit ought to have been brought under s. 98 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. 24. ——— Special appeal—Co-sharer—Suit for rent. The plaintiff, one of several co-sharers of a talukh, sued to recover her share of rent, making her co-sharers, who resisted her claim, defendants. The first Court raised and tried questions of title between the plaintiff, her co-sharers, and the raiyat, and decided in favour of the plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court, without expressing any opinion on the rights of the parties, dismissed the suit on the ground that it was not maintainable. On special appeal it was contended that no appeal would lie, as the amount of the claim was less than R100, and no question of title was determined by the judgment; but this objection was overruled on the ground that the decree of the lower Appellate Court, dismissing the suit, had the effect of deciding the question of title against the plaintiff. On appeal under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent: Held, that the judgment, rather than the decree, is to be looked at in applying s. 102, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court, but were met with the objection that no special appeal would lie. Held, that s. 102 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 prohibited the appeal, the case being one between landlord and tenant, and there consequently being no question relating to title as between parties having conflicting proving their title to the land. In a suit to eject the defendants as trespassers, inasmuch as they could have derived no title from Government who themselves had no title, and no relationship of landlord and tenant existed between them and the plaintiffs who had not recognized their right to cultivate the land: Held, that under s. 3, cls. (3) and (5), ss. 4 and 5, cls. (2) and (3), of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the defendants were "non-occupancy raiyats," and therefore not liable to ejectment except for the reasons and on the conditions specified in that Act; and no such reasons or conditions existed in this case. Liability to pay for the "use and occupation" of land by a person between whom and the proprietor of such land there exists no relationship of landlord and tenant, is a "liability to pay rent" within the meaning of s. 3, cl. (5), of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Cl. (3), s. 5 of that Act, is intended merely to define the position of a raiyat in respect to a proprietor or tenure-holder, and to distinguish him from what is afterwards described as an under-raiyat. Besides the said putni rent I take upon myself the duty of depositing in the Collectorate the Government revenue of ₹40,156 fixed for the eight-anna share of the said mahals." taluk." Provision was also made in the kabuliyats for payment by the respondent of certain cesses. On default in payment of the jumma of R7,000 of the cesses they were to be recovered as arrears of rent under Regulation VIII of 1819; but for default in payment of the Government revenue the penalty was declared to be forfeiture of the tenure. Held (affirming the decision of the High Court), that according to the true construction of the kabuliyats read with Regulation VIII of 1819, the Government revenue was not "money payable to the landlord" and therefore not "rent" within the meaning of s. 3, cl. The rule laid down in the case of Binad Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik, I. L. R. 20 Calc. 708, is based upon that the assumption that the tenant entered upon the land and held under a de facto proprietor, who might not be the real owner, in good faith. 2. ——— Landlord and Tenant—Suit for rent—Enhancement of rent—Enhancement of rent by a registered kabuliyat within fifteen years from a previous oral agreement to pay enhancement of rent, effect of. By an oral agreement in the year 1885 the tenant defendant agreed to pay an enhancement of rent, and he paid rent at that rate until subsequently he executed in the year 1893 a registered kabuliyat, by which he agreed to pay a further enhancement of rent which was more than two annas in the rupee. Upon a suit for rent by the landlord based on the registered kabuliyat: Held, that, inasmuch as the enhancement of rent in s. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act refers to enhancement after the promulgation of the Act, if in this case the enhancement which was made in the year 1885 was before the Act came into force, it would not bar an enhancement during the period of fifteen years from the date thereof as contemplated by cl. (3) of s. 29. But if the said enhancement was made after the Act came into force, it would also not bar a subsequent enhancement within fifteen years from the date thereof, as the previous contract was only an oral one and was not effectual and binding upon the defendant. Held, also, that having regard to cl. (b) of s. 29, as the enhancement was more than two annas in the rupee, the registered kabuliyat was bad in law, if the rent then agreed to be paid was an enhanced rent. The kabuliyat would also be bad in law, if the rent agreed to be paid is partly enhanced and partly increased rent. Held, further, that having regard to prov. (1) of s. 29, as also the provisions of s. 27, the plaintiff would at any rate (i.e., failing the kabuliyat) be entitled to recover rent at the rate paid by the defendant for more than three years. The consideration did not constitute a term of the contract within that section. The fact that the tenant has been exonerated from certain liabilities under a previous contract cannot give validity to a stipulation to pay rent at an enhanced rate exceeding 2 annas in the rupee. Ratio decidendi of Sheo Sahoy Panday v. *Ram Rachia Roy, I. X of the Act. In such a suit the tenant is entitled to the benefit of the presumption. Given the circumstance of an increase or decrease in the area of the land for which a tenant is paying rent, it is competent to the Revenue Officer under s. 104 (2) of the Bengal Tenancy Act to settle a fair and equitable rent in respect of the whole of the land of the tenant, including the excess area, and the Revenue Officer can in such a case enhance the rent under the provisions of the Tenancy Act, e.g., on the ground of the rise in the prices of the food crops, and so forth. 3. ——— and s. 191—Permanent Settlement—Presumption—Uniform rent. When a question arises as to whether a tenant is entitled to the presumption under s. 50, cl. (2), of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the fact that the estate within which the tenure in question is situated was not permanently settled in the year 1793 does not make any difference. S. 191 of the Bengal Tenancy Act has no application to the present case, inasmuch as the estate, though not permanently settled in 1793, was subsequently permanently settled in the year 1811. TAMASHA BIBI v. ASHUTOSH DHUR . 4 C. W. N. 513

4. ——— Presumption as to uniform payment of rent. When a tenant has paid rent, for over twenty years prior to the date of suit, at a uniform rate which has not changed, the presumption of law, under s. 50, sub-s. (2), of the Bengal Tenancy Act, would arise if there is no allegation or proof that a tenancy commenced in a particular year after the Permanent Settlement. The mere fact that the tenant shows by documentary evidence that the rate of rent has not changed from a particular year would not preclude him from the benefit of the presumption given by sub-s. (2) of s. 50. MONGOLA v. KUMUD CHUNDER SINGH (1900) 5 C. W. N. 60

5. ——— Sub-s. (2)—"Suit or other proceeding under this Act," meaning of—Suit by landlord to eject the purchaser of a holding on the ground of non-transferability—Whether the presumption arises in such suit. The application of s. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is limited to a suit or proceeding under the Bengal Tenancy Act. Where the plaintiff sued for recovery of possession, alleging that the defendant was a trespasser, and the defendant claimed to be a tenant: Held, that, until the fact that defendant was a tenant was made out, the suit could not be said to be one under the Bengal Tenancy Act, and the fact was to be made out, independently of s. 50, that the suit was against a tenant; and until that was made out s. 50 had no application. Nilmani Maitra v. *Mathura Nath Joardar, 4 C. The expression "the area for which rent has been previously paid," in s. 52, sub-s. (1), cl. (a), means the area with reference to which the rent previously paid had been assessed or adjusted. In order to succeed the landlord must prove facts and circumstances showing that there was some reason not within the control of the landlord for additional lands being included in the holding. Gouri Patra v. *Reily, I. In a suit for rent, brought by some of several joint landlords against one of several joint-tenants for recovery of the plaintiff's share of the rent payable on account of the defendant tenant's share of the tenure under a previous arrangement, such tenant-defendant cannot claim abatement under the provisions of s. 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. the land under s. 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Per MOOKERJEE, J.—The test is whether B acted within the scope of his authority. A nominal owner has no implied authority to pledge the property in arrears on the real owner falling to pay the rent regularly. An instrument, by which the payment of money is secured on land, must be taken to create a mere charge, unless there is an indication in it that some interest in specific immoveable property was transferred ; a clause entitling the creditor to recover his dues by attachment and sale of the property and a clause against alienation lend support to the view that a mere charge was intended to be created. S. 100 of the Transfer of Property Act does not mean that a transaction purporting on the face of it to be a mortgage is converted into a charge, if the instrument cannot operate as a mortgage by reason of defective execution or non-compliance with the formalities prescribed by the law. The depositaries executed and delivered a receipt to the Amin. Some time after, the ticcadar made an application to the Collector in order to obtain his share of the produce; but, on a representation being made by one of the depositaries that the crops (with the exception of a small portion) had been destroyed by rain, the Collector declined to grant any relief to the ticcadar. disputed question of fact, and held that the purpose alleged was not reasonable or sufficient, and declined to authorize the purchase. The District Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's finding and authorized the compulsory acquisition of the land. Held, that there is no appeal against an order passed by a Civil Court under s. 84 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that the order of the District Judge was without jurisdiction and must be set aside. Held by PRINSEP and AMEER ALI, JJ. (PETHERAM, C.J., dissenting)—That the Collector's certificate under s. 84 is not conclusive as to the reasonableness and sufficiency of the purpose for which the land is sought to be acquired; that the jurisdiction of the Civil Court is not confined to giving effect to the Collector's certificate, but the Court is to hold a judicial enquiry to determine the reasonableness and sufficiency of the purpose and all matters coming within the section, and is competent to consider the grounds upon which the certificate was granted: that the appointment of a European manager and the necessity for erecting buildings for his comfort and convenience are insufficient grounds for authorizing the compulsory acquisition of land under s. 84. The purpose for which the land is sought to be acquired must have a direct relation to the good of the holding, and objects which might have a remote or speculative bearing upon the good of the holding are foreign to the scope of the Act. Held by PETHERAM, C.J.—The section gives to the Collector jurisdiction to decide whether the alleged purpose is reasonable and sufficient, leaving to the Civil Court to settle the amount to be paid for the land, and the decision of the question whether the land is bonâ fide required for the alleged purpose. The words "satisfied on the certificate" mean that the Civil Court is to be satisfied on the certificate alone, and has no jurisdiction to take other evidence on that question, but is to accept the decision of the Collector as final. In order to entitle a landlord to re-enter on abandonment by the tenant, it must be an abandonment in the words of s. 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, namely, that the raiyat voluntarily abandons his residence and ceases to cultivate, without notice to the landlord and without arranging for the payment of his rent as it falls due. Nurendro Narayan Roy v. *Ishan Chandra Sen, 22 W. 3. ——— Cls. (1) and (2)—Non-transferable occupancy holding—Abandonment—Notice by landlord, if necessary—Mortgage of holding—Sale by mortgagee, if constitutes abandonment. Service of notice under cl. (2) of s. 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not indispensable to effect a legal abandonment and to allow valid re-entry by the landlord. The only effect of service of notice under s. 78, cl. (2) is to make it obligatory upon the tenant to have a speedy determination of the question whether there has been an abandonment or not. Abandonment is the effect of the act of the tenant in vacating the holding without making arrangement for payment of his rent as it falls due and for cultivating the land. Whether there has been abandonment or not in any individual case is a question of intention to be determined upon the facts of the particular case. When an occupancy raiyat mortgages his (non-transferable) holding and the mortgagee enforces the mortgage, has the holding sold, and purchases it himself, the possession of the raiyat completely ceases and there is an abandonment of the holding by him. One of the defendants appeared and pleaded that the tenure had been some time previously divided by the principal plaintiff (who was the kurta of the family and collected the rent), and that after the division he had paid R7-8 per annum, being the rent in respect of his half of the tenure, to the kurta; in support of such payments, he produced dakhilas or rent receipts signed by the kurta. The suit was dismissed by the Munsif, but on appeal the additional Judge gave the plaintiffs a decree for the amount of rent claimed less the amount proved to have been paid by the defendant, who contested the suit, as shown by the dakhilas. He held that the division has not been proved, and that the dakhilas did not amount to the written consent required by s. 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that the dakhilas or rent receipts did not amount to a written consent as required by s. 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that the decree of the lower Court must be upheld. On the 4th March 1891, the same co-sharer applied to the Court to the effect that "proceedings might be taken under s. 93 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that the management of the estate might be taken over by the Court of Wards." The other co-sharers and the representative of certain minor co-sharers objected to the appointment of a common manager, but consented to the estate being made over to the Court of Wards. On the 30th March 1892, the District Judge, without satisfying himself as to the necessity of the appointment of a common manager ordered that the estate should be made over to the Court of Wards. The Court of Wards took over the estate, but subsequently refused to act, and the Board of Revenue directed that the estate should be released. On the 13th August 1892, the District Judge issued notices on the co-sharers under s. 93, calling on them to show cause why a common manager should not be appointed. All the co-sharers appeared and objected to the appointment of a common manager, but one of them and the representative of the minor co-sharers stated that they had agreed to appoint a private person manager of their shares. The District Judge, therefore, appointed such person temporarily as a common manager of the entire estate until the co-owners should take steps under s. 99 to satisfy the Court that they were in a position to manage the estate, and on the 24th March 1893 passed two orders on separate applications made by two of the co-sharers for the release of the estate, refusing to release it, as he was not satisfied that the management of the estate could be conducted without injury to the rights of the minor. Held, that these orders of the 24th March 1893 were ultra vires. GANODA KANTA ROY v. PROBHABATI DASI I. Bengal Tenancy Act (before the amendment of 1898) applied to proceedings taken under s. 103 in the same way as to proceedings taken under s. 101. On an application under s. 103, a Revenue-officer is competent to take a survey and prepare a record-of-rights without any order of the Government under s. 101. When there is a total denial of relation of landlord and tenant by one of the parties, Revenue-officer has jurisdiction in a proceeding under s. 103 of the Bengal Tenancy Act to decide that question, but his decision, although it may have the force of a decree, cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit in ejectment and for declaration of title, brought in a Civil Court. He applied under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act for the measurement of the estate and the preparation of a record-of-rights, and the Revenue Officer deputed for these purposes found that a portion of the estate held by the defendant was mal land, though it was held as lakhiraj under certain sanads, and as he also found that no rent had ever been paid for it, it was entered on the record-of-rights as mal land held under those sanads as lakhiraj. The Special Judge, on appeal by the plaintiff, held that the land, having been sound to be mal, should have been entered as mal land unassessed with rent. In a suit to have the land assessed with rent, it was found that the sanads under which the defendant claimed to hold, were granted not by any predecessor in title of the plaintiff, and were of a date anterior to the Permanent Settlement. Held (reversing the decision of the lower Appellate Court), that the Special Judge had no jurisdiction to determine whether the land was mal or lakhiraj, and that his judgment as to its being mal did not therefore operate as res judicata. Secretary of State for India v. *Nitye Singh, I. 1. ——— and ss. 38, 52, sub-s. 2, cl. (c), Ch. X, s. 101, sub-s. 2, cl. (a)—Ancient holdings—Additional rent for excess lands—Onus of proving lands in excess of area originally let—Permanent deterioration—Liability to additional rent—Duty of Settlement Officer. S. 104, sub-s. (2), of the Bengal Tenancy Act is subject to the provisions of s. 52 of the Act. The mere fact that on a measurement made by a zamindar under the authority of Government, given under Ch. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it is found that the tenants generally are in possession of lands in excess of the areas entered in his zamindari-papers and their rent receipts, does not necessarily prove that he is entitled to additional rent for the excess areas. Where settlements or holdings are of very old date and lands are let out by areas ascertained without any accurate survey, but as contained within certain recognized boundaries, for instance, by reference to other holdings, it is incumbent upon the zamindar seeking enhancement of rent very many years after the original settlement to show that the lands held by the raiyats are in excess of the lands originally let to them in consequence of some encroachment or some alluvial increment, or that the settlement was made on the basis of measurement and the rates of rent as applied to the area then determined, while on a fresh measurement made by the same length of measure it has been found that he is entitled to receive additional rent which by carelessness or neglect or some other cause he had hitherto lost. A liberal interpretation should be put upon the word "permanently" in s. 38, sub-s. (1), cl. (a), and the word construed with reference to existing conditions. It cannot be said that a deterioration is not permanent, only because by the application of capital and skill it might be removed. In determining the liability to additional rent the Settlement Officer is by s. 52, sub-s. (2), cl. (c), bound to consider the length of time during which the tenancy has lasted without dispute as to rent or area. Although only an occupancy raiyat can bring a suit under s. 38, the principles laid down in that section ought to be taken into consideration in all proceedings for settlement of rent whatever be the status of the raiyat. C., of 1907, the tenants were in practice allowed to take objections which would properly come under s. 106 of the Act ; and when in such a proceeding, the lower Courts decided any such matter a second appeal would be entertained by the High Court. A tenant in such a proceeding is entitled to the benefit of the presumption of fixity of rent arising under s. 50 of the Bengal Tenancy Act from proof of uniform payment of rent for 20 years, s. 115 of the Act not displacing such a presumption in a proceeding under s. 105 or s. 106. Quœre : Whether the words " recorded under this chapter " in s. 115 mean " recorded after all chances of amendment of the record under any other provision of the chapter are over including a suit as contemplated by s. 111." The suit was instituted more than two months after the final publication of the record-of-rights for mouzah R., but within two months of the final publication of the record-of-rights for mouzah P. Held, that the suit was not time-barred. In such a suit the Revenue Officer, and in case the suit is transferred to the Civil Court, the Civil Court is confined to the question of possession and cannot be asked to adjudicate upon the title of rival proprietors. The suit was originally instituted against the person, whose name was entered in the record-of-rights. But it appared that this person was the widow of the deceased proprietor and her name was entered as representing the estate of her deceased husband. Held, that the executors to the estate of the deceased proprietor, who were substituted as defendants, were not new defendants within s. 22 of the Limitation Act. They mean only a decision settling a fair and equitable rent in place of the existing rent, and the words do not include a decision determining what the existing rent is. Mathura Mohun Lahiri v. *Uma Sundari Debi, I. A second appeal lies to the High Court from a decision of a special Judge reversing or affirming a decision of a Settlement officer, who decided under s. 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act what was the rent payable by the plaintiff, it not being "a decision settling a rent" within the meaning of s. 109A of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Any statement, as to rent payable for a holding, made by a person in a sale certificate, which was obtained by him as purchaser of the holding at a sale in execution of a decree against the former tenant, being in the nature of an admission, cannot be used as evidence on his behalf, as such a statement does not come within the exception to s. 21 of the Evidence Act. and, though it did not make the question of B's rent res judicata, it was admissible in evidence as to his rent; (2) that B's suit was barred by the law of limitation, under Art. 14 or Art. 120 of Sch. II to the Limitation Act (XV of 1877); and that he could not be allowed to bring a suit, after the period of limitation, for the alteration of his rent, under the guise of a suit for the amendment of a certificate. It cannot be right or intended by the Legislature that while tenants' rents, after being settled by a Settlement Officer, became final after the lapse of a certain time, if not impugned in the way provided by the law, tenants of wards' estates should have the means of upsetting such settlements by bringing suits to cancel or modify certificates for arrears of rent. From the wording of that sub-section, it was intended that, in determining whether land is the private land of the proprietor, regard should be had to any declaration made before the 2nd March 1883 by the landlord, and communicated to the tenants, in respect to the reservation

2. ——— Execution applied for after passing of Act VIII of 1885—Decree being previous to the Act—Bengal Act VIII of 1869—Construction of statute. A sale in execution of a decree passed under Bengal Act VIII of 1869, execution having been applied for after Act VIII of 1885 had come into force, cannot be set aside under s. 174 of the latter Act. 5. ——— and s. 162—Setting aside sale——"Decree," meaning of. The word "decree," in s. 174 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, no doubt primarily refers to the decree of which execution is sought for; but if in the meantime, that is to say, before the sale is actually held, the decree of the first Court, of which execution was applied for, is modified in appeal in favour of the judgment-debtor, then necessarily "the decree" must be the decree of the Appellate Court. So where a decree for rent was passed by the first Court on the 11th January, and in execution of the decree the defaulting tenure was sold on the 5th June, but in the meantime the decree had been modified by the Appellate Court on the 18th May: Held, that the judgment-debtor could set aside the sale by depositing within 30 days from the date of sale the amount covered by the decree of the Appellate Court, together with a sum equal to five per centum of the purchase-money. Subsequently on its being discovered that the amount was short by a small sum, the calculation being incorrect, the Munsif held that the provisions of the section had not been complied with, and passed an order confirming the sale. Held, that, when the amount payable by the judgment-debtor under s. 174 has been calculated and settled by an officer of the Court, and when that amount has been paid into Court, an order setting aside the sale must be made by the Court as a matter of right. The order of the Munsif confirming the sale was therefore without jurisdiction, and must be set aside. UGRAH LALL v. RADHA PERSHAD SINGH . . . . I. L. R. 18 Calc. 255

Subsequently it was discovered that the amount was short by 9 pies, which the judgment-debtor forthwith paid in, making up the deficiency, and presented a petition, praying that "the execution case may be declared as finally closed," but without applying in express terms to have the sale set aside. Held, that, under s. 174 of she Bengal Tenancy Act, the Court was bound to set aside the sale, notwithstanding that the applicant did not in express terms ask for that relief. Ugrah Lall v. *Radha Pershad Singh, I. 10. ——— Co-sharers—Suit by one co-sharer entitled to collect rent separately, for additional rent for land brought under cultivation payable in terms of lease—Joint landlords—Suit for rent—Collection of rent separately. A tenant held 19½ bighas of land under a kabuliat granted by three joint landlords, which provided, inter alia, that rent was to be paid at the rate of R1-8 per bigha in respect of 8 bighas only, and that the remaining 11½ bighas, which were then unculturable, should, when they became fit for cultivation, be assessed with rent at the same rate. One of the co-sharers, who was admittedly entitled, under arrangement, to collect his share of the rent separately, instituted a suit against the tenant, joining his co-sharers as defendants, to recover arrears of his share of the rent for a specific period, and claimed to be entitled to recover rent in respect of the whole 19½ bighas, on the allegation that the 11½ bighas had then become fit for cultivation, and were therefore liable to be assessed with rent at the rate mentioned in the kabuliat. The tenant objected that, having regard to the provisions of s. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the suit would not lie at the instance of the plaintiff alone. Held, that the suit did lie. It was clearly not one for enhancement of rent in the sense in which that term is used in the Bengal Tenancy Act, nor was it one for additional rent for excess land within the meaning of s. 52 of that Act, and as the plaintiff was entitled to collect his share of the rent separately, there was no reason why he should not be entitled to claim separately the rent payable, not upon any fresh adjustment of the rent inconsistent with the continuance of the old tenancy, but upon an ascertainment of the rent payable in accordance with the terms of the original letting. *Guni Mahomed v. Plaintiff brought this suit for the whole of the rent, claiming only his own share of it, making these co-sharers defendants who did not join as plaintiffs. The terms of the defendant's pottah were that, the whole of the lands being brought under cultivation, the landlords would be at liberty to measure the lands of the ganti, and, if the land be found greater in quantity than 150 bighas, the tenant would pay rent at the rate of 10 annas per bigha. The lands being found greater than the said quantity, the plaintiff prayed for a decree for rent at that rate for the whole area. The defendant pleaded, inter alia, that the plaintiff, as a fractional sharer in the landlord's interest, could not sue him alone. Held, that the suit was maintainable at the instance of the plaintiff alone, and that it was not a suit to alter the rent under the provisions of s. 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Ram Chunder Chukrabutty v. *Giridhur Dutt, I. 12. ——— Right of fractional co-sharer to maintain a suit for enhancement of rent—Agreement with fractional co-sharer to pay rent separately, effect of—Joint landlords. A fractional shareholder cannot bring a suit for enhancement of rent. Under the provisions of s. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, where there are several joint landlords, they must all join in bringing a suit for enhancement of rent; an agreement in a kabuliyat by one tenant to pay an enhanced rent to some of the landlords, if, on measurement, the jama of his jote is increased, does not create a right to maintain such a suit by those landlords. Such a suit cannot be brought otherwise than under the terms of the Bengal Tenancy Act. An agreement by a tenant with some of several joint-landlords to pay his share of the rent separately, does not create a separate tenancy. Gopal Chunder Das v. *Umesh Narain Chowdhry, I. L. The estate was subsequently partitioned by the revenue authorities into four several estates. The rent of the tenure was thereupon allotted proportionately to each of the four estates thus formed, although the land forming the tenure remained undivided. In a suit for enhancement of the rent of the tenure brought by the proprietor of some of the estates : Held, that the effect of the partition of the parent estate was to create separate and distinct tenures out of the original single tenure under the proprietors of each of the estates ; that the proprietors of the several estates were not joint landlords of the tenure within the meaning of s. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and that therefore a suit for enhancement of rent would lie by a proprietor of one of the estates in respect of the rent allotted to his estate. Sarat Soonduree Debia v. *Someeroodeen Talookdar, 22 W. When, therefore, the plaintiffs, who are joint landlords, have, in suits separately instituted by them against the defendant tenant, asked for apportionment of rent and for recovery of rents due on such apportionment, and all the parties interested have been made parties to the suits, there is no reason why the plaintiffs should not have the rent apportioned ; and the apportionment may take place in respect both of the arrears alleged to be due and the future rent. But such an arrangement merely affects the right to sue separately for rent, and in no other respect modifies the terms of the holding. The right to bring the tenure to sale for arrears of rent remains intact, as also the right of one sharer to sue, making his co-sharers defendants, when they will not join as plaintiffs. The filing of a suit is not a thing which the landlord is, under the Bengal Tenancy Act, required or authorised to do; and s. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is no bar to a sharer suing (under the general rules of legal procedure) for the whole rent of the tenure making his co-sharers, who refuse to join as plaintiffs, defendants in the suit. 1. ——— Sch. III, Art. 2—Limitation—Suit for arrears of rent at excess rate. In 1865 the plaintiff sued and obtained a decree for payment of additional rent for excess land held by the defendant, and, on the 29th March 1877, instituted another suit against the defendant for khas possession of newly-accreted lands, or, in the alternative, for an assessment of rent thereon according to the terms of the defendant's kabuliat. This suit was dismissed on the 29th June 1881; but, on appeal to the High Court, this decision was reversed on the 11th May 1883, and khas possession was given to the plaintiff. On appeal, the Privy Council on the 24th July 1886, reversed the decree for khas possession, and declared the plaintiff entitled to a decree, fixing the extent of the excess lands and assessing rent therefor in terms of the kabuliat, such rent to be payable from and after the 28th March 1878, and remitting the case for a finding as to the extent of the excess lands. The Subordinate Judge, to whom the case was remitted, gave the plaintiff a decree on the 21st March 1887 for increased rent in respect of 2 kanis 7 gundahs 2 cowries of excess land. On the 14th July 1887, the plaintiff instituted a suit to recover excess rent for the years 1878 to 1886, and for rent at the old rate plus the excess rent for a portion of the year 1887. Held, that the suit, so far as the rent for 1878 to 1883 was concerned, was barred by limitation. The talukh was sold and was purchased by the landlord on the 1st Jeyt 1298 (14th May 1891). The whole of the arrears not being realized by the sale-proceeds, the landlord brought an action on the 14th May 1894 for the balance of the patni rent to the end of 1297 B.S. (12th April 1891). The defence was that the suit was barred by limitation. Held, that the suit was governed by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act, s. 184, and Sch. III of that Act. The words "final decree" in Art. 6, Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, refer to the final decree in the suit, and cannot be held to include an order of an Appellate Court made in an application to set aside that decree under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure. An ex-parte rent decree having been obtained on the 30th May 1888 for a sum under ₹500, the decree-holder on the 27th May 1889 applied for execution thereof and attached certain properties of the judgment-debtor, the date fixed for the sale being the 31st August 1889. The judgment-debtor applied, under s. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code, for a re-hearing of the rent suit, and on the day fixed for the sale applied for stay of execution : the sale was stayed, and the Court of its own motion and for its own convenience directed the execution case to be struck off the file "for the present." On the 28th December 1889 the Court passed an order refusing a re-hearing of the suit, which order was upheld on appeal on the 16th May 1890. On the 21st January 1892 the decree-holder again applied for execution, at the same time praying that his application might be taken to be in continuation of his former application of the 27th May 1889. Held, that the application was one in continuation of the former proceedings in execution so far, at least, as regarded the property mentioned in the former application, but as regards other properties, it must be held to be barred as not having been made within three years from the decree of the 30th May 1883. 2. ——— Dismemberment of bhag—Narva—Bhag—Alienation previous to Bombay Act V of 1862. The principal object of Bombay Act V of 1862 is to prevent the further dismemberment of bhags or shares in bhagdari villages : it renders null and void any future alienation of any portion of a bhag, other than a recognized subdivision, but it does not invalidate previous alienations. A sale of a portion of a bhag, previously to the passing of Bombay Act V of 1862, amounts to a dismemberment of the bhag, and what remains in the bhagdar's hands continues to be a complete bhag, while the portion separated from it becomes a new bhag. In 1876 A and C sold their shares to the plaintiff. B and D protested against the sale as being a dismemberment of a bhag; and the plaintiff was called upon by the Collector, under s. 3 of the Act, to deliver the deed to be cancelled, but declined to do so, and applied that the sale should be recognized. By an order the Collector refused to grant his prayer. The plaintiff, therefore, brought a suit to set aside the order. Both the lower Courts rejected his claim. On appeal to the High Court: Held, confirming the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the sale to the plaintiff, having been effected after the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862) had come into force, was void. A bhag, as contemplated by the Act, would seem to mean an aliquot share of a village subject to an aliquot portion of the total land-tax imposed on it, and not any subdivision by partition or otherwise. Bhai Shankar v. *Collector of Kaira, I. It was purchased by B. The sale was subsequently confirmed, and B was put in possession of a portion of the land. On the 30th September 1880 the Collector applied to the Court to set aside the sale on the ground that it was illegal under Bombay Act V of 1862. It appeared that the Collector did not know till November 1877 that the land sold was an unrecognized portion of the bhag, and not the whole of it. Held, that the sale might be set aside under the provisions of s. 2 of Act V of 1862, notwithstanding its confirmation and the subsequent delivery of possession. Quære: Whether any provision of limitation applied to such application under the Bhagdari Act. 2. ——— Sale of unascertained shares in an undivided bhag—Dismemberment—Physical dismemberment—Right to sue to set aside illegal sales. S. 1 of the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862) does not prohibit the sale of an unascertained share of an undivided bhag. The object and intention of the Act is to prevent a physical dismemberment of a bhag, or recognized subdivisions thereof, and not a mere increase in the number of persons who may from time to time be owners of the bhag. S. 2 of the Act does not bar the right of any person prejudicially affected by any illegal sale from suing to set aside the sale. Four brothers owned a bhag in common. In 1871 the right, title, and interest of three of the brothers in the bhag was sold in execution of decrees against them. The defendants were the auction-purchasers. They were put in joint possession of the whole bhag. In 1878 the plaintiff purchased the whole bhag from the four brothers, and filed a suit in 1883 to oust the defendants, and to obtain possession, alleging that the defendants' purchase of a portion of the bhag was illegal and invalid under s. 1 of the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862). The suit was dismissed on the ground that, though the defendants' purchase was illegal under the Act, the plaintiff had no right to oust the defendants until the Collector had taken action, under s. 2 of the Act, to set aside defendants' purchase. Held reversing the decision of the lower Court, that the suit was not barred by s. 2 of the Bombay Bhagdari Act (V of 1862). Held, also, that the defendants' purchase of unascertained shares in the undivided bhag was not opposed to s. 1 of the Act. The words "attachment or sale by the process of any Civil Court," used therein, were intended to prevent attachment and sale under simple money decrees, and not to prevent the sale of mortgaged property in satisfaction of a valid mortgage. 2. ——— *Sale of unrecognized portion of bhag—Application by Collector to set it aside—Limitation Acts, IX of 1871 and XV of 1877, Sch. The words in the first section of that Act, "no portion of a bhag, etc., shall be liable to seizure, sequestration, attachment or sale by the process of any Civil Court," mean that no portion of a bhag shall be seized, sequestered, attached, or sold by the process of any Civil Court, and any such seizure, sequestration, attachment, or sale is thereby rendered absolutely illegal and void. S. 3 of the Act has no bearing on sales by order of a Civil Court, but is intended to apply to unlawful sales and alienations of portions of bhags made out of Court, or by private individuals. 3. ——— Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879), s. 83—Fruit-yielding trees standing on a portion of a Bhag—Permanent tenancy—Annual tenancy—Construction—Obstruction to tenant in the enjoyment of trees—Permanent injunction. The plaintiff who claimed to be a purchaser from a permanent occupant of certain land which formed portion of a Bhag, sued for a permanent injunction restraining the defendant from obstructing him from the enjoyment of certain fruit-yielding trees and preventing him from entering on the land in which the trees were situated and taking the produce of the trees and having the same watched every year. The defendant denied the plaintiff's right as permanent occupant and the legality of his purchase, and relied on the provisions of the Bhagdari and Narwadari Act (Bom. Act V of 1862). The first Court held that the plaintiff was a permanent tenant and that his purchase was valid. On appeal by the defendant, the Judge held that a permanent lease was inconsistent with the provisions of the Bhagdari and Narwadari Act (Bom. Act V of 1862), and (even though proved) could not be recognized, having regard solely to s. 83 of the Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879). He therefore found that the plaintiff was a tenant from year to year and modified the decree of the first Court by directing that the injunction should continue until the determination of the tenancy from year to year. On second appeal by the plaintiff: Held, reversing the decree of the Judge and restoring that of the first Court, that on a consideration of the circumstances of the case, and the revenue register and having regard to s. 83 of the Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879), the plaintiff was a permanent tenant. Held, further, that there was nothing in the Bhagdari and Narwadari Act (Bom. Act V of 1862) to prevent a permanent tenant of a Bhagdar from alienating the fruit of the trees growing on the land of which he is a tenant. Per BEAMAN, J.:—S. 3 of the Bhagdari and Narwadari Act (Bom. The disputes led to a suit by the plaintiffs, wherein they failed. Before, however, the period for appeal expired, the parties effected an amicable settlement, by which the defendants gave up their rights in favour of the plaintiffs over half of a survey number, which was a part of a narwa holding governed by the Bhagdari and Narwadari Act (Bombay Act V of 1862). Later on the plaintiffs leased their portion of the land in perpetuity to a third party. The defendants thereupon applied to the Collector, complaining that the plaintiffs had alienated the property contrary to the provisions of the Bhagdari and Narwadari Act (Bombay Act V of 1862), and praying that the alienation being void, they (the defendants) should be placed in possession of the land. The Collector declined to interfere; but, on appeal, the Commissioner held otherwise and directed the defendants to be put in possession of the land. The plaintiffs then filed a suit to recover possession of the land. Held, that, as the effect of the compromise arrived at between the parties was to alienate a portion of a bhag or share in a narwa other than a recognized subdivision of such bhag or share, it was void within the meaning of s. 5 of the Bhagdari and Narwadari Act (Bombay Act V of 1862); that the plaintiff acquired no rights under the compromise, and that therefore they were not entitled to any relief. An appeal from an order passed by the Collector under s. 3 of the Bhagdari and Narwadari Act (Bombay Act V of 1862) lies to the Commissioner. The Collector can take

BHUTAN DUARS ACT (XVI OF 1869).

During their minority their elder brothers sold that jote to the first three defendants in fraud of the rights of the plaintiffs, and the purchasers took possession of the jote accordingly and had entries made in their own names in the record-of-rights. The plaintiffs brought this suit under Act XVI of 1869 against the defendants to recover their share in the jote. The lower Appellate Court, without going into the merits, dismissed the case as not cognizable in view of the provisions of Act XVI of 1869 and the Repealing Act VII of 1895. On appeal therefrom: —Held, that the notification extending the Civil Procedure Code to Jalpaiguri had not the effect of introducing the Civil Procedure Code to the Bhutan Duars, although the latter are a part of Jalpaiguri, inasmuch as Act XVI of 1869, which was then in force in the Bhutan Duars, excluded that jurisdiction in express terms. But the effect of the repeal of Act XVI (without any qualification) by Bengal Act VII of 1895 has left the Civil Procedure to be administered in the Bhutan Duars. That the plaintiffs are not precluded by the entry in the record-of-rights from obtaining relief against the defendants. An entry in a record under Act XVI of 1869 in order to be conclusive evidence of any right, interest, or other matter must be one which has been honestly and fairly obtained. The Court held on the evidence that the deed was proved, and that in this caste a husband was for a sufficient reason, such as incontinence, allowed to divorce his wife; that the deed in the present case had not been executed for a sufficient reason; and that, consequently, the parties entering into a second marriage were guilty of an offence under s. 494 of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860); and that the priest who officiated at that marriage was an abettor under ss. 494 and 109. 10. ——— Marriage with Mahomedan—Mahomedan Law—Marriage—Penal Code, s. 494. The petitioner, originally a Hindu woman and the illegitimate offspring of Chattri parents, was duly married according to Hindu rites to D, who was also by caste a Chattri. Subsequent to the marriage, the petitioner became a convert to Mahomedanism and married a Mahomedan. She was charged with and convicted of an offence under s. 494 of the Penal Code. It was contended on her behalf that (1) the marriage between her and D was invalid under Hindu law by reason of her illegitimacy and the consequent difference of caste between the contracting parties; (2) the marriage between her and D became dissolved under the Hindu law on her conversion to Mahomedanism; and (3) the second marriage was not void under the Mahomedan law by reason of its taking place in the lifetime of D, and that the conviction was therefore erroneous. There was no evidence of any notice having been given to D previous to the second marriage calling on him to become a Mahomedan. Held, that illegitimacy under Hindu law is no absolute disqualification for marriage, and that, when one or both contracting parties to a marriage are illegitimate, the marriage must be regarded as valid, if they are recognized by their caste people as belonging to the same cast. Held, also, that there is no authority in Hindu law for the proposition that an apostate is absolved from all civil obligations, and that, so far as the matrimonial bond is concerned, such a view would be contrary to the spirit of that law, which regards it as indissoluble, and that accordingly the marriage between the petitioner and D was not, under the Hindu law, dissolved by her conversion to Mahomedanism. Rahmed Beebee v. Rokeya Beebee, 1 Norton's Leading Cases on Hindu Law, p. 12, dissented from. Held, further, that, as the validity of the second marriage depended on the Mahomedan law, and as that law does not allow a plurality of husbands, it would be void or valid according as the first marriage was or was not subsisting at the time it took place; that no notice having been given to D as required by Mahomedan law previous to the second marriage, and no recourse having been had to the Courts for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the former marriage was dissolved, and as British India cannot be held to be a foreign country for the purpose of rendering such notice unnecessary, the previous marriage was not dissolved under Mahomedan law, and the subsequent marriage was therefore void. Held, accordingly, that the conviction was right. In the matter of the petition of RAM KUMARI . . I. 11. ——— Mahomedan law—Marriage—Child marriage—Option of minor of repudiating marriage on attaining puberty—Want of ratification after puberty—Penal Code, s. 494. B, a Mahomedan girl whose father was dead, was alleged to have been given in marriage by her mother to J some years before she attained puberty. Prior to her attaining puberty, J was sentenced to a term of imprisonment for theft. While he was in jail, B, after she had attained puberty, contracted a marriage with P. The marriage with J was never consummated. On J being released from jail, he proceeded to prosecute B and P for bigamy and abetment of bigamy, and also charged P with adultery. It appeared that, before taking proceedings, J requested B to return to him, but she refused to do so. The marriage between B and J was sought to be proved by the evidence of J, B's mother, and two witnesses who were said to have been present. B and P were both convicted. Held, on appeal, that the evidence of the marriage between B and J was insufficient to justify a conviction in the absence of proof that a Molla was present at the ceremony, or that the sigha required to be recited at the marriage of minors was recited, or the akd performed. Held, further, that, assuming B to have been given in marriage to J when a mere child by her mother, she had the option of either ratifying or repudiating such marriage on attaining puberty. Under the Shia law, such a marriage is of no effect until it has been ratified by the minor, and under the Sunni law it is effective till cancelled by the minor. Under both schools of law, the minor has the absolute power, on attaining puberty, to ratify or cancel an unauthorized marriage, though under the Sunni law ratification is presumed if the girl remains silent after attaining puberty and allows the marriage to be consummated. Held, on the facts of the case, that the circumstances afforded sufficient indication, even assuming the girl to be governed by the Sunni law, that she never ratified the marriage. Held, also, that a judicial order was not necessary to effect the cancellation of the marriage. The bill fell due on December 3rd, 1870, which was a Saturday, and on that day the plaintiff sent his jemadar to C N & Co., the acceptors, to present the bill for payment. The bill was taken by A, one of the members of the firm of C N & Co., who gave a cheque for the amount, and took a receipt from the plaintiff's jemadar, striking out the signature of C N & Co. as acceptors, but without the plaintiff's consent. The plaintiff's jemadar took the cheque immediately to the bank, but the bank was closed. Thereupon he returned to C N & Co., and informed them that the bank was closed and demanded cash. The plaintiff alleged that it was then stated that the cheque would be honoured on Monday. The plaintiff's jemadar then went and informed the gomashta of the plaintiff of what had been done. The plaintiff's gomashta sent him to the defendant's firm to give him notice of what had taken place. It was alleged that at this interview the defendant's liability was admitted in case the cheque was not honoured, and the plaintiff's jemadar was advised to wait until Monday, the defendant stating that he also had a cheque for R7,000 from C N & Co. This was denied by the defendant. On Monday, 5th December, the cheque was presented to the bank for payment, and was dishonoured. The plaintiff's gomashta went to the defendant's koti, and gave notice of the dishonour of the bill and cheque, and asked him to pay the amount of the bill. The defendant asked for the bill, and the plaintiff's gomashta went to C N & Co., and brought back the bill, with the name of C N & Co., which had been struck out, replaced. The defendant, seeing the bill was overdue, refused to pay the amount. The cheque was thereupon returned to C N & Co., and the bill retained by the plaintiff, who, on 6th December, caused written notice of dishonour to be given to the defendant. Held, that the cheque must be taken to have been merely a conditional payment, and when it was dishonoured, the liability of the original bill revived. Held, also, that reasonable notice of dishonour was given, whether the bill be taken to have been dishonoured on the Saturday or on the Monday. In May 1876, A, by letter, agreed to execute a mortgage of a certain portion of his property, consisting of a share in a Privy Council decree, to B, and in the meantime to hold such property at the disposal of B, his successors and assigns. In the month of June 1876, A became unable to meet his liabilities, and in the month of August following executed a conveyance of all his property to the Official Trustee upon trust for the benefit of A's creditors. The bank assented to and executed this deed after it had been assented to and executed by some of the other creditors. The deed did not contain any composition with or release by the creditors, nor any covenant on their part not to sue A. In a suit by the bank against B as acceptor of the bills: Held, that B was not precluded by the provisions of s. 132 of the Contract Act and s. 92 of the Evidence Act from pleading that he was an accommodation aeceptor only; but held that the letter of May 1876 constituted a good equitable mortgage, and that B was not thereafter entitled, as against the bank, to the equitable rights of an accommodation acceptor. Held, further, that the trust did not impair the "eventual remedy" of B, and that therefore he was not discharged from his suretyship under the provisions of s. 139 of the Contract Act. 7. ——— Failure of payment at sight —Liability of parties to draft—Effect of acceptance. Immediately on failure of payment of a draft at sight, whatever may be the real state of the account between the drawer and drawee, the former becomes liable to the payee for the amount which would place him at the stipulated time and place in the same position as if the money had been duly paid. Where there is no acceptance, no cause of action can arise to the payee against the drawee. Nor is the legal relation between the drawer and the payee altered by a partial acceptance, the contract being in its nature indivisible; much less can any mere promise to pay part at a future time in any way satisfy the payee's claim, or postpone his right to reimbursement of his loss from the drawer. 8. ——— Suit on Bill by indorsee for value against acceptor—Sale by indorsee of goods against which bill drawn—Acceptor entitled to credit for amount of proceeds of sale. J consigned goods to defendant, and for the price drew on the defendant two bills of exchange, each for the sum of ₹1,406-4-0, payable thirty days after sight, which were duly accepted by defendant. J indorsed the bills for value to the plaintiffs, who, in default of payment by defendant, sold the goods and credited him with the amount realized. After giving him credit for the amount, there remained due by the defendant to the plaintiffs, in respect of the said bills, a sum of ₹1,017. The plaintiffs abandoned ₹17 of this amount, and sued the defendant for ₹1,000 in the Small Cause Court at Bombay. In that suit the defendant pleaded that the goods, in respect of which the bills were drawn, were damaged, and that he had, therefore, refused to accept them as he was entitled to do. The Judge thereupon dismissed the suit on the authority of Shortt v. Abdul Rohiman, 6 Bom. O. C. 53, holding that the plaintiffs could not under the circumstances, give the defendant credit for the goods, and that the claim was not, therefore, within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. The plaintiffs then brought the present suit in the High Court upon the bills of exchange alleging that they held the proceeds of the goods for the consignor. The defendant contended that in no case could the plaintiffs recover from him more than the amount of the bills, less the proceeds of the goods. Held, that the defendant was entitled to credit for the net proceeds of the sale of the goods. The plaintiffs had by the sale already realized part of the amount due to them; and to allow them now to recover from the defendant the whole amount due on the bills would be to permit them to realize this part of their claim a second time: in that case they would be bound to hand over the amount so realized to the drawers. But the drawers, when they negotiated the bills with the plaintiffs, got all they were entitled to, and would have to account, in equity, to the defendant for anything further obtained by them. Held, therefore, that the defendant was exonerated to the amount of the proceeds of the goods, but was liable for the remainder of the sum claimed by the plaintiffs. And where the money realized by the sale was wrongfully applied by the agent, it was held by the Judicial Committee (affirming the judgment of the Court at Calcutta) that the remitter was entitled to recover the value of the bills in assumpsit, upon an indebitatus count from the purchaser of them, who had notice of the purpose for which they were remitted, and the misapplication of the proceeds by the agent. The bill was on the following terms:—"The New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited, Mauritius, 29th April 1889. To the New Oriental Bank Corporation, Limited, Bombay." E sent the bill by registered post to Bombay addressed to the plaintiff. During its transmission it was stolen. On the 18th May it was presented by some person to the defendant's Bank in Bombay bearing a forged endorsement in blank of the plaintiff, and it was paid by the Bank. The plaintiff, as soon as he heard of the loss of the bill, made inquiry at the Bank, and was told that the bill had been paid. On being shown the endorsement, the plaintiff pronounced it to be a forgery, and demanded payment of the bill, which the Bank refused. He thereupon filed this suit against the Bank as drawers of the bill. Held, (1) that the document was an " ambiguous instrument " within the meaning of s. 17 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), and that the plaintiff had elected to treat it as a bill of exchange. (2) That, treating the document as a bill of exchange, the defendants, as drawers, were discharged by the payment to the de facto holder who presented it for payment. 1. ———— Varying bill of lading— Shipping order—Custom. In a suit instituted by a shipper to obtain bills of lading from the captain in accordance with the terms of the order granted by the ship's charterers : Held, that the captain was entitled to vary the bills of lading in respect of any excess of measurement over the dimensions specified in the order, and that an alleged custom, precluding such variation, after the goods have been received on boardship, was contrary to law. It is the duty of the shipper to comply strictly with the terms of the shipping order. GENTLE v. THOMSON . . . 1 Ind. Jur. O. S. 69

The steamer arrived in port late on Saturday, and sailed at daybreak on Monday withoutdelivering the specie shipped by the plaintiff, who sued for damages. Held, that the Lord's Day Act, 29 Chas. II, ch. 7, did not apply to Moulmein ; and that, even if it had done so, it could not prevent the shipowners from availing themselves of the stipulation they had made, and that no action for damages was maintainable against them. from the insufficiency of the address or package." The plaintiff shipped for conveyance from Hong-Kong to Bombay certain goods on board a steamer of the defendants in packages which were proved to be insufficient. These goods, in accordance with a condition to that effect contained in the bill of lading, were transhipped at Galle. On their being landed in Bombay it was found that all the packages were broken, and in a much more damaged condition than is usual in the case of such goods carried from Hong-Kong to Bombay in similar packages. The contents had to a large extent escaped from the packages, but were otherwise uninjured. Held, that, under a bill of lading in the above form, the onus of proving that the packages were insufficient and that the injury which they had sustained was the consequence of such insufficiency lay upon the defendants, but that, when the result of the evidence on both sides was to leave it in doubt whether the injury was caused by negligence or was the consequence of the insufficiency of the packages, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. 6. ——— Insufficiency of package—Negligence—Mercantile Usage, evidence of. The defendants carry between Hong-Kong and Bombay. By a condition annexed to their bill of lading they stipulated that they should not be responsible for damage to goods arising from insufficiency of package. The plaintiff shipped certain goods in the defendants' steamer in packages which, though in fact insufficient, were packages of the kind ordinarily used for the conveyance of such goods from Hong-Kong to Bombay. On their being landed in Bombay it was found that the packages were more or less broken, and the contents were in some instances injured, and had to a small extent escaped from the packages. In an action brought to recover damages in respect of such injury, it was held that evidence of mercantile usage or of custom would be admissible to show that the words "insufficiency of package" should not be taken in their ordinary sense, but as meaning insufficient according to a special custom of the China trade. Held, also, that the evidence of those packages being ordinary China packages, and of such packages having always been carried by the defendants without objection, was not sufficient in the absence of proof of negligence, to fix the defendants with liability for damage done to them, there being no proof that it had been the practice either of the defendants or any other ship-owners protected by a similar clause in their bill of lading to make compensation for injury to goods contained in such packages. When the ship arrived at port, the consignee not having had his own boats alongside, the goods were put into other boats, one of which, through the negligence of the boatmen, was swamped and the contents damaged. Plaintiff sued for damages. Held, that, as defendants were not shown to have neglected the duty of taking reasonable and proper care in the selection of boats, they were not liable for the loss incurred. 8. ——— Exemption from damage occasioned by neglect of Company's servants—Suit to recover goods destroyed—Contract Act, s. 151. The plaintiff shipped two plate-glass show-cases from Calcutta to Rangoon by a steamer of the defendant company, and signed a bill of lading which contained the following clause:—"Carried and delivered subject to the conditions after mentioned . . loss or damage for any act, neglect, or default whatsoever of the pilot, master, or mariners or other servants of the company, etc., excepted." In landing the two cases, one of them was entirely destroyed owing to the carelessness of the company's servants. The plaintiff sued the company, setting out that the damage was occasioned by the negligence of the company's servants. The defendant company (who were not subject to the Carriers Act) relied on the abovementioned clause in their bill of lading. Held, that the defendant company were protected by their bill of lading, the terms of which had been accepted by the plaintiff. 9. ——— Liability of master—Negligence—Onus probandi—Estoppel. The defendant, master of the steamer Scindia, signed a bill of lading, by which he agreed with C & Co. of London to deliver at Calcutta to them or their order four casks of brass wire, which were shipped on board the Scindia. The casks were described in the bill of lading as bearing a certain mark beneath which was the word "Calcutta" as being the port of destination, and they were stated as being carried subject to the following exceptions:—"The ship is not liable for obliteration or absence of marks, numbers, address or description of goods shipped: and expenses and losses by detention of ship or cargo, caused by incorrect marking, or by incomplete or incorrect description of contents, shall be borne by the owners of the goods. In case any part of the within goods cannot be found during the ship's stay at the port of destination, they are, when found to be sent back by first steamer at the ship's risk and expense, and subject to any proved claim for loss of market. The ship shall not be liable for incorrect delivery, unless each package shall have been distinctly marked by the shippers before shipment with the port of destination." The bill of lading was endorsed by C & Co. to the plaintiff, a trader in Calcutta, who, on the arrival of the Scindia at that port, applied for delivery of the four casks; and it then appeared that they had been landed at Colombo. In a suit to recover the price of the goods: Held, that the defendant was estopped from alleging that the casks were not marked as stated in the bill of lading. It was open, however, to the defendant to prove that the casks did not on their arrival at Colombo bear the word "Calcutta," and thus to bring himself within the clause in the bill of lading exempting the ship from liability for obliteration or absence of marks; but on proof of this, in order to disentitle the plaintiff to succeed, the defendant must show that the absence or obliteration caused the landing at Colombo. It was found on the evidence that he had failed to do this, and a decree was given for the plaintiff MADHUB CHUNDER DEY v. LAW

10. ——— Stowage—Negligence of the crew or other servants of the ship—Period of loading covered by the contract of carriage—Fitness or unfitness of the ship. The plaintiffs shipped certain bags of sugar on the 11th and 12th November 1887, on board the defendants' ship The Byculla for conveyance to Bombay. There being a dispute as to the number of bags shipped, no mate's receipts were given, and no bill of lading was signed until the 28th November. The Byculla started on her voyage on the 15th November, and duly delivered the sugar in Bombay. The sugar, however, was found to be damaged by water which was due to its having been stowed in immediate proximity to a quantity of wet timber. The plaintiffs sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for the damage so caused. The defendants sheltered themselves under the terms of the exemptive clause in their bill of lading of the 28th November, which clause ran as follows:—"The act of God, the Queen's enemies . . . . . and all the perils, dangers, accidents of the sea, ... and accidents, loss, or damage from any act, neglect, or default whatsoever of the pilot, master, or mariners, or other servants of the Company, or from any deviation, excepted." The plaintiffs contended that a bill of lading did not relate to or cover the period of loading, and that, even if it did, the exception relied upon in this bill of lading related only to negligence subsequent to the commencement of the voyage. They also contended that the ship was not a ship "reasonably fit for the voyage" within the meaning of the rule laid down in Steel v. The State Line Steamship Company, L. R. 3 Ap. Ca. 72. In the Small Cause Court judgment was given in plaintiffs' favour. On appeal to the High Court on the case stated, this judgment was reversed. Held, that this was not a case to which the rule laid down in Steel v. The State Line Steamship Company, L. R. 3 Ap. Ca. 72, applied, as there was no question here of any defect inherent in the ship. It was simply a case of negligent and improper stowage. Held, further, following Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Co. v. Baker, 7 Bom. O. C. 186, that the reasonable mode of construing the contract evidenced by a bill of lading was to hold the exceptions to be co-extensive with the liability, and that there was no evidence to be found in this bill of lading of any other intention. Held, further, that the goods were covered by the bill of lading from the time they were put on board to be loaded; consequently, the defendants were protected from liability under the exemptive clause. The Duero, 2 A. & E. 393, and Hayes v. *Cuttiford, L. 12. ——— Liability for loss—Absence of negligence. A & Co. at Madras shipped by the B. I. S. N. steamer Mahratta a box of coral, to be delivered to their Agent M at Bimlipatam. At the time of shipment they declared the value and paid enhanced freight on account of such value. By the bill of lading the company undertook to deliver the case in good order at Bimlipatam to the consignee M, subject to certain conditions annexed. By one of these conditions, if the consignee did not take delivery when the ship was ready to discharge, the goods might be warehoused at the merchant's risk, and the company's liability was to cease when the goods left the ship's side. The consignee did not take delivery at the ship's side, and the company's agent at Bimlipatam took the case to the Custom House, as he was bound to do by the regulations of the port. If the Superintendent of the Custom House had known that the case contained corals, it would have been placed in an inner room, but the company's agent did not know the contents of the case, and therefore was unable to give any such information to the Superintendent. While the case was lying at the Custom House, application was made on plaintiff's behalf to the company's agent for delivery of the case upon the usual guarantee. The agent refused to deliver the case without the production of the bill of lading. Afterwards the bill of lading was received from Madras, and the case was delivered up. 13. ——— Declaration of value and nature of contents. A was the consignee and holder of a bill of lading signed by B at Bombay, as master of the steam-vessel John Bright, for the safe carriage and delivery of a box addressed to A, which in fact contained diamonds of the value of ₹11,670, three rubies, and three emeralds, in all of the value of ₹15,940. On the face of the bill of lading was printed, "This bill of lading is issued subject to the following conditions." One condition was that a "written declaration of the contents and value of the goods is required by the owner, and must be delivered by the shipper to the owner's agents with the bills of lading. A wrong description of contents or false declaration of value shall release the owner from all responsibility in case of loss, etc., and the goods shall be charged double freight on the real value, which freight shall be paid previous to delivery." The declaration in this case was contained in the following letter from the shipper to the agent of the ship-owner:—"Dear Sir, Be good enough to give me an order for a small box containing diamonds to the value of about ₹14,000, to be shipped on board the steamer John Bright for Calcutta. Yours etc." The box was lost by the negligence of B or his servants. In a suit by A to recover "the value of the goods, viz., ₹14,000": Held, that all the shipowner was entitled to was that the shipper should make a declaration of what bonâ fide he believed to be the value. The declaration as to contents was not vitiated by the omission to enumerate all the different species of articles contained in the box. Upon the evidence, the declaration as to the value and nature of the contents was bonâ fide; therefore A was entitled to recover the value of the diamonds lost. 14. ——— Leakage—Breakage—Damage caused by leakage from other goods. Piece-goods were carried from London to Bombay under a bill of lading, the exceptions in which protected the master from "leakage, breakage, rust, decay, loss, or damage from machinery, boilers . . . misfeasance, error in judgment, negligence or default of . . . persons in the service of the ship . . . and the ship not being liable for any consequences of causes therein excepted, however originating." The piece-goods, on their arrival in Bombay, were found to be damaged by oil and by chafing,—i.e., by rubbing against other goods in the hold,—but there was no evidence to show how such damage was occasioned. Held, that the term "leakage" did not include leakage from other goods on to the piece-goods, nor did "breakage" include damage caused by chafing, and that, as no negligence was proved, the master

15. ——— Leakage, damage done by—Provision for place of claim, effect of, on jurisdiction of Court. Plaintiff shipped some bales of cloth from Calcutta to Rangoon under a bill of lading by which the defendants were bound to deliver,—accidents, loss or damages from fire, machinery, boilers, steam, and all the accidents of the sea, rivers, land-carriage and steam navigation, etc., excepted. On the voyage one of the boilers burst, and steam and water escaping, some of the bales were damaged. Held, that the damage was within the exceptions of the bill of lading, and therefore that the defendants were not liable to make good the loss. Quære: Whether notwithstanding the exceptions in the bill of lading, the defendants might not have been made liable in a suit on the implied warranty if it had been proved as a fact that the boiler was not reasonably fit for the voyage. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. IBRAHIM MOOSUM . 8. W. R. 35

16. ——— Exception in bill of lading—Seaworthiness—Suit for damage to goods by leakage while ship in dock. The plaintiff's goods were loaded in the defendants' steamer then lying in dock to be carried from Bombay to certain ports in East Africa. At the time of loading, the ship was apparently in a sound and seaworthy condition. Two days after the goods had been put on board, and when the ship was still in dock, it sprung a leak, and the water came into the hold and damaged the plaintiff's goods. The ship was taken to the dry dock, the cargo was shifted, and the leak repaired. It appeared that the leak had arisen from the fact that one of the plates of the ship had been worn thin in one particular spot, so that, when the cargo was put on board, and the ship lay deeper in the water, the pressure became so great that a hole was made, and the water rushed in. The plaintiff sued the defendants for damages. The defendants pleaded (1) that the ship was in a seaworthy condition when the goods were put on board; (2) that they were protected by the bill of lading, which contained the following exception, viz., "Accident, loss and damage from vermin, barratry, jettison, collision, fire, machinery, boilers, steam and all the perils, dangers and accidents of the sea, rivers, land-carriage and steam navigation of whatever nature and kind and accident, loss or damage from any act, neglect or default whatsoever of the pilot, master or mariners or other servants of the Company or from any deviation excepted." Held, that the defendants were liable. While the ship was in dock, it was not seaworthy, and the exception in the bill of lading did not limit the implied warranty of seaworthiness. lading, "goods were to be delivered from the ship's tackles as fast as the steamer could discharge, failing which the agents were to be at liberty to land the goods at their godowns;" the bill of lading further, among other exceptions, provided "that the shipowners should not be liable for loss by fire." The steamer, on arriving at the port of discharge, came alongside the wharf, and commenced unloading at the Custom-house godowns without giving the consignees the option of landing the goods from the ship's tackle. The consignees, however, did not object to the goods being landed at the godowns, and they paid, also without objection, a sum for the wharfage of a part of the goods in their godowns. Held, that the ship-owners, if the goods placed in the godowns were in their possession as carriers, were protected under the clause of the bill of lading providing against fire, as much as if the fire had occurred on boardship; and, on the other hand, if the goods were in the possession of the ship-owners as wharfingers, they were not liable for the loss, inasmuch as the goods were destroyed by fire without any default on their part. 18. ——— Charges for landing and wharfage—Liability of consignees. A bill of lading, given by the defendants to the plaintiff for certain goods, contained a stipulation that the goods were to be taken from the steamer's tackles by the consignees as fast as the steamer could discharge, failing which the steamer's agents were to be at liberty to land the same into godowns; the cost of lighterage, godown rents, etc., thereby incurred to be borne by the respective consignees. Held, that under this bill of lading the ship-owners were entitled to charge for landing and wharfage, only in default of the consignees failing to take the good from the steamer's tackles within reasonable time. Held (per PONTIFEX, J.), that for the speedy discharge of their vessel the ship-owners were entitled to land and wharf the goods, though not to charge for landing and wharfage, unless the plaintiff had had an opportunity of landing the goods himself. 19. ——— Loss by fire before delivery—Exemption from liability. The defendant received goods on board his steamer under a bill of lading which exempted him from liability for loss occasioned "by the act of God, the Queen's enemies, fire, and all and every other dangers and accidents of the seas, rivers, and navigation of whatsoever kind or nature," and lawfully landed them on the Custom-house Bunder at Bombay, where they were accidentally burned before they were delivered to the consignee. Held, that he was protected by the above exception in the bill of lading. 20. ——— Delivery in dock—"Landing or cranage charges"—Practice of dock to recover from consignee—Liability of ship-owner. Certain boilers consigned to the plaintiff in Bombay were shipped at Liverpool in two steamers belonging to the same owners, under two bills of lading in these terms: "Shipped in good order and condition, etc., to be delivered, subject to the exceptions and conditions hereinafter mentioned, in the like good order and condition, from the ship's tackles (where the ship's responsibility shall cease) at the aforesaid port of Bombay," etc. One of the exceptions and conditions above referred to was as follows:—"The ship-owner shall have the option of discharging in dock, and of making delivery of the goods under the bills of lading either over the ship's side or from lighters, or a store-ship, or Custom-house, or warehouse, at merchant's risk." Freight was prepaid in Liverpool. On their arrival at Bombay, the two steamers went into the Prince's Dock, belonging to the Port Trust, and discharged the boilers, by means of the Port Trust cranes, on to the dock wharves. The plaintiff subsequently sent to remove the boilers, but was not allowed by the dock authorities to do so until he had paid to them various sums, amounting in the aggregate to R930, on account, as stated in the bill furnished him by the Port Trust, of "landing charges" for the said boilers. The bills also contained certain additional charges for "wharfage." These the plaintiff was ready to pay, but the "landing charges" he paid only under protest, and in order to get possession of his goods, and now sought to recover the same from the defendants, who represented the ship-owners. It was the practice of the Port Trust to recover these charges in all cases from the consignees of goods discharged in their dock, and the charge was said to be levied on all goods landed on the wharves of the dock, whether by the dock's cranes or by the ship's own tackles. The charge was incurred the moment the goods touched the wharf. In their rates, sanctioned by Government, which by their Act the Port Trust were entitled to charge, this charge was called, not a "landing charge," but a "dock and cranage" charge. Had the plaintiff been given delivery of these goods in the stream, and afterwards himself landed them at any wharf belonging to the Port Trust in the Port of Bombay, the Port Trust would have sought to have made the same charge for allowing the goods to be landed, whether that was done by their appliances or not. Held, that the ship-owner, and not the consignee, was bound to pay these charges, they being in reality charges for work and labour done in and about the landing of the goods—an operation which, under the bills of lading, was within the duty of the ship-owner. Per LATHAM, J.—The ship having elected to discharge in the dock, it was her duty to land the goods on the wharf. Every charge which had to be incurred before that could be done was a charge an-

21. ——— "Weight, contents, and value unknown"—Act IX of 1856, s. 3—Assignee of bill of lading for value. A bill of lading purporting to be for 50 tons of coal and containing a printed clause, "weight, contents, and value unknown," and similar words written above the signature of the master, does not amount to an admission by the master that he has received 50 tons of coal on board. Upon the true construction of the Bills of Lading Act (IX of 1856), s. 3, a bill of lading in the above form is not, in the hands of a consignee for value, conclusive evidence against the master of the shipment of 50 tons. NICOL & CO. v. CASTLE. . . . 9 Bom. 321

22. ——— Freight, payment of—Incorporation in bill of lading of terms of charter-party—Cargo—Freight payable on intake measurement—Measurement at port of delivery—Discrepancy in measurements—Evidence—Burden of proof—Suit by consignee for excess freight. K V at Moulmein consigned to the plaintiff at Bombay 135 logs of teak timber shipped on board the defendant's ship. The bill of lading, which was signed by the defendant, described the logs as marked K V, and measuring tons 115-12-10, and it provided for the payment of freight thereon at Bombay, at the rate of R17 per ton of 50 cubic feet on right delivery. The last clause of the bill of lading was in the handwriting of the defendant, and was as follows:—"Marks, number, quantity, and measurement unknown: all other conditions as per charter-party." The charter-party was expressed to be between the owners of the ship and Messrs. B of Rangoon as charterers of the whole ship, and provided for the payment of freight "at the rate of R18 per ton of 50 cubic feet for all timber, one rate throughout except 100 tons broken stowage at half freight, by intake measurement." On arrival of the ship at Bombay, the plaintiff, as consignee of the timber and holder of the bill of lading, paid the defendant (the captain of the ship) R1,500 on account of freight, and took delivery of the 135 logs. On measuring them he found that, according to his method of measurement, the total measurement of the 135 logs came only to tons 58-27-11-6, and not tons 115-12-10 as mentioned in the bill of lading. He claimed, therefore, to be chargeable with freight only on the smaller quantity (viz., R995-8), and to recover from the defendant the difference (viz., R504-8) between that sum and R1,500 paid on account as for an overpayment of freight. It was proved that all the timber on board has been measured at Moulmein by an employé of the charterers acting apparently as agent of all the different shippers, and that the measurements in the bills of lading were supplied by this person to the defendant as the measurements of the different consignments. It was also proved that the 135 logs received and measured by the plaintiff in Bombay were the same logs that were shipped under the bill of lading, and that the plaintiff's measurement of them was correct according to the mode of measurement which he adopted. There was no evidence as to what was the mode of measurement followed at Moulmein, nor, except the statements in the bill of lading, as to what was the actual intake measurement of the timber there. Held, that the effect of the last clause in the bill of lading was to incorporate into that document the clause of the charter-party which provided that freight should be payable on the intake measurement; that the burden of proving what the intake measurement actually was lay upon the plaintiff, who sought to recover back money which he alleged he had paid in excess of what was due; and that, in the absence of such evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, the statement of quantity contained in the bill of lading was primâ facie evidence of the intake measurement of the timber. 23. ——— Freight, payment of—Lien of ship-owner. Where a bill of lading, dated at the port of shipment, contains the words "freight for the said goods being paid here," it operates as a receipt for the freight. The ship-owner is not bound to deliver the same to the shipper until payment of the sum to be charged for the carriage of the goods; but such sum is not freight, and the ship-owner has no lien for the amount upon the goods, nor the bill of lading which represents them. SOOMAR JAFFER v. ABDOOL KURREEM . 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 230

24. ——— Freight, lien for, on Cargo—Advances on account of freight—Master's lien for freight—Charter-party. By a charter-party made in London, the ship W was chartered to carry a cargo from Liverpool to Calcutta, where she was to load from the factors of the charterer a full homeward cargo to be carried by her to Europe. Freight for the whole round, out and home, was made payable on safe delivery of the homeward cargo, but at so much per ton of the outward cargo delivered in Calcutta. The master was to have a lien on the cargo for freight, etc., cash not exceeding £800 was to be advanced to the ship in Calcutta on account of freight, but subject to insurance; and £600 was to be advanced by the charterer's acceptance at three months, or in cash under discount, at charterer's option, on the sailing of the vessel from Liverpool, less five per cent. for insurance. The charterer himself loaded the ship, and the master signed a bill of lading which declared the cargo to be shipped by the charterer to be delivered at Calcutta, as the agents of the charterer might direct, unto order or to his assigns, freight to be paid as per charter-party. In the margin of the bill was written, "Received in advance of the within freight, £600 as per charter-party." The £600 had been paid, not in cash, but by the charterer's bill at three months. The charterer became bankrupt and the bill was dishonoured, and the fact of the bankruptcy and dishonour was known in Calcutta when the ship arrived there. On the ship's arrival in Calcutta, J O & Co., who were the holders for value of the bill of lading, demanded delivery of the cargo. The master claimed a right of lien, and refused to deliver unless J O & Co. would pay the £600 bill which had been dishonoured, and would further advance £800 for the ship's use, and load a homeward cargo, according to the terms of the charter-party. Held, that J O & Co. took the bill of lading with notice of the charter-party, but that, under the circumstances, the master had no lien, and was bound to deliver the cargo to J O & Co. OGLE v. NASHHOLM . . . . Bourke O. C. 171

25. ——————— Freight, lien for, on Cargo—Advances on account of freight—Lien of owners. Goods were shipped deliverable to the order of the shippers or their assigns. The bill of lading stated that "freight for said goods was to be paid as per charter-party, with average accustomed, reserving lien in full on cargo for full amount as stipulated therein." The charter-party showed "that H & Co. undertook to supply a full cargo for the ship, and that R H, agent for the ship, agreed with H & Co. that the said ship should proceed to London dock, or any other suitable dock, for loading salt at party's option, or so near thereto as she can safely get, to be at all times afloat and in safety, and then load for the charterer's agent a full and complete cargo of salt, not exceeding what the master considers sufficient cargo, which the charterers engage to ship, not exceeding what she can reasonably carry with her stores, provisions, and furniture, and being so loaded shall therewith proceed to Calcutta, or so near thereto as she may safely get, and there deliver as per bills of lading, and on being paid freight at the rate of twenty-three shillings per ton." The freight to be paid thus: "£500 by charterer's acceptance at two months on sailing, less 2½ per cent. insurance; or cash on sailing, less 5 per cent. interest and insurance, at charterer's option, and the balance in cash on delivery as master requires, at current rate of exchange; 2 per cent. commission to charterers in lieu of consignment." Held, that "a sum of money payable before the arrival of the ship at her port of discharge and payable by the shippers of the goods at the port of shipment, is not freight in the strict legal acceptation of the term, with all the incidents of freight in giving the ship-owner the right of lien, unless it is stipulated for." Here the owners had a lien upon the goods for freight, notwithstanding that the bill of exchange for £500 had been given. THOMAS v. OGLE . Bourke A. O. C. 100

26. ——————— Freight, lien for, on Cargo—Advances on account of freight—Dishonour of bills. The captain of a ship has no lien on the cargo in respect of a portion of the freight stipulated to be advanced, and advanced by bills afterwards dishonoured, nor in respect of a portion of the freight stipulated to be advanced at the port of discharge. A lien cannot arise in any case when the master has not a right to retain the goods till the freight is paid. Such advances are not freight, but advances to be made under discount, and upon the security of the captain's bill on the freighter. The master has no lien at law or in equity in respect of breaches of covenants in the charter-party, other than those relating to the payment of freight for goods actually carried. 27. ——————— Claim for short delivery—Place for preferring claim—Condition precedent. Where a bill of lading contained a clause to the following effect:—"Any claim for short delivery or damage done to goods, and all other claims whatsoever, to be made at the port of Calcutta, and at no other port, and the goods are shipped and this bill of lading granted subject to this express condition," it was held by the Recorder of Rangoon to operate so as to make the preferring of a claim in Calcutta—a condition precedent to a suit in this Court. Held, by the High Court that this opinion was correct, and that a suit for short delivery under the bill of lading could not be maintained without a claim being made in Calcutta MAHOMED ISHMAILJEE NADA v. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY . 9 W. 28. ——————— Short delivery of goods—No evidence as to how goods were lost—Burden of proof—"Or otherwise," meaning of. The plaintiff was the consignee of a large consignment of goods shipped from Bombay in bags on board the defendants' steamship Java for carriage to Zanzibar. On arrival of the Java at Zanzibar, the goods were landed by the defendant company and placed in the Customs godown, where the plaintiff in due course demanded delivery. Some of the bags were not forthcoming, but the evidence did not show how the loss had occurred. The bill of lading contained the following condition:—"The Company's liability shall cease as soon as the packages are free of the ship's tackle, after which they shall not be responsible for any loss or damage, however caused. If stored in receiving ship, godown or upon any wharf, all risks of fire, dacoity, vermin or otherwise shall be with the merchant, and the usual charges shall be paid before delivery of the goods. Fire insurance will be covered by the company's agents on application." In a suit brought by the plaintiff for short delivery of goods: Held, that the defendants were liable. They did not show how the loss occurred, and as it might have occurred from causes not covered by the exception (e.g., from misdelivery), they did not bring themselves within the protection afforded by the exemption. The general words "or otherwise" contained in the tenth clause of the bill of lading could not be read so as to cover all possible losses, for that would make them include wilful misconduct on the part of the defendant's servants, and general words are not read with such an extended meaning. Nor would

they include misdelivery, for that was provided for in the eighth clause. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. RATANSI RAMJI

29. _____ Claim for short delivery—Place for preferring claim. A bill of lading contained a provision that any claim for short delivery or for damage done to goods should be made at the port of Calcutta, and not elsewhere. Held, that this clause did not affect the plaintiff's right of suit in the Court at Rangoon, and that, if the defendants meant to object that no claim had been made in Calcutta before the commencement of the suit, they should have done so in proper time, viz., in their written statement. An objection on that ground taken for the first time at the hearing of the appeal was disallowed. BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. IBRAHIM MOOSUM . . . . . 8. W. R. 35

30. _____ Claim for short delivery to be made at a certain place within a certain time—Reasonable condition—Common carrier, liability of—Carriers Act, III of 1865. A stipulation by persons carrying on extensive business as carriers that they should be apprised of claims made on them for default on the part of their seryants, at a specified place and no other, and within a time which will render enquiry likely to be attended with some result, is not unreasonable. The defendants were owners of a fleet of steamships plying periodically along the coast of British India, by which they undertook to convey for freight parcels of goods for all persons indifferently from and to specified ports. They stipulated in their bills of lading that claims for short delivery should be made at the port of Calcutta only, within one month after delivery, of any portion of the goods entered in the bill of lading. Held, in a suit against defendants for compensation for value of goods short delivered, that this was not an unreasonable stipulation, and that a claim made on the agents of the defendants, who were authorized only to retain the goods, receive freight, and give delivery, was not a sufficient compliance with the condition. Held, also, that defendants were common carriers, though not for the purposes of the Indian Carriers Act, and that their character of carriers continued so long as the goods remained in their hands and undelivered. 31. _____ Delivery of goods to consignee—Cargo unclaimed on arrival of ship—Rights of ship-owner to land goods—Damages by rain—Madras Harbour Trust Act (Madras Act II of 1886). The defendant's steamship arrived at Madras on 4th December 1891, bringing bags of grain consigned to the plaintiffs under a bill of lading by which the defendants were to have the option of delivering the goods into a receiving ship or landing them at consignee's risk and expense, and their liability was to cease when the goods were free of the ship's tackle. The plaintiffs, on the date of the arrival of the goods, were not authorized to receive them. The plaintiffs set up a custom that cargo of this description ought to be landed on the beach; but as this could not be done in the absence of the consignees, the defendants landed it the same day on the pier and delivered it into the custody of the Madras Harbour Trust for storage, pending delivery to the consignees. On the 8th of December 1891, heavy rain fell, and on the same date plaintiffs learnt that the cargo had been delivered on the pier. When the plaintiffs came to take delivery on that day, a considerable portion had been damaged by rain, for which they now sued the defendants. Held, (i) that where the consignees were unable to take delivery in the ordinary way on the beach, the master of a ship has the option of landing and warehousing the goods, and that delivery to the Harbour Trust for custody was not wrongful; (ii) that in the absence of proof that the defendants were negligent, or that they failed to deliver the goods, the suit must be dismissed. 32. _____ Condition requiring notice of claim within prescribed period—Waiver of condition—Limitation—Acknowledgment—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 19, Sch. II, Art. 31—Carrier. Plaintiff delivered 200 casks of oil to the defendants, for carriage per S.S. Moshtari from Bombay to Jeddah. The bill of lading stated that the goods were shipped subject to the condition that any claim for short delivery, etc., should be made in writing in Bombay within two months of date of steamer's arrival at port of consignment. The S.S. Moshtari left Bombay on the 13th June, 1900, and arrival at Jeddah on the 11th July, 1900, and 35 cases of the plaintiff's oil were short delivered. On the 18th October, 1900, the defendants' agents at Jeddah issued a shortage certificate to the plaintiff, and on its receipt the plaintiff, on the 15th November, 1900, made a claim in writing on the defendants in Bombay for the 35 cases short delivered. In July, 1901, the plaintiff called on the defendants and stated that the cases had never been offered to the consignee at Jeddah, and the defendants, at his request, wrote a letter, dated the 18th July, 1901, to their agents at Jeddah, referring the matter to them in order that they might "settle matters with him by re-offering the cases in question and withdrawing the certificate, and hoping the matter would be satisfactorily settled." This letter was given to the plaintiff, to be presented by him. Nothing was, however, gained by sending this letter, and on the 20th December, 1901, at the plaintiff's request, the defendants again wrote to their agents at Jeddah, stating that 35 cases had been short delivered, but that they had been traced and would be reshipped to Jeddah, and requesting the agents "to offer same to the consignee and take back the shortage certificate." This letter also was entrusted to the plaintiff for presentation. On the 28th January, 1902, the plaintiff filed this suit to recover R750 damages for the non-delivery of the 35 cases. The defendants contended (inter alia) that the plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation, and that plaintiff, not having made his claim at Bombay within two months of the steamer's arrival at Jeddah, could not maintain this suit. The plaintiff contended that the defendants, by granting the shortage certificate, and by their letters of the 18th July and 20th December, had waived their rights under the above clause in the bill of lading, and that the said certificate and the letters amounted to an acknowledgment of liability under s. 19 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). Held, (1) that the certificate and the letters by themsleves did not amount to a waiver by the defendants of their rights under the bill of lading : the question whether the fact of the defendants' agents having signed these documents and other evidence of their conduct in the negotiations between the parties, did lead the plaintiff to believe that they waived such rights and to act on such belief, was a question of fact for the Court which tried the case to decide ; (2) that the certificate and the letters did amount to an acknowledgment of liability by the defendants within s. 19 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) ; (3) that Art. 31 of Sch. II to the Limitation Act, 1877, was the article applicable to the case ; (4) that the suit was not barred by limitation. When by such a document a company, for an increased payment, takes upon itself all risks attending goods while on board a ship or vessel, the document is not a "policy of sea-insurance," but only a "contract for sea-insurance," and is therefore not liable to be stamped as a "policy of sea insurance" under the Act. In the matter of a reference under the INDIAN STAMP ACT, 1899 (1903) . . . I. The stipulation was one which the parties were perfectly free to make, unembarrassed by any implied condition or any original underlying obligation, such as exists when a ship-owner seeks to relieve himself of liability to the shipper in case his vessel should be found to have been unseaworthy. Elderslie Steamship Co., Ltd. v. *Borthwick, L. In the Record-of-Rights Circular No. 2 of 1861, the policy of the Government was declared "that the Birtias who were found in direct engagement with the State at annexation, or who have uninterruptedly held whole villages on the terms of their pattahs under the taluqdars must be maintained in the full enjoyment of their rights in subordination to the taluqdars." In suit by the taluqdar to recover the villages: Held, on the evidence and under the circumstances of the case, that the defendants had shown themselves to come within the benefit of the policy declared in the above circular, and had therefore acquired, upon the annexation of Oudh by the British Government, heritable and transferable rights as against the plaintiff in the villages in suit. ——— Minority—Plaintiff having three years to sue after attaining majority—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 7—Nature of evidence required to prove date of birth. Although in India it is difficult to prove such a fact as the date of birth after a lapse of many years, and it would be unreasonable to require such a class of evidence as would be justly demanded in a similar case in England, the evidence must yet be such as to carry reasonable conviction to the mind. In this case on the proof of the date of the plaintiff's birth, depended the question of whether or not the suit was brought within three years of her attaining majority, and it was held that the evidence was insufficient to prove the true date of her birth, and that therefore the suit was barred by limitation. The word "intoxicating," as used in s. 3, cl. (9), of the Bombay Abkari Act (Bom. Act V of 1878), cannot be confined to its derivative meaning, namely, poisonous: the word must be taken to be used in its popular sense, which would include the effects produced by cocaine. The intention and requirement of the section in the case of articles liable to duty under the Tariff Act are that the duty shall be paid. That intention and requirement can only be contravened when reasonable opportunity to pay the duty has been afforded and has been evaded. The mere entry into the Bombay harbour of a ship conveying dutiable goods or merely tying it up against the dock wall is not importing goods in contravention of the obligation to pay duty. The term "import" as used in the Bombay Abkari Act, 1879, includes the conveying into any part of the Presidency of Bombay by sea. EMPEROR v. DE SYLVA (1909) I. L. R. 33 Bom. 380

BOMBAY CITY IMPROVEMENT ACT (BOM. ACT IV OF 1898).

See LAND ACQUISITION ACT.
I. L. R. 33 Bom. 483

——— Jurisdiction—Legislative powers of Governor of Bombay in Council—Jurisdiction of High Court to consider whether Act is ultra vires—Subordinate Legislature—Creation of new Courts—Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894)—Indian Councils Acts, 1861 and 1892—Question of policy, High Court's power to discuss—Tribunal established by Improvement Trust Act is not a Court—Notices; formality; no injury caused by error in—What defects vitiate an Act—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 424—Injunction against Secretary of State—Ex parte injunction when not to be granted—Notice of suit. In the year 1898 certain improvements were projected in the City of Bombay, and an Act, called the City of Bombay Improvement Act, 1898, was passed, giving to a Board thereby constituted certain powers, with a view to carry those improvements into effect. On the 25th of September, 1902, there was published in the Bombay Government Gazette a declaration, purporting to be in pursuance of the Act, stating that the Governor of Bombay in Council had sanctioned a street scheme made by the Trustees for the Improvement of the City of Bombay under the provisions of the Act (that being the style of the Board thereby constituted), and that certain lands, including those in suit, were "needed to be acquired by the said Trustees for the purposes of executing the said street scheme" and were required for a public purpose. The plaintiff received notice from the Special Collector (defendant 3), stating that certain premises therein mentioned were about to be taken up by the Government under Act I of 1894 (Land Acquisition Act) and that the said properties were to be acquired under the said Act. The notice did not purport to be issued under the City of Bombay Improvement Act. Held, that, as the Improvement Act did not prescribe that the notice should be expressed to be under that Act, there was no omission of a formality directed by the Act, and that the plaintiff had not been shown to have been in any way misled or damnified by what was, at most, a misdescription. One of the Special Collectors, having made an award of the compensation to be allowed, gave notice to the plaintiffs to hand over possession. The plaintiffs thereupon commenced this suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council and the Trustees for the Improvement of the City of Bombay. The Special Collector was subsequently added as a party. It was contended by the plaintiffs that the Improvement Act was ultra vires of the Bombay Legislature. Held, that the Governor of Bombay in Council is a subordinate Legislature, so that the High Court has the right and is charged with the duty of deciding judicially whether the impugned legislation is within the scope of its authority. Held, further, that the Act was not ultra vires in that it amended or repealed the Land Acquisition Act so far only as it affected a particular corporation in a particular locality. The reference to the "province" in s. 5 of the Indian Councils Act, 1892, is merely for the purpose of defining the limits of legislative operation, and in no way imposes the condition that all legislation should affect the whole of that area. Quære: Whether the Land Acquisition Act is amended or repealed by the Improvement Act, having regard to the fact that the Board of Trustees is not a company within the meaning of the former Act, while the compensation is not payable out of the public revenues or out of any fund controlled or managed by a local authority. It was further contended that the Improvement Act did not comply with the provisions of the Indian Councils Act, 1861, in that it was not in fact "for the peace and good government" of the Presidency. Held, that the High Court had no jurisdiction to discuss the policy of the Act. It was further contended that the Act was vitiated in that it created a new Court and thereby interfered with the functions and jurisdiction of the High Court. As to this it was held, (i) that the tribunal created by the Act was not a Court, and was therefore free from the control and supervision of the High Court, except where an appeal was sanctioned by its President; (ii) that the Improvement Act could not confer on the High Court jurisdiction to entertain appeals from such a tribunal; (iii) that the whole Act was not vitiated merely by this defect in the prescribed machinery for ascertaining the compensation payable; (iv) and that, applying the principle of the Colonial Laws Act, 1865, to the Improvement Act, the provisions for taking possessions are not void. It was contended on behalf of the Secretary of State that, having regard to s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code, the suit was not maintainable against him, as no notice of suit had been given. Held, that, in the circumstances of this case, no injunction could be claimed against the Secretary of State, and therefore the suit was not maintainable without notice. Per JENKINS, C.J.—This was not a case in which an ex parte injunction should have been granted. The Courts should, if possible, always require notice, however short, to be given. HARI PANDURANG v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1903)

——— Trustees for the improvement of the City of Bombay—Acquisition of property—Scheme of development—Portion fully developed—Portion capable of further development—

Rental capitalized at 16⅔ and 16 years' purchase—Six per cent. investment—Allowance for the risk attendant upon scheme of development. A certain property was acquired by the trustees for the Improvement of the City of Bombay under the powers of the City of Bombay Improvement Act. The said property, though a single parcel, was treated by the Tribunal of Appeal as falling under two categories, that part which abutted the street was regarded as fully developed and the portion lying at the back as capable of further development. The rental for the front part was capitalized by the Tribunal at 16⅔ years' purchase and the back portion at 16 years' purchase. The scheme of development provided for the erection of four blocks of chawls running practically at right angles to the front premises and these chawls were to have three upper floors for residential purposes, while in each case the ground floor was to be used for godowns. Against the decision of the Tribunal the claimants appealed, urging that the Tribunal ought to have allowed four upper floors to the hypothetical chawls and that it was wrong in allowing only 16⅔ and 16 years' purchase. The trustees also preferred a cross-objection that the allowance made by the Tribunal of ¾ year's rental was not sufficient for the risk attendant upon a scheme of development such as that adopted by it on the basis of its award. Held, confirming the decision of the Tribunal on all points, that (i) it cannot be said that the scheme of development involving four upper floors was so obvious that it would enter into the calculations of an intending purchaser and influence his offer; (ii) the Tribunal's estimate of 16⅔ years' purchase for the front and 16 years' purchase for the back premises was fair and reasonable, the difference between 16⅔ years' purchase and 16 years' purchase was due to the allowance of ¾ year's rental as a reward for the enterprise and compensation for risks so that the purchase was treated as a 6 per cent. investment; (iii) the allowance made by the Tribunal at ¾ year's rental for the risk attending upon the proposed scheme of development was adequate. and the respondents will be entitled to object in the manner provided by s. 561 of the Code. Per JENKINS, C.J.—The enquiry is essentially one where experience is of the greatest use, and in this respect the Tribunal is in a far stronger position than this Court. It has been in existence and at work now for some years, and though its members have changed from time to time, still it must have gained from the multiplicity of cases that have come before it an insight into the value of land in Bombay, which we do not possess, and an experience which must make this Court slow to interfere with its adjudication on a question of value, involving no legal principle, in the absence of evident error. And all the more must this be so when regard is had to the constitution of the Tribunal. RAGHUNATH DAS v. SECRETARY OF STATE (1905)

These plots were mapped out as abutting on the sides of two parallel roads, which were marked out as proposed roads. Each of the purchasers of the plots entered into a covenant with the owner to keep open that portion of the proposed road, which stood in front of his plot and to prepare so much of the road. The question arose whether the proposed road was a street within the meaning of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888): Held, that the proposed road would constitute a street within the meaning of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888). a basket, which the accused had placed on the sand, at some distance from the water, between the high and low water mark. The fish sold was fresh fish and was brought from one of the boats then in Back Bay. The Presidency Magistrate acquitted the accused on the grounds that (i) the Bombay City Municipal Act did not apply as the place of sale was outside the limits of the City of Bombay as laid down in the City of Bombay Municipal Act; (ii) s. 410 of the Act had no application because the place was a private market established from time immemorial; and (iii) the sale fell within s. 410 (2) of the Act. On appeal against this order of acquittal, by the Government of Bombay: Held, reversing the order of acquittal and convicting the accused, that the accused was not protected by s. 410 (2) of the Bombay City Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888), since it was impossible in the present case to say that the fish had been sold from a vessel, when as a matter of fact it had been sold from the basket on the shore, it having been brought from the vessel, which was in the water. Held, also, that the onus of proving that the place in question was a "private market" lay upon the accused. Held, further, that the Bombay City Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) applied to the spot in question, because it came within the expression "City of Bombay" as defined by the Bombay General Clauses Act (Bombay Act I of 1904). Act III of 1888) he was entitled to have refunded on exporting the goods. He had applied for a refund in October, 1899, but his claim was rejected on the 21st February, 1900. The suit was filed on the 21st August, 1900. S. 527 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bom. Act III of 1888) prescribes that one month's notice shall be given of any suit intended to be brought in respect of any act in pursuance or execution or intended execution of the Act, or in respect of neglect or default in the execution of the Act, and Art. 2 of Sch. II to the Limitation Act (XV of 1877) prescribes, as the period of limitation for such suit, ninety days from the date of the act or omission complained of. Due notice of the suit was therefore given, but the suit brought in pursuance of it was not filed until the 21st August, i.e., six months after the act complained of, viz., the refusal to refund. The defendant admitted the amount claimed and the plaintiff's right to be repaid it, but defended the suit on the ground that he, as Municipal Commissioner, had no authority to discharge a claim which was not legally enforceable, the suit being barred by limitation. Held, (i) that s. 527 of the Act did not apply, and that no notice to the defendant of this suit was necessary: the defendant could not claim that his conduct had any relation to the execution of the Act if he knowingly and intentionally acted in contravention of its provisions: here the amount payable by way of refund was ascertained, and the plaintiff's right to recover it was admitted, and the refusal to refund was a deliberate and conscious contravention of the provisions of the Act: in such a case it could not be held that the money was bonâ fide withheld in execution of the Act, and, that being so, the defendant was not entitled to notice under s. 527; (ii) that the suit was therefore not one of the class referred to in Art. 2, Sch. II, to the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and was not barred: when it is provided in an Act that notice shall be given to the defendant of any suit intended to be brought in respect of an act done in pursuance or execution or intended execution of the Act or in respect of neglect or default in its execution, such provision does not apply when the action is brought on a contract, for the conduct giving rise to the action is a wrongful act or omission under the contract, as distinct from one in the execution of the Act. —Commissioner of Police—Orders issued by the Commissioner forbidding meetings by the members of the police force to discuss matters concerned with the force—Orders relating to discipline and general government of the force—Construction of statutes. The Commissioner of Police in Bombay, under the powers vested in him by s. 12 of the Bombay City Police Act (Bombay Act IV of 1902), issued the following notification—"The Commissioner of Police under the provisions of s. 12 of Bombay Act IV of 1902 hereby prohibits any member of the police force from calling or attending a meeting to discuss any subject connected with the police force, without his permission." This notification was read over to the members of the police force at a muster parade at which the accused was present. Notwithstanding this, the accused attended a meeting of the members of the police force convened to discuss subjects connected with the force. For this disobedience, the accused was proceeded against under s. 18 of the Bombay City Police Act (Bombay Act IV of 1902). Held, that the Commissioner of Police was authorized to issue the notification under s. 12 of the Act, for the object of the notification was not to deprive the policemen of their private right but to regulate their conduct in their police capacity; that, therefore, the accused in disobeying the order had committed an offence punishable under s. 18 of the Act. The order which the Commissioner of Police is competent to issue under the head of discipline and general government, under

s. 12 of the Bombay City Police Act (Bombay Act IV of 1902), must be one having reference to the conduct of the police officers in their capacity as such officers. Over their conduct in other relations of life, his disciplinary power does not extend, so long as no element or question of their police duty enters into those relations. If it does enter, the controlling authority of the Commissioner comes into play and it becomes a matter of police discipline. The meaning of s. 16 of the Act is that even when a police officer is not actually at his post discharging the duty assigned to him, he is for the purposes of the Act to be regarded as being at that post, with all the rights and obligations of his office attaching to him. In construing an expression of doubtful import occurring in a statute, the Court may well have regard to considerations outside the language of the Act. EMPEROR v. ATMARAM (1907)

The plaintiff built an "ota" or verandah, and put up a wooden bench in front of his house, which the municipality of the town ordered to be removed. In a suit by the plaintiff to have this order set aside, the District Court found that the occupant of each house had the right of way across the court, which was used as the means of access to the houses which surrounded it by persons having business with the house-holders. Held, that such limited access by the public was not sufficient to show that the court ceased to be private property, and was converted into a "street" vesting in the municipality within the meaning of ss. 3 and 17 of Bombay District Municipal Act, VI of 1873; and that the municipality had not any right to interfere with the plaintiff's erection, whatever liability he might have incurred to an action by any of the other house-holders who occupied the court. The District Judge, on the evidence and having regard especially to the fact that the street in question was protected by a gate closed at night by a polia, or watchman, who lived over the gate, and was under the control of, and paid by, the owners of the houses in the street: —Held, that there had been no dedication of the land to the public, and that the public had not acquired such a right of going over it as to make it a public street vested in the municipality. On second appeal by the defendant, the High Court refused to interfere with the decision of the lower Court. 2. ——— and s. 33—Street—Authority of the municipality under s. 33—Civil Court's interference with the discretion given to public bodies. The word "street" in s. 17 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) means and includes not merely the surface of the ground, but so much above and below it as is requisite or appropriate for the preservation of the street for the usual and intended purposes. The plaintiff proposed to make a balcony projecting over a public road. The Municipality objected to the work as an encroachment on a public street. He therefore sued the municipality to establish his right to build the proposed balcony. Held, that, so far as the column of space standing over the street was vested in the municipality, the plaintiff had no right to occupy it with a balcony, which by intercepting light and air would greatly impair the use of the area as a street. S. 33 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1873, gives the municipality a discretion to issue such orders as it thinks proper with reference to a proposed building. Civil Courts cannot interfere with that discretion, unless it is exercised in a capricious, wanton, and oppressive manner. The plaintiff was the owner of two houses on each side of the passage of a khidki, or open square, containing three or four other houses. He proposed to connect the two houses by building a story across the passage at such a height as not to interfere with the passage of those who were entitled to go to and fro. He applied to the local municipality for permission to build in the manner he proposed. The municipality forbade the work, on the ground that it was likely to interfere with the access of light and air to the neighbouring houses. The plaintiff thereupon sued the municipality to establish his right to build the proposed structure. It was contended for the plaintiff that the municipality ought not to have refused permission in the interests of the neighbouring householders, who were able to protect their own rights in case of injury. Held, that the suit would not lie, as the order of the municipality refusing permission was not an unreasonable one under the circumstances of the case. Held, further, that the authority of the municipality was not in any way affected by the circumstance that the proposed erection might be an encroachment on private rights subjecting the plaintiff to an action by the persons injured. 3. ——— s. 21, cls. (1) and (2)—Bombay District Municipal Amendment Act (Bombay Act II of 1884), s. 27, cl. (7), and s. 32—Tax imposed by municipality. In 1891 the municipality of Surat appointed a committee to revise the taxation of the city, proposing to reduce some of the existing taxes and impose others with a view (inter aliá) of obtaining a better water-supply for the city. A scheme of taxation drafted by the committee was subsequently adopted by the municipality, and it included a new house and property tax. The municipality then issued a notice with regard to this last-mentioned tax under the provisions of s. 21 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 setting forth the particulars of the proposed tax and requiring objections to be lodged within a fortnight from the date of the notice. A number of objections were received which were laid on the table for twenty-one days for perusal and consideration by the municipal commissioners. At the end of that time a special meeting of the Commissioners was held, at which it was resolved that the objections were invalid, and the scheme and the rules with regard to the levying of the tax were forwarded to Government and were sanctioned. The plaintiffs sued for an injunction restraining the municipality from levying the tax, contending that it was illegal, on the ground (i) that there was no municipality desirous of imposing the tax for any of the purposes allowed by the Act, inasmuch as the commissioners who passed the resolution to impose the tax did not know for what purpose the tax was to be imposed; (ii) that the resolution imposing the tax was illegal because the notice calling the meeting of the commissioners which passed the resolution did not specify this tax as the object of the meeting; (iii) that the notice given under s. 21 of Bombay Act VI of 1873 was bad, as it did not state the purpose of the proposed tax; (iv) that the nature and the amount of the tax were not sufficiently stated in the notice; (v) that the notice ought to have stated the mode in which the valuation of property for the purpose of the tax was to be made; (vi) that the objections of the rate-payers were not sufficiently considered; (vii) that it did not appear whether the tax was to be paid in advance or not; and (viii) that the assessment of the tax was made on a wrong basis. Held, (1) that the purpose of the tax was sufficiently known to the commissioners; (2) that the resolution imposing the tax was not invalid, although the notice convening the meeting did not specify the object of the meeting; (3) that the notice need not specify the purpose of the tax; (4) that as to the nature and the amount of the tax, the notice was sufficient, as it stated that the amount would depend on the valuation of the property; (5) that the notice need define the mode of valuation; (6) that the objections were sufficiently considered; (7) that the tax was to be paid partly in advance; (8) that the assessment would not affect the validity of the tax, but would give a right of appeal to have the valuation set right. Held, therefore, that the tax was legally imposed. September 1890, the plaintiffs, without furnishing the plan as required, built a wall on their land. Thereupon the municipality gave a notice to the plaintiffs requiring them to pull it down, as it has been built without their permission. The plaintiffs having failed to comply with this notice, the wall was demolished, and its materials were carried away by the municipal servants. Thereupon the plaintiffs sued the municipality to recover damages for the wrongful demolition of the wall. Held, that the plaintiffs had contravened the provisions of cl. 1 of s. 33 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, inasmuch as they had built the wall without giving any notice, or (if they did) gave notice without affording the information required by the municipality. The municipality were, therefore, justified in ordering the wall to be demolished. DAVE HARISHANKAR v. TOWN MUNICIPALITY OF UMRETH . . . I. L. R. 19 Bom. 27

5. ——— and s. 42—Discretion of municipality to take action under s. 33, cl. (3)—Court's power to interfere with such discretion. A suit for an injunction to restrain a municipality from removing a certain building or construction is not an action "for anything done, or purporting to have been done, in pursuance of the Act" within the meaning of s. 48 of Bombay Act II of 1884. Such a suit can, therefore, be brought without giving previous notice to the municipality. Apart from the provisions of s. 33 of Bombay Act VI of 1873, it is only if the site of a building is vested in a municipality under s. 17 that this body is empowered, whether by s. 42 or by any other section to take steps for the removal of the building. The discretion of taking action or otherwise under the 3rd clause of s. 33 is vested in the municipality, which alone can determine whether or not the removal of a building erected contrary to the provisions of s. 33 is or is not a measure likely to promote the public convenience. If the municipality adopt the proper procedure, no Court can review its decision on the ground that in the opinion of the Court the removal of the building is not likely to promote public convenience. The Legislature has confided to the municipality, and the municipality alone, the duty of deciding what

Accordingly, where the plaintiff complained that the defendants had erected a privy so close to his house as to be a nuisance, and the lower Appellate Court found it to be a nuisance, but rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the defendants had erected the same under the orders of the municipality issued under s. 31 of the Act:—Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the municipality had no authority to order the defendants to erect the privy regardless of the plaintiff's right, and that the defendants, therefore, could not plead that they acted under the orders of the municipality. The only distinction which the Act draws is between obstructions erected or placed before the Act came into operation and those which have been erected or placed since it came into operation. The accused hired a house, and opened a shop for selling fruit within six hundred yards of the municipal market without obtaining a license from the municipality. The second class Magistrate convicted and sentenced each of the accused to pay a fine of R5. The District Magistrate, relying on the case of In re Paba Khoji, I. L. R. 9 Bom. 272, reversed the conviction and sentence. Held, that what the municipality had authority to direct under s. 66 of (Bombay) Act VI of 1873 was that no place, other than the municipal market or other places licensed as markets, should be used by any body as a market; but they had no authority to issue a notification affecting other places which might be used for selling vegetables, etc., otherwise than as a market; that, inasmuch as the using of the shop by the accused was confined simply to the selling of fruit, and not of "vegetables" in the popular sense, it could not be affected by the prohibition contemplated by s. 66 of the Act that, if the prohibition of the municipality was meant to affect the private rights of persons to use their shops for selling their own commodities, that would amount to an excess of the authority conferred by the District Municipal Act (Bombay) VI of 1873; that the shop used by the accused for the sale of their own commodities was not a "market" within the meaning of s. 66 of Bombay Act VI of 1873. Mayor of London v. *Law, 49 L. He was thereupon convicted, under s. 188 of the Penal Code, for disobedience of an order duly promulgated by a public servant, and sentenced to pay a fine of R35. Held (reversing the conviction and sentence), that s. 73 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) did not empower the municipality to place an interdict on people meeting together to eat and drink in their own houses. The words in the section, "take such measures as may be deemed necessary to prevent, meet, or suppress the outbreak," imply in themselves something actively to be done by the municipality, rather than any

Default having been made in payment of the tax, A was prosecuted under s. 84 of the Act before a second class Magistrate. He contended that the estimate made by the municipality was too high, and that his house would not let for more than 10 or 12 rupees a year. He ought to have accepted as conclusive the amount found by the managing committee to be the letting value of the house, and held the legal liability of the accused to pay the tax based on this amount to be proved. 4. ——— Ejectment suit against municipality—Notice. The plaintiff was the inamdar of the village of Dakor. He filed an ejectment suit against the municipality of Dakor, alleging that the municipality had illegally and wrongfully encroached upon a portion of the Gomti Lake at Dakor by laying the foundations of a building which they intended to erect for the purpose of a dharmshala. The municipality pleaded (inter alia) that the suit was bad for want of notice of action under s. 48 of the Bombay District Municipal Act, 1884. Held (by a majority of the Full Bench), that the provisions of s. 48 of Bombay Act II of 1884 do not apply to actions for the possession of land brought against a municipality. Per PARSONS, J.—The provisions of s. 48 apply only to actions for the possession of land whereof the plaintiff has been dispossessed by the municipality acting or purporting to act under some section of the Municipal Act, which empowers them to take possession of, or oust any one from, that land. Per RANADE, J.—S. 48 does not generally apply to suits for the possession of land, except in those cases where the claim arises on account of some act or omission of the municipality when it acts in pursuance of its statutory powers, and encroaches upon private rights. Nagusha v. *Municipality of Sholapur, I. The plaintiff thereupon brought a suit against the Municipality for a declaration that he was entitled to be elected a Councillor at the elections and for an injunction restraining the Municipality from holding the elections without accepting him as a candidate and without receiving the votes of his voters. The first Court rejected the plaint on the ground that it disclosed no cause of action. On appeal by the plaintiff the Judge reversed the order and remanded the proceedings for decision of the suit according to law. On appeal by the Municipality: Held, reversing the order of remand, that the suit for a declaration against the Municipality could not lie because the Municipality neither denied nor was interested to deny the character or right which the plaintiff sought to establish. It was the officer mentioned in Rule 13 of the District Municipal Election Rules that was concerned with that question and over him the Municipality had no control. The claim for an injunction could not be sustained against the Municipality, when it had done no wrong and had proposed to proceed in accordance with the District Municipal Act and the rule, so far as they relate to it. The plaintiff, instead of proceeding under s. 86 of the Act, instituted a suit in the Civil Court for an injunction to restrain the Municipality from recovering the house-tax from him. The lower Courts rejected the claim, on the ground that, as the plaintiff had omitted to appeal to a Magistrate under s. 86 of the Act, his suit was premature. Held, that s. 86 was permissive merely, and that it did not make it incumbent in every case upon a party complaining of an illegal levy of a tax by a Municipality to appeal against the action of the Municipality to a Magistrate before suing in a Civil Court. But held, also, (confirming the decree), that the injunction prayed for in this case could not be granted. By s. 56 of the Specific Relief Act, an injunction cannot be granted where efficacious relief can be obtained by any other usual mode of proceeding. S. 86 of Bombay Act III of 1901 gave a remedy to the plaintiff, but instead of resorting to it he filed this suit for an injunction. It was discretionary for a Court to grant an injunction, and that discretion must be exercised judicially, with extreme caution, and only in very clear cases. This was not a case of that kind. ——— s. 47—Right of the police to have free access to a place of public amusement or resort—Race-course enclosure. Races were held in a certain enclosed ground at Poona which belonged to the Military authorities, and was lent for the purpose to the Western India Turf Club. The part of the ground to which the public were admitted was fenced in by ropes, and soldiers were stationed at intervals to prevent any persons entering or leaving the enclosure otherwise than through the passages provided for the purpose. The Inspector of Police, who was present on duty in that capacity, contrary to the regulations prescribed by the stewards of the races, crossed over the fencing ropes into the enclosure instead of going in by the regular entrance. This was reported to the honorary secretary of the club, who had general charge of the arrangements. He sent for the inspector, and, after an interview with him, ordered two soldiers, who were in attendance to keep order, to put him out of the enclosure. They accordingly did so, laying hands on him in the first instance, but immediately at his request letting him go and merely escorting him outside. He thereupon, under s. 353 of the Penal Code, charged the secretary of the club with using criminal force to a public servant in the exercise of his duty. Held, that the offence had been committed. BOMBAY IRRIGATION ACT (BOM. ACT VII OF 1879).

plot of land. The nala was crossed at a considerable distance to the north of the defandant's land by a Government irrigation canal. The water flowing in the nala was derived from two sources: (i) from the rain water from the hills and catchment area of the nala, and (ii) from percolation of water or waste from the canal. Apart from abnormal periods of drought, the second of the two sources was perennial and the more important of the two. Before the canal was made there was a surface flow in a portion of the nala, and this flow lasted through the rains and for a portion of the cold weather and there was no flow after December. For seven hundred yards below the point of contract of the canal and the nala, the nala was normally dry and gravelly for many months, but at a point some seven hundred yards lower down the canal there was a spring and thence downwards there was a perennial stream. The nala, however, throughout the rainy months held a fair body of water. In the year 1897, the Irrigation Department put a dam across the nala and thereby infringed the defendant's riparian right. The defendant thereupon brought a summary suit against the Executive Engineer for Irrigation and his subordinates in the Court of the Mamlatdar of Haveli for the removal of the dam and obtained a decree in his favour. Thereupon, the Secretary of State for India as plaintiff, brought the present suit against the defendant praying that his right to control the water in the water-course (nala) in suit and to obstruct the use of such water therein by the defendant subject to the conditions imposed by the Bombay Irrigation Act (Bom. Act VII of 1879) should be declared. The first Court rejected the suit. The plaintiff having appealed: Held, confirming the decree, that the water-course with which the defendant was concerned was a stream as that word is legally understood. It was a natural channel and not one constructed under the provisions of the Bombay Irrigation Act. It was not in direct communication with the canal; there was no agreement for the supply of water under the Act, and such water (if any) as found its way from the canal into it came there by percolation. The defendant got the water from the canal not, because he was entitled to it, but because it came to him, and it would be open to the canal authorities to take such measures as would prevent the percolation. As defendants had the right of a riparian proprietor to the usufructuary interest in the water in the nala, which was incidental to the possession of the adjacent soil, it followed that whatever might be the nature of the tenancy, he as the occupant of the land abutting on the stream, and not the Government, was entitled to the enjoyment and benefit of the water as it flowed past. A natural stream, though its flow of water be in part derived by percolation from a canal, is not a canal, until the Governor in Council has applied to it the provisions of s. 5 of the Bombay Irrigation Act. Statutes, which encroach on the rights of subjects whether as regards person

Under it, the condition precedent to levying the rate is not the fact ascertained by evidence whether the water in dispute has percolated from the canal, but the opinion of the canal officer that it has so percolated, he and not the Civil Court being made the Judge of such percolation for the purposes of the Act. Such water-rate falls within the denomination of land revenue. BALVANT GANESH OZE v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA . . . I. L. R. 22 Bom. 377

2. ——— Leakage water—Rights of riparian proprietors—Water-course. The Irrigation Department has no power under Bombay Act VII of 1879 to dam a stream or a water-course on the ground that it derives its supply of water by leakage from an irrigation canal. S. 48 of the Act only gives the department the special right of charging a water-rate on land which derives benefit from the leakage. Water which has leaked from a canal into the land of another person does not belong to the Irrigation Department, so as to give the latter the right to follow it up and claim it as their own. If the leakage flow was such that it itself had become in the eye of the law a canal or water-course, then the rights of the persons through whose lands it flowed would be governed by the law applicable to canals or water-courses. When arrears of assessment are levied by sale, then s. 56 of the Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879) in pursuance of an obvious policy, empowers the Collector to sell "freed from all tenures, incumbrances and rights created by the occupant.....or any of his predecessors-in-title or in anywise subsisting against such occupant." Should the Collector otherwise dispose of the occupancy, the section affords no such protection, and the legal relations must be determined by reference to the ordinary law. It was contended for the defendants as to these two plots of land that the plaintiffs had no right to cultivate them, as they had been made a part of a village site, and on that understanding they had not been numbered at the survey in 1863, and had been exempted from assessment for twenty years. As to the bed of the stream, it was contended that the stream was a public stream, and that the bed of the stream as it dried up belonged to Government, and not to the plaintiffs. It was held by the lower Appellate Court that s. 61 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code applied; that Government were competent to set apart a portion of the lands comprised in the sanad of the plaintiffs for a village site, and that, as these lands had not been numbered at the survey of 1863, and had been exempt from assessment for more than twenty years, the plaintiffs had lost their right to cultivate them. On appeal to the High Court: Held (reversing the decree of the lower Court), that the plaintiffs were entitled to the declaration prayed for. Held, also, (i) that s. 61 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code did not apply. That section relates back to s. 38, and both refer only to lands the property of Government in unalienated villages or unalienated portions of villages. They do not empower the Government to confiscate any land belonging to an inamdar and to confer it on the persons living in his village. (ii) That the mere omission to number the plots of land could not have the effect of turning them into a part of the village site or take away the right of the plaintiffs. Nor did the omission of Government to assess these lands deprive the plaintiffs of them, or make them the property of Government. On the 16th June 1893, the Collector of Satara, in proceedings under s. 71 of the Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879), ordered K's name to be registered in the revenue books in place of V's. Prior to this, however, the plaintiff and other tenants paid B rents for 1892—94. K then applied for and obtained from the Collector an order, under s. 86 of the Code, rendering him assistance in recovering these rents. The plaintiff, in August 1894, brought this suit to restrain K from recovering the rents and to avoid the order for assistance. The Subordinate Judge granted the injunction, but the District Judge reversed that decision and dismissed the suit on the ground that K was the registered occupant of the land, and that the order for assistance was valid, and that payment of rent to B did not discharge the tenants. On appeal to the High Court: Held, reversing the decree of the District Judge and restoring that of the Subordinate Judge, that, the lands in question being alienated land, s. 71 of the Land Revenue Code did not apply, and K was not a registered occupant under the Code. The lands passed on V's death to his five undivided sons, unless a custom of primogeniture existed in the family, and payment by the plaintiff to B, a co-landlord, was a valid discharge. In 1879 the boundaries were fixed by a revenue officer under the orders of the Collector, and the piece of land in dispute was found to belong to the plaintiffs as occupants of survey No. 88. Subsequently, the defendant having encroached upon it and dispossessed the plaintiffs, the present suit was filed. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiffs' claim, holding that the decision by the revenue officer was conclusive as to the boundary. The defendant appealed, and the lower Appellate Court reversed the lower Court's decree. On appeal by the plaintiffs to the High Court: Held, restoring the decree of the Court of first instance, that, under the provisions of s. 121 of Act V of 1879, the decision of the Collector as to the boundaries was conclusive, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to possession. Such villages fall within the description of "alienated holdings" as defined by the Code. When a talukhdari village is attached under s. 159 of the Code for arrears of land revenue so long as the attachment subsists, an order of forfeiture under s. 153 is illegal. The plaintiff was the talukhdar of the village of K. At the end of the revenue year 1878-79, that is, on 31st July 1879, the plaintiff was a defaulter in respect of the assessment payable to Government for that year. In November 1879, a punitive police post was established in the village under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867 on account of the turbulent conduct of the inhabitants. Between April and January 1880 the Collector sold certain property of the talukhdari for arrears of revenue, and realized by the sale a sum of R1,608, a sum more than sufficient to cover the arrears due for 1878-79 as well as the assessment payable for 1879, but the Collector, after deducting the arrears due for 1878-79, applied the rest of the sale-proceeds towards the payment of the cost of the punitive post. The assessment for 1879-80 having remained unpaid, the village was attached on the 1st July 1880 under s. 159 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879). The attachment was followed on the 6th January 1881 by an order declaring the village to be forfeited under s. 153 of the Code. In 1886 the plaintiff sued Government to recover possession of the village and for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant contended that it was valid and legal. Held, that the village having been attached for arrears of land revenue under s. 159 of Bombay Act V of 1879, on the 1st July 1880, the plaintiff had twelve years' time from the date of the attachment within which he could apply for the restoration of the village under s. 162 of the Act. The order of forfeiture of the 6th January 1881 was, therefore, null and void. Held (per BIRDWOOD, J.), that the Collector had no power, under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867, to recover the cost of the punitive post from the talukhdar, (i) as he was not an inhabitant of the village, and (ii) because the cost could only be defrayed by a local rate imposed on the inhabitants of the district in which the punitive post was established. In 1880 and 1881, the first defendant having made default in paying the assessment, plots Nos. 303 and 305 were sold by the revenue authorities and were brought respectively by defendants Nos. 2 and 3. In the latter year (1881) plot No. 304 was sold in execution of a money decree obtained by the mortgagee (defendant No. 1) against the mortgagor and was purchased by his (the first defendant's) undivided brother without leave of the Court. In 1892 the plaintiffs (heirs of the mortgagor) brought this suit against defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3 to redeem the said three plots of land from the mortgage of 1872. Defendant No. 1 pleaded that he had inherited plot No. 304 from his brother, who had become the owner of plot No. 304 by his purchase at the execution sale in 1881. He disclaimed all interest in plots Nos. 303 and 305. Defendants Nos 2 and 3 answered that they had become absolute owners by the purchase at the revenue sales. As to these latter, it was alleged that defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were in possession of the said two plots for the first defendant. Defendants Nos. 2 and 3 contended that by s. 182 of the Land Revenue Code the plaintiffs were precluded from raising this point. Held, that, though s. 182 forbade the Court to entertain a suit against defendants Nos. 2 and 3 on the ground that they had bought the land for defendant No. 1, it did not debar it from entertaining a suit against them on the ground that subsequently to the sale they were holding on behalf of defendant No. 1 or against defendant No. 1 on the ground that he was himself really in possession through defendants Nos. 2 and 3 as his agents or tenants. The same principle of equity which would make

(b). Held, that the payment which the khot had been making to the inamdar before the time of the British survey was in the nature of assessment or rating by Government; but held, also, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the old assessment as claimed by them. It was plain that in cases falling within sub-cls. (a) and (e) of s. 216 of the Land Revenue Code, the inamdar's interest in the assessment would not be affected by the application of Chs. VIII to X of that Act. He would still get the old assessment in the alienated lands in the village in the former case and the same amount of assessment in the latter, and the same must have been the intention in cases contemplated by sub-cl. (b). The "holder of the village" in the concluding paragraph of s. 216 must be read as meaning the "holder of the assessment or any part thereof of an alienated village." 1. ——— Local cess—Landlord and tenant—Fraudulent collection of cess. The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain wanta lands belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated. The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869, s. 8. The defendant contended that, in consequence of a demand from Government, he had paid local cess on the whole of his talukh, including the village in which the plaintiffs' lands were situated, and was therefore entitled, under ss. 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands. It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs, and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them; also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands, knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them. Held, that the defendant was not the superior holder of the lands within s. 8 of Bombay Act III of 1869, and was, therefore, not entitled to the assistance of the revenue officers of Government to recover the cess provided by that section for superior holders as against tenants and occupants, although he might have paid the local cess due on the land in the plaintiffs' possession; and that, consequently, the aid of the mamlatdar was illegally and improperly given to the defendant for the recovery of the amount from the plaintiffs. Held, also, that the defendant was not a person "interested in the payment" of the money made by him to Government within the meaning of s. 69 of the Contract Act, assuming that a portion of that sum was demanded by Government in respect of the plaintiffs' wanta lands, and that they were "bound by law to pay" it to Government. Held, further, that the defendant did not "lawfully" make the payment within the meaning of s. 70 of the Act, inasmuch as he did so fraudulently and dishonestly. Hence the administrator of a minor, appointed under Act XX of 1864, could not sell immoveable property held by the minor as a mortgagee in possession without the previous sanction of the Court. A mortgagee in possession is, under s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), entitled to add to his mortgage-debt, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, sums spent by him for making his own title thereto good against the mortgagor. The mere fact that in a redemption suit the mortgagee in possession did not give details of the sums either in the course of the trial or in his written statement is not sufficient to deprive him of his right, seeing that those details can be gone into after the redemption decree providing for an account has been passed. The decision in Mohori Bibee v. *Dharmodas Ghose, I. L. That decision, however, is also an authority for the proposition that the circumstances of a particular case may be such that having regard to s. 41 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), the Court may, on adjudging the cancellation of an instrument, require the party to whom such relief is granted to make any compensation to the other which ustice may require. In December 1886, the Municipal Commissioner, pursuant to s. 166 of the Bombay Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878, required the trustees of the mosque to set back the building on the said three sides for the purpose of improving the public streets. It was contended that the amount of compensation to be paid to the trustees was to be measured by the loss of rent which they would have received for certain rooms which they had proposed to build on the land in question. Held, that the words of s. 163 of the Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878 were intended to ensure compensation to the owner for every sort of damage, and not to restrict it to compensation for such damage as he might by his own arrangement reduce it to. Compensation becomes due under the section as soon as the Corporation takes possession, which is when the owner begins to build, and there being no words in the section to show a contrary intention, the compensation must be assessed according to the state of things then existing, and not upon the basis of what the owner may have it in his power to do towards diminishing the damage which would otherwise result to him. Held, also, that in cases of compensation granted under s. 163 of the Municipal Acts III of 1872 and IV of 1878, the addition of 15 per cent. cannot be allowed. way. At the time this suit was filed there was an open drain or gutter, one foot three inches wide, running along by the side of the plaintiff's buildings and between them and the road. That gutter, however, subsequently to the filing of this suit, but before the hearing, was covered over, and so much additional width was thereby added to the road. Held, that the eaves constituted an obstruction within the meaning of the above section, and that the Municipal Commissioner was entitled to remove them. Under the above section, the question to be decided is not whether there is a real practical inconvenience to the public traffic in the street. Those are not the words used in the section, and if that was the intention of the Legislature, it would have been expressed. Where an Act gives power to a municipality or corporation for the public benefit, a more liberal construction should be given to it than where powers are to be exercised merely for private gain or other advantage. 1888, an applicant can question the election of every candidate on the ground that the election as a whole was invalid, for the section, after specifying two permissible grounds of objection, provides that the validity of any election may be questioned for any other cause, and these words are wide enough to cover the ground of objection urged in this case. It is clear that the word "election" in the section is designed to express something wider than a legally valid election, and the words used are consistent with the view that an election which in fact took place under conditions that made it possible that there should be a valid election can be questioned. Under s. 33 the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court has jurisdiction to determine the validity of a contested election. The High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain such a suit. Where a special tribunal, out of the ordinary course, is appointed by an Act to determine questions as to rights which are the creation of that Act, then, except so far as otherwise expressly provided or necessarily implied, that tribunal's jurisdiction to determine those question is exclusive. It is an essential condition of those rights that they should be determined in the manner prescribed by the Act, to which they owe their existence. In such a case there is no ouster of the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts for they never had any. The jurisdiction of the Courts can be excluded not only by express words but also by implication and there certainly is enough in s. 33 of the Municipal Act for this purpose. Semble: If the High Court has jurisdiction there might be a conflict between the view of the High Court and the orders of the Chief Judge in which the order of the Chief Judge must by the express terms of the Act prevail. (2) Drawback of the one-fifth part of the general tax shall be sanctioned by the Commissioner in cases falling within either of the following classes and in no others :—(a) Chawls or buildings let out for hire in single rooms either as lodging or godowns for the storage of goods. The Commissioner having refused to sanction a drawback of the tax leviable on certain properties of the plaintiff on the ground that they did not fall within the terms of the above conditions, the plaintiff filed this suit. bay Act III of 1888 that they required 23·30 square yards of the plaintiff's land for street improvement. On the 14th December 1891, the plaintiff gave possession of the land to the municipality, and on 27th January 1892 claimed R60 per square yard as compensation. By letter dated 23rd February 1892, the Municipal Commissioner (without prejudice) offered R50 per square yard as compensation, and stated that, on the plaintiff producing the title-deeds and papers to establish his title, the necessary documents in connection with the payment would be prepared. Nothing further took place in the matter until the 14th February 1894, on which date the plaintiff wrote a letter to the Municipal Commissioner in which, without mentioning any sum, he requested the payment of the amount which might be due to him as compensation for his land taken by the municipality. The Commissioner refused to pay the compensation, contending that the plaintiff's claim was time-barred. The plaintiff thereupon brought this suit claiming R1,165 (being at the rate of R50 per square yard) as compensation for the land taken by the defendant or in the alternative for that sum as damages for the breach of contract to pay purchase-money for the land. The defendant pleaded (i) that notice under s. 527 of the Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) was necessary before suit filed; and (ii) that the suit was barred by limitation. The Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court found for the defendant with costs, and dismissed the suit contingent on the opinion of the High Court. On a case stated for the High Court: Held, (i) that notice under s. 527 of Bombay Act III of 1888 was not necessary, that section not being applicable to suits brought to enforce payment of compensation under s. 301 of the Act; (ii) that the suit was not barred by limitation. Per FARRAN, J.—A suit against the municipality of Bombay for compensation for land acquired by the municipality under s. 299 of Bombay Act III of 1888 is not an action of tort or quasi-tort, but a simple action for the price of land which the terms of s. 301 of the Act impose upon the Commissioner to pay. The obligation to pay that price is of the same nature, (i) whether the owner assents to the valuation of the land placed upon it by the Commissioner; (ii) whether the value is determined by the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court; or (iii) whether it is left undetermined. S. 527 does not apply to any of these three cases. In all of them the obligation to pay is imposed by s. 301, and does not arise from the manner in which the amount of the price to be paid is arrived at. S. 504 prescribes the only mode in which, in case of dispute, the value of the land can be determined. If the owner of land disputes the Commissioner's valuation, he must apply to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court within a year. If he does not do so, the result is that he loses the power of effectually disputing the Commissioner's valuation, but does not lose his right to the amount of the valuation. The owner of land has a remedy independent of the provision of s. 504. That section only deals with cases, where there is a dispute as to the value of the land, and leaves untouched those cases where there is no such dispute, but where the Commissioner for some reason declines to pay. In such cases the owner is left to his ordinary remedy, no special mode of procedure being prescribed. Cases in which there has been a dispute, but in which the owner abandons his claim to dispute the valuation of the Commissioner, fall within the latter category. He contended that the notice was time-barred, as it had not been given within three months after the completion of the building. In answer to this plea, it was urged, on behalf of the municipality, that the building could not be said to have been completed, unless and until such accommodations as privies and cesspools had been executed in accordance with the requirements of the Health Department, and that, therefore, the notice was within time. Held, that the notice was time-barred. The word "completion" in s. 353 of Bombay Act III of 1888 must be taken in its ordinary sense, and the Court cannot read into the section "in accordance with sanitary regulations" or "sanitary officers' opinions." In re RAGHUNATH MAKUND I. Act III of 1888) is the safety of the public to secure which the Commissioner must of necessity be given very wide powers. But it does not follow that those powers can be exercised arbitrarily and without due consideration to the provisions of the section and the right of individuals. The word 'appear' in the section does not involve 'appear to the eye.' It is sufficient if it appears to the Commissioner on the presentation of a competent officer whose duty it is to make such representations. But the Com-

missioner's action when 'it appears' is judicial, so that he must exercise his discretion in determining what action should be taken. It is not sufficient that he should merely sign a notice which was sent to him by the Executive Engineer because it has previously been signed by that officer. It should be considered as a notice to show cause. It is not invalid, at the same time it cannot deprive the person served with it of his right to object unless the Legislature has clearly deprived him of such a right. Danger means peril, risk, hazard, exposure to injury from pain or other evil and can vary in decree according as the apprehended injury is expected to occur at once or at some future time. S. 354 applying to all degrees of danger and prescribing various precautionary measures to be taken to prevent injury resulting therefrom, it follows that first, the decree of danger must be ascertained, and then the appropriate precautionary measure prescribed. Where it is not suggested that the danger is imminent, a duty is imposed on the Commissioner to decide judicially what should be done to assure the safety of the public having due regard to the interest of the owner of the structure. The discretion must not be arbitrary: Paskall v. Passmore, 15 Pa. St. D. 304; Gangjiboy v. The Municipal Corporation of Bombay, 1 Bom. L. R. 754, 764. But the Court is in the first instance entitled to inquire whether the discretion has been exercised. Discretion has to be exercised, first, in coming to the conclusion as to the state of the structure, and, then in fixing upon the appropriate remedy. It is sufficient exercise of his discretion in deciding what structures are dangerous if he appoints a competent person to represent to him what structures are dangerous. But if a notice is issued, based on the representation of such a person, it is open to the owner to prove that that person has not exercised his discretion or has been actuated by improper motives in prescribing the steps to be taken. If the owner can prove to the satisfaction of the Court that his house was not in such a dangerous condition as to warrant an order to pull down, that would be primâ facie evidence that the person appointed by the Commissioner has not exercised his discretion. The Commissioner can exercise his discretion through an agent, but it follows that if the agent has not exercised his discretion nor has the Commissioner, the Commissioner has the opportunity to remedy this when the owner complains. Under certain circumstances the safety of the public must be considered in priority to the right of private individuals, as in the case of imminent danger, but where there is no suggestion of imminent danger, the person affected is entitled to be heard as a matter of common justice. ——— s. 381—Low ground—Low-lying ground—Notice by Municipal Commissioner requiring owner of low-lying ground to fill it with sweet earth up ta a certain level. Under s. 381 of the Bombay Municipal Act III of 1888, the Municipal Commissioner for the City of Bombay issued a notice to the appellant as owner of certain low-lying ground. The notice stated that in the opinion of the Commissioner the ground accumulated water in the monsoon and caused nuisance to the tenants of two chawls situated on the premises. The owner was, therefore, required by the notice "to fill in the low-lying ground with sweet earth to the level of the road and slope it towards the new drain on the road side." As the owner refused to comply with the notice, he was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of R15 by the Presidency Magistrate under s. 471 of the Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888), Held, reversing the conviction and sentence, that the notice was illegal. The words used in s. 381 are "low ground," which is not the same as low-lying ground. And though the section gives power to the Commissioner to require the owner of low ground to cleanse and fill up the same, it does not permit him to issue an order that an indefinite extent of low-lying ground shall be filled up, much less that it shall be filled up to some particular level, or filled up with sweet earth, or that it shall be sloped in a particular direction. On the south side of the house was a gully, 3 feet 6 inches wide, separating it from another upper-storied house. The plaintiffs in this suit complained that in January 1891 the defendant by his servants dug a trench, 8 feet deep, along the whole length of the gully for the purpose of laying a drain pipe, and that the work was done so negligently that the plaintiff's house was injured and became in such a dangerous condition that it had to be pulled down. The plaintiffs claimed R3,996 as damages. The defendant denied the negligence and alleged that the work was not done by his servants or agents, but by a contractor. For the defendant it was contended that the notice of action given by the plaintiffs under s. 527 of the Bombay Municipal Act (III of 1888) was insufficient. The notice stated "that one S L, a contractor under you, and as such being your agent and servant, excavated a trench, etc." It was argued that this was not a good notice, as it only alleged a cause of action arising out of the acts of the defendant's servants and agents, and not out of the acts of a contractor. Held, that the notice was sufficient. The section only required the notice to state with reasonable particularity the cause of action, and this was done. The individual by whom the damage was done was specified, and the acts which caused the damage were clearly set forth. DHONDIBA KRISHNAJI v. MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS OF BOMBAY I. L. For this they were convicted of an offence under s. 12 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887) for gaming in a public place: Held, that the accused were not guilty of an offence under s. 12 of the Act, since they cannot be said to be gambling in a public place. Per BARTA, J.—The word "place," which is patient of many different meanings, must necessarily in each instance in which it is used by the Legislature, be construed with reference to the intention to be inferred from the context. Thus in s. 12 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887), or in s. 3 of 36 & 37 Vict., c. 38, in connection with such words as roads, streets and thoroughfares, it has a very different meaning from that which it bears in s. 4 of the Act, and from that given to it in connection with s. 3 of 16 & 17 Vict., c. 119, by judicial decisions. The mischief aimed at in s. 4 of the Act is a mischief clearly distinct from that aimed at in s. 12 of the Act. In the former the mischief aimed at is the practice of individuals making a profit by providing a spot of their own selection known as a place where gambling is to be carried on, and making a livelihood by attracting people to a place which they would not otherwise frequent. In the latter the offence is not that the individual members are making a profit at all, but simply that they are carrying on their gambling with such publicity that the ordinary passer-by cannot well avoid seeing it and being enticed—if his inclinations lie that way—to join in or follow the bad example openly placed in his way. In the one case comparative privacy for profit, in the other the bad public example and accessibility to the public, would seem to constitute the gravamen of the offence. S. 12 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887) aims at gambling in a public place or thoroughfare, ordinarily with no intervening obstruction to the public view, where there is voluntary publicity. Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 342—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 11, 54. On the 19th May 1903 a warrant was issued by the Commissioner of Police at Bombay under s. 6 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (Bombay Act IV of 1887) for the arrest of accused No. 1. In execution of this warrant, when on the 7th June 1903 the police entered the room of accused No. 1, no actual play was seen by the raiding party, but there were found playing cards on the ground and ten persons, including accused No. 1, were found sitting in a circle. Upon these facts the Magistrate convicted the accused of keeping a common gaming-house, an offence under s. 4 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (Bombay Act IV of 1887), by applying to him the presumption created by s. 7 of the Act; and taking into consideration the previous convictions of the accused under the Act, he sentenced him to pay a fine of R500, the maximum amount of fine allowed by the section. On appeal to the High Court: Held by CHANDAVARKAR and ASTON, JJ. (JACOB, J., dissenting), affirming the conviction, (i) that the presumption created by s. 7 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act could be applied to cases falling under s. 5 as well as to those falling within the purview of s. 4 of the Act. (ii) That the applicability of s. 7 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act was affected by the fact that a considerable interval had elapsed between the issue of a warrant under s. 6 of the Act and the execution thereof. (iii) That the evidence that the accused had been previously convicted of the same offence was admissible to show guilty knowledge or intention. Held, JACOB, J., dissenting, (i) that the presumption created by s. 7 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (Bombay Act IV of 1887) is sufficient for the purposes of s. 5 of the Act. It is also sufficient for the purposes of s. 4 (a) so far as regards the fact that the house, etc., is so used, but it is not alone sufficient for the purpose of showing that the house was so kept or used by any specified person. (ii) That in a trial for an offence under s. 4 (a) of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act the evidence that the accused was previously convicted of a similar offence cannot be admitted either under s. 54 or s. 11 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872). (iii) That the question whether the delay between the issue of a warrant under s. 6 of the Act and its execution has been reasonable or otherwise is one which must be decided with reference to the circumstances of each case. ——— ss. 4, 5, 7—Common gaming house—Jamátkhána of the Borah community. The accused were found playing for money with cards in a building ordinarily used as a Jamátkhána, but accessible to such members of the Borah community as have no place to live in and are too poor to afford the rent of a room. This place was frequented by the petitioners and others and instruments of gaming were found there, when the accused were arrested. The Magistrate convicted the accused of offences under ss. 4 and 5 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (IV of 1887) Held, that it was open to the Magistrate to rely on the presumption which under s. 7 of the Act might be drawn, that this place was used as a common gaming house, unless the contrary was made to appear by the evidence before him: there was, therefore, no ground to interfere in revision with the conviction under s. 5 of the Act. Held, further, that no presumption arose under s. 7 of the Act that the place was "kept" by any person as a common gaming house: the conviction under s. 4 was therefore wrong. In order to constitute an offence under s. 4 of the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (Bombay Act IV of 1887) of keeping a common gaming house, it is necessary to show in the first place, that the person charged with that offence is the owner or occupier, or a person "having the use" of the place alleged to be kept as a common gaming house. It is not sufficient to show that the accused used the place in question for the purpose of gaming there. EMPEROR v. WALIA MUSAJI (1905) . . I. L. R. 29 Bom. 226

XXI of 1827, s. 60.* The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant, a farmer of abkari duties on the manufacture of spirits, under s. 60 of Bombay Regulation XXI of 1827, a sum of money alleged to have been illegally levied by him as tax or rent through the mamlatdar in respect of certain cocoanut trees tapped by the plaintiff in 1877-78 and 1878-79. Held, that the Civil Courts have jurisdiction to entertain such a suit. If the claim be held to be one in respect of land revenue, it falls within the exception contained in cl. (c) of s. 5 of Act X of 1876. If it is not, s. 4 of the Act has no application. Per BIRDWOOD, J.—The expression "land revenue," as used in Act X of 1876, does not include either the duties leviable, under Reg. XXI of 1827, on the manufacture of spirits, or the taxes on the tapping of toddy trees, the levy of which in certain districts was legalized by s. 24 of the Bombay Abkari Act, V of 1878. A farmer of duties on the manufacture of spirits is not authorized to levy a duty on any juice in trees, either under Regulation XXI of 1827, or Act X of 1876, or Bombay Act V of 1878. At the end of the revenue year 1878-79, i.e., on 31st July 1879, the plaintiff was a defaulter in respect of the assessment payable to Government for that year. In November 1879 a punitive police post was established in the village, under s. 16 of Bombay Act VII of 1867, on account of the turbulent conduct of the inhabitants. Between January and April 1880 the Collector sold certain property of the talukhdar for arrears of revenue, and realized by the sale a sum of R1,608-12-8. This sum was more than sufficient to cover the arrears due for 1878-79 as well as the assessment payable for 1879-80, but the Collector, after deducting the arrears due for 1878-79, applied the rest of the sale-proceeds towards the payment of the cost of the punitive post. The assessment for 1879-80 having remained unpaid, the village was attached on the 1st of July 1880, under s. 159 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Act V of 1879). The attachment was followed on the 6th January 1881 by an order declaring the village to be forfeited under s. 153 of the Code. In 1886 the plaintiff filed the present suit against Government to recover possession of the village, and for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal and ultra vires. The defendant pleaded (inter aliâ) that the suit was barred under s. 4, cl. (c), of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), that it was also barred by limitation. Held, also, that the plaintiff's claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not barred by s. 4, cl. (c), of Act X of 1876, as the order of forfeiture could not be considered "a proceeding for the realization of land revenue." The proceeding authorized by law for the realization of land revenue, i.e., the attachment of the village, having been taken, no other proceeding could legally be taken, as against the plaintiff, till the expiration of twelve years from the date of the attachment. Held, further, that the claim for a declaration that the order of forfeiture was illegal was not time-barred, as it was governed by Art. 120 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877). 3. ——— Service inam land—Suit for a declaration of title to trees thereon and for damages—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Hereditary Offices Act (Bombay Act III of 1874)—Hereditary officer—Officiator. The plaintiff complained that he was prevented from cutting the trees growing on land situate in the village of Tungarli, belonging to certain persons who had sold the trees to him. He claimed damages and an injunction restraining the Collector from interfering with him. The defendant pleaded that the trees did not belong to the plaintiff's vendors, being on service inam land. The lower Court dismissed the plaintiff's claim, holding that the land, on which the trees were growing, was service inam land, and that the plaintiff's vendors had no title to them. On appeal, the High Court, on the evidence, upheld the lower Court's decision that the land was inam service land, but held that it did not necessarily follow that the trees upon it were the property of Government, and not of the vatandars. The latter might be the owners of the trees subject to a condition. The case was, therefore, remanded to the District Court for a finding on an issue as to whether the holders of service inam lands had a title to the trees on the lands, and, if so, whether they had the right to cut down trees without the permission of the Collector. On this finding the District Judge found in the affirmative. The case then came again before the High Court, when a preliminary objection was taken that under s. 4 of Act X of 1876 the Court had no jurisdiction. Held, that, it having been decided that land in question were service inam land, the Court, under s. 4, cl. (a), of Bombay Act X of 1876, ceased to have jurisdiction over the plaintiff's claim against Government in respect of the trees growing thereon, as such claims related to property appertaining to the office of a village officer. 4. ——— "Any other written grant"—Land free from assessment—Treaty—Civil Courts—Jurisdiction—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—Suit for declaration—Consequential relief—Amendment of plaint—Construction of documents. In s. 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), the clauses (h), (i), (j) and (k) are independent of one another: the source of title referred to in each stands apart from the rest and each clause is connected only with that portion of the proviso, which precedes clause (h). The expression "any other written grant" in clause (j) therefore means any written grant other than that which falls within clauses (h) and (i) of the section. The term "treaty" in s. 4 (a) of the Act is not to be broadly construed, but is to be confined in its interpretation to its accepted meaning, i.e., an agreement between two or more independent sovereign powers or states. Generally speaking, the name given by the parties to a document is not conclusive as to its nature; but the designation given by the parties themselves to it cannot be lost sight of where the document is ambiguous and is susceptible of more than one construction as to its nature and scope. The effect of the amendment by Act XVI of 1877 is that nothing in s. 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876) shall be held to prevent the Civil Courts in the Districts mentioned in the second schedule annexed to that Act from exercising jurisdiction over claims against Government to hold lands wholly or partially free from payment of land revenue. The plaintiffs filed a suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council for a declaration that they were entitled to hold certain lands free from assessment. The defendant objected that the suit was barred under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). After the settlement of the issues in the case, the plaintiffs applied for leave to amend the plaint by adding thereto a prayer for injunction by way of consequential relief. The lower Court refused to grant the prayer. Held, that the lower Court should have exercised its discretion in plaintiffs' favour, although the prayer for amendment was made very late, as it was a mere matter of form which could not affect the merits of the claim or transform the nature of the suit. The plaintiff having contended that his claim was for the possession of lands and not for the revenue arising therefrom, which alone was granted : Held, that the plaintiff's vendor was put into the occupation of the land free from assessment as the reward of his service and that his remuneration did not and could not consist in an exemption from assessment in respect of the lands without reference to his occupation. BOMBAY REVENUE JURISDICTION ACT (X OF 1876)—contd.

Plaintiff contended that by virtue of s. 4, cl. (b), of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876) the Civil Court was precluded from entertaining the defendant's contention. Held, that cl. (b) of s. 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876) presented no bar to the hearing by the Civil Court of the contention set up by the defendant. An objection to come within 1st head of s. 4, cl. (b), of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), must be " to the amount or incidence of any assessment of land revenue " itself and as such, in other words, apart from the question of any other and independent right, if an occupancy tenant complains that though he is bound to pay the assessment of land revenue, the amount or incidence of it as authorised by Government is too high, having regard to the nature of the soil and quality of his land and other like considerations, the objection is one purely and simply to such amount or incidence. But if, without questioning the legality or propriety of the amount or incidence per se, he asserts a right independent of and having no relation to it, such as a right to pay a certain fixed amount annually under a contract between him and the Inamdar, he cannot be said to object to the amount or incidence of the assessment. Nor can such a tenant be said by his objection to object to the validity or effect of the notification of survey or settlement under the 3rd head of cl. (b) of s. 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876). " Objections " in s. 4, cl. (b), of the Act can be raised by a suit or in defence to a suit. LAKSHMAN v. GOVIND (1904) . . I. Therefore, the bar of section 11 would not apply to a suit wherein the cause of action is not an order or decision in respect of which there was a right of appeal under the Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879). BOMBAY SURVEY AND SETTLEMENT ACT (I OF 1865)—contd.

1. ——— Revenue survey—Entry of tenants in registers—Landlord and tenant. The mere entry of the names of the tenants of a khot in the Government registers as occupants under the Revenue Survey Act, I (Bombay) of 1865, does not constitute an injury to the landlord of a tangible kind, of which the Civil Courts can take cognizance. The khot's rights as landlord, if they can be established, cannot be prejudiced by any proceeding under the Survey Act, there being nothing in that Act, or the rules framed under it, which affects the rights of subjects of the Government inter se. The utmost benefit which the tenants can derive, as against their landlord, from being entered as occupants under the Act, is a right to claim a deduction of the amount of assessment paid by them direct to the Government. If they deny his title, he can sue them either to establish his title and recover the full rent due to him under his contract with them, or to eject them as holding possession of his lands by a title which they themselves repudiate. 2. ——— Boundary dispute. "Boundary dispute," as used in the Survey Act (Bombay Act I of 1865), means a contention between two neighbouring land-proprietors as to where a boundary line or boundary marks has or have been fixed by the survey officers. After the functions of the latter officers have ceased in a district, the Collector acting under Act III of 1846 is the proper officer to determine such a dispute, and fix the proper position of the boundary marks. But where a landholder claims to recover from a neighbouring holder land alleged to have been usurped or encroached upon by the latter, the person aggrieved must file his plaint in Court (which in the case of a claim for mere possession may be the Court of the Mamlatdar or the ordinary Civil Court), where the determination of the Collector as to the proper position of the boundary line or marks (although it of itself confers or withdraws no right of possession) affords valuable evidence in adjudicating upon the rights of the parties. ——— Power of Government to raise assessment—Bom. Reg. XVII of 1827, s. 4, cls. 2 and 3. The words in s. 25 of Bombay Act I of 1865 confer upon Government no absolute power in all cases to fix any assessment they may please. But that section as also s. 4, cl. 2, Regulation XVII of 1827, distinctly limit the power of Government to raise the assessment on land held partially exempt by right. Government, however, may set aside such limitations at their discretion by a legislative enactment, as provided by cl. 3 of the above Regulation. But Government can exercise this power only under "specific" rules. In Bombay Act I of 1865, s. 25, no such "specific" rules are to be found as would indicate that the Legislature intended to set aside the provisions of cl. 2, s. 4, Regulation XVII of 1827, and to enable the revenue officers to ignore all exemptions except those which they may themselves choose to recognise. Where plaintiff had enjoyed "savai sut" or a remission of one-fourth for a period of more than thirty years with respect to lands on which assessment became leviable in 1805 A. held on a settlement for a period not exceeding thirty years, the value was held to be five times the assessment, and the stamp duty calculated upon it, irrespective of the actual market value or the amount for which the land was attached. The holder of a cocoanut oart in Bandora, in the island of Salsette, in the Thana district, paying an annual assessment of R39 to Government, built a bungalow upon it without the permission of the Collector, who under the rule purporting to have been issued by the Government of Bombay on the 1st February 1869 in accordance with the provisions of s. 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865, demanded from him a fine equal to sixty times the assessment, and, on the plaintiff's failure to pay the fine, summarily attached the land under the provisions of s. 48 of that Act: Held, first, that the Government of Bombay had no authority to make the rule of 1st February 1869, and that, s. 35 of the Survey Act providing no penalty for building without the Collector's permission, the attachment was illegal. Secondly, that the expressions "Government land" and "Land belonging to Government" in Bombay Act I of 1865 mean land of which Government is the proprietor, and do not apply to land in which the proprietary right in the soil vests in a private individual, whether or not it be subject to the payment of assessment to Government. Quære: Whether the amount of the fine contemplated in s. 35 of Bombay Act I of 1865, if not paid, is a charge leviable by summary attachment under s. 48. 2. ——— s. 5, cl. (1), para. (2)—Bombay Act I of 1865—Building-sites—Exemption from payment of Government land revenue. On the 6th April 1836, the Collector of Ahmedabad demised by lease a building-site in that city to the plaintiff's grandfather for a term of ninety-nine years. No rent was reserved by the lease as then presently payable, but it contained a provision that the lessee should pay, in respect of the said site, such land tax as might "fall upon all." The lessee and his heirs held the site from the date of the lease down to 1878 without paying or being required to pay any land-tax or rent to Government. In 1878, however, Government levied from the plaintiff R2-11-0 as land revenue assessed on the site. Plaintiff thereupon sued the Collector of Ahmedabad for recovery of the amount, on the ground that the assessment and levy were illegal. Held, that the plaintiff's building-site was exempted from liability to assessment by Bombay Act IV of 1868, s. 5, cl. 1, para. 2, which enactment applied to the case. Held, also, that this exemption was not to continue beyond the term for which the site had been demised by Government, but that on its expiration it will be open to Government to resume the land altogether, or to re-let it on such terms as

Act VI of 1862 (Bombay), "for the amelioration of the condition of talukhdars in the Ahmedabad Collectorate and for their relief from debt," was intended to deal with all debts and liabilities which could possibly impose a charge upon the talukhdari estate at the end of the period of management; when the estate was to be restored to the talukhdar free of incumbrance, excepting the Government revenue. If debts amounted to more than the surplus of rents during the management of which the maximum period was twenty years, they were not to be paid. A widow, as guardian of her infant son, the heir of talukhdari estate in the above district, validly transferred villages, part thereof, and in the deed of transfer to which her ward was, by her as his guardian, nominally a party, contracted to indemnify the purchaser in case the Government should claim and enforce a right to revenue upon the villages which she transferred as being rent-free. The deed purported to make both guardian and ward personally liable in this respect, and also charged the liability upon other parts of the talukhdari estate. The infant attained majority and the estate was then placed under management within Act VI of 1862. During the period of management the Government claimed and enforced payment of revenue upon the villages. Held, that there was no personal liability on the part of the talukhdar created by the above ; also that if, the charge on the estate had been validly made, it fell, at all events, within the terms of s. 12 of Act VI of 1862, absolving estates from liability for debts incurred, not only before, but during the period of management. 2. ——— and s. 20—Talukhdar's power of disposal over his landed estates after the expiration of the management by the Talukhdari Settlement Officer. Under s. 12 of the Ahmedabad Talukhdars Act (VI of 1862), debts or liabilities incurred by a talukhdar during the management of the Talukhdari Settlement Officer are not enforceable against landed estates. His personal liability for the same remains unaffected by the Act. This personal liability furnishes a sufficient consideration for a subsequent obligation, so as to bind the landed estates by a contract made after the period of the management by the Talukhdari Officer had expired. From and after the expiration of that period, the talukhdar becomes, under s. 20, the absolute proprietor of his estate, and he is then at liberty to create a valid charge upon his estate for debts contracted during the period of the management. Accordingly, where a talukhdar had, after the withdrawal of the management by the Talukhdari Settlement Officer, encumbered his landed estate under several mortgage-bonds, passed partly in renewal of old bonds and partly in consideration of old debts contracted during the period of the management :—Held, that the mortgage-bonds created valid and binding encumbrances upon the estate. BOMBAY TRAMWAYS ACT (I OF 1874).

——— s. 24—Meaning of the words "Regulating the travelling"—Validity of Regulation made under the section for regulating the conduct of the Company's servants. The words "regulating the travelling" in s. 24 of the Bombay Tramways Act (Bombay Act I of 1874) mean laying down rules as to how persons shall travel, that is to say, rules for the conduct and behaviour of the persons who travel, and cannot be held to include rules for the conduct of the Company's servants, prescribing what they shall do, or what they shall not do in the matter, for instance, of issuing tickets. S. 24 of Bombay Act I of 1874 authorizes the Bombay Tramway Company to make regulations "for regulating the travelling in or upon any carriage belonging to them." Under this section the Company made the following regulation:—"Any conductor who shall neglect to issue a ticket to a passenger, or shall issue to such passenger a ticket bearing a number other than one of the numbers contained in such books, or shall issue a ticket of a lower denomination than the amount of the fare, or non-consecutive in number, or a ticket other than the ticket provided by the Company for the journey to be travelled, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding R25." Held, that the regulation was ultra vires. ——— s. 30—Purchase by Municipal Corporation of Bombay of tramway undertaking—Notice of intention to purchase—Arrangement by Corporation with third person—Date of purchase for purpose of ascertaining compensation—Liability of Tramway Company for track rent during period between notice and date of purchase. By an agreement, dated 12th March 1873, the Municipal Corporation of Bombay (the respondents) allowed certain persons, of whom the Bombay Tramway Company (the appellants) were the assignees, to construct and work tramways in the City of Bombay. S. 30 of the Bombay Tramways Act (Bombay Act I of 1874) gave the respondents the right to purchase the tramways from the appellants "with the plant, stores, rolling-stock and everything connected therewith after the expiration of 21 years from the 12th day of March 1873, upon declaring their intention so to do within six months after the expiration of the said 21 years" and gave them "a renewed right to purchase at the end of every seven years after the expiration of the said 21 years upon similar notice being given." Notice of the intention to exercise such renewed right of purchase was duly given by the respondents on 14th March 1901. In a suit by the appellants against the respondents to have their rights under the purchase declared. Held, by the Judicial Committee (affirming the decision of the Courts below), that the notice was not invalid by reason of the respondents having made an arrangement with a third person who was to find the money for the purchase and work the tramways, when acquired by the respondents, it appearing that the respondents were acting as principals in the matter, and not as agents of such third person, and that there was nothing in the Act to prohibit such a transaction or to show that, when acquired, the respondents were bound to keep the tramways in their own hands, and work them themselves. By s. 30 of the above Act it was further enacted that "the amount to be paid in the event of such purchase shall be the actual bonâ fide value (exclusive of any compensation for good will, premium, or compulsory sale or other consideration whatsoever) of the tramways and of the works and materials connected therewith and of the lands and buildings and all other the property of the grantees, such value, in case the parties do not agree, to be decided by arbitration as provided by the agreement of 12th March 1873; and as compensation for the good will, premium, or compulsory sale and other consideration the grantees shall be paid an amount equal to 20 years' purchase calculated on the average profits of the previous 3 years next preceding the purchase." The first Court decided that the date of the purchase for the purpose of ascertaining the compensation was the date of the notice, namely, the 14th March 1901; but both parties appealed from that decision. The High Court on appeal held that the date of the purchase would be the date when the value was ascertained. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that the proper date to be fixed would have been when the relation of vendor and purchaser was definitely created by the service of the notice of intention to purchase, that is, the 14th March 1901; but that, having regard to the course taken by the parties, neither party without the consent of the other could insist that that date ought to be adopted, and that under the circumstances there were no grounds for disturbing the date fixed by the High Court on appeal, namely, the date of the award fixing the value of the ——— ss. 10, 11, and 12—Duties of the police patel in cases of unnatural or sudden death—Ancient village system of Police, how affected by the Code of Criminal Procedure (1882). The ancient village system of police, as regulated by Bombay Act VIII of 1867, remains unaffected by the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1862) except where the Code contains a specific provision. Under Bombay Act VIII of 1867, the police patel has to do much more than merely inform the district police. He has himself to investigate the matter of a crime and obtain all procurable evidence. Under s. 11 of the Act, if an unnatural or sudden death occur, or any corpse be found, he must forthwith hold an inquest and investigate with the panch the causes of death and all the circumstances of the case, and make a written report of the same. If it appears that the death was unlawfully caused, he must immediately give notice to the police station, and if the state of the corpse permits, he shall at once forward it to the Civil Surgeon or other appointed medical officer. These provisions of the law are likely to be defeated if the police patel refrains from the proper action until the district police officers arrive on the spot. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAGHO MAHADU I. 4. ——— Bond with collateral agreement to accept rents—Right of suit. In a suit to recover money (principal and interest) alleged to have been due on a bond, defendant pleaded that subsequent to the execution of the bond plaintiff had taken from the obligor an ijara and a dur-ijara and executed ijara kabuliats, agreeing to accept payment of the bond by setting off the rents due under the kabuliats. It was found that the kabuliats stipulated that during their term the rent should, year after year and instalment by instalment, be credited in payment of the bond debt, and that at the end of the term of the ijara accounts should be settled and the balance paid, neither party being at liberty to put an end to the lease. Held, that till the termination of the lease plaintiff could not sue on the bond, his right of suit having been suspended during the continuance of the ijara and dur-ijara, the stipulations in which qualified the stipulation in the bond for absolute payment at the end of a specified period. 5. ——— Cause of action—Limitation. J, after entering into a bond for the payment of a sum of money, adopted one S, who took the family estate at J's death. While in the enjoyment of the estate, the bond-holders brought a suit against him to realize the debt, and obtained a decree. Under the decree, the obligees sought to sell the property which by the time of the execution had come into the hands of R (a great-nephew of J's), who sued and eventually succeeded in having J's adoption declared void. R then sued to set aside, so far as it affected him, the decree for the sale of the property, and in this suit also he eventually succeeded. The representative of the original bond-holders then brought a suit against R to recover the money due on the bond. Held, that plaintiff's right of suit first arose, not from the last decree in favour of R, but from the time when the debt became due under the terms of the bond. I shall not lay any claim to any payment made except in this way," —Held, that though the defendant at the time of the adjustment disputed the correctness of the account, yet that, by having executed the bond and made payments under it, he must be held to have waived his objection, and in a suit on the

20. ——— Fraud—Undue influence and threats. The three childless widows of a zamindar instituted a suit against the rightful heir to their husband's estate, in which they unsuccessfully disputed his legitimacy. Previously thereto they had obtained advances of money from the present plaintiff and executed in his favour an agreement and a bond, whereby they secured to him the payment of large sums in case they recovered their husband's estate, and virtually gave to him the entire control of their suit. Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit, which compromise, however, was never acted upon, partly owing, it was alleged, to the subsequent conduct of the heir. At the date of the compromise, the heir, who had just attained his majority, and was without proper counsel or assistance, and acted under threats from the plaintiff, a powerful and wealthy banker, that he would carry on the litigation against him per fas aut nefas, was induced, contrary to his own judgment and sense of right, and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff, to execute a bond in his favour, whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due from the widows; the plaintiff on his part agreeing that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows, but meanwhile that he would retain the securities which he held from them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the last-mentioned bond:—Held, that the bond was wholly invalid and fraudulent as against the defendant, and that, as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond, it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due from the widows. Semble: The transaction, even if valid, did not amount to a novation, for the plaintiff never abandoned his claim against the widows, but only agreed to abandon his remedy against them in case he obtained satisfaction of his claim from the heir. 21. ——— Bond for payment of bills of exchange—Collateral security—Presumption. Where a person who is indebted on certain bills of exchange accepted by him gives a bond for securing payment of the whole amount with interest by instalments, the fact that the bills were not to be given back until all the instalments should be paid raises a presumption that the bond was only intended to be a collateral security, and not a substitution for the obligation arising from the bills of exchange. 22. ——— Verbal assignment of rent of land in satisfaction of interest—"Jamog"—Mutation of names in favour of assignee not effected—Suit on bond—Claim for interest notwithstanding assignment. Subsequent to the execution and registration of a bond, a jamog was made orally between the creditor and the debtor, by which the former agreed to take the rents of certain tenants of the latter in satisfaction of interest; the latter agreed to release the tenants from payment of rent to himself, and the tenants (who were parties to the arrangement) agreed to pay their rents to the creditor. No mutation of names in favour of the creditor was effected in the revenue registers. The creditor brought a suit against the debtor to recover the principal and interest agreed to be paid under the bond, alleging that he had never received any rents under the jamog. Held, that the effect of the jamog or novation was that the plaintiff's right to recover interest from the defendant was gone, and the plaintiff was therefore not entitled to maintain his suit against the defendant in respect of the interest which was payable under the bond. bond contained a proviso that, on default being made in the payment of any one instalment, the whole amount should become due. Default was made in the payment of several instalments, but subsequently payments were made by the defendants and accepted by the plaintiff on account of the unpaid instalments. The defendants pleaded the law of limitation. The suit was brought more than three years after the first default in payment of an instalment had been made, but within three years from the time when, taking into account the payments that had been made, the first instalment claimed became due. Held, that these payments as regards both parties must be considered as if made at the time fixed; that the defendants could not rely upon the stipulation as making the whole debt due, and fixing the period from which the time of limitation ran; and that, the first of the instalments claimed having become due within three years, the suit was not barred. The debt was payable by eight annual instalments, on failure of any one of which the whole amount was to be payable on demand. No instalment was paid, and when the suit was brought, defendant pleaded that the suit was barred as three years had elapsed from the date on which the last instalment became due. Held, that the usual clause, that on failure to pay one instalment the whole amount shall be payable on demand, gave a mere election to plaintiff of converting the obligation into a different one; that that election was never exercised, and that the document continued to be one securing the payment of a debt by instalments as to all of which the action had long been barred; and that it was unnecessary, therefore, to consider whether, in the present case, "on demand" must not be construed according to its meaning at the period

The obligee may waive the default under Acts IX of 1871 and XV of 1877, Sch. II, Art. 75

but the Courts have no authority to compel him to waive it. Neither Act VIII of 1859, s. 194, nor Act X of 1877, s. 210, confers any authority on the Courts to relieve a contracting party from such an express stipulation in a bond payable by instalments as to the consequence of default in punctual payment of the instalments. A debt being presently due, an agreement to pay it by instalments, with a stipulation that on default the creditor may demand immediate payment of the whole balance due with interest, is not to be relieved against in equity. Such a stipulation is not in the nature of a penalty, inasmuch as its object is only to secure payment on a particular manner. The defendant executed to the plaintiff a bond payable by instalments, and expressly stipulating for the payment of the whole amount on failure to pay any instalment on the day fixed. He paid the first instalment, but made default in paying the second, which fell due on the 3rd August 1878. On the 20th August plaintiff sued to recover the whole balance due on the bond. Defendant admitted the bond, but pleaded tender of the amount of the second instalment soon after the due date, and prayed for payment by instalments without any interest. The first Court passed a decree in the plaintiff's favour for the amount claimed with costs, but ordered defendant to pay ₹100 and the costs at once, and the balance by yearly instalments of ₹100 each with interest at six per cent. till payment. The District Judge, on appeal, affirmed the decree, with a slight variation as to interest, which he directed the defendant to pay on overdue instalments only. Held by the High Court, on second appeal, that neither of the lower Courts had jurisdiction, without the consent of the parties, to substitute, for the contract made by them, terms which the Court preferred. Held, also, that plaintiff was entitled to sue on the day after that on which the default was made,—viz., on the day after that fixed for the payment of the instalment,—and that the Subordinate Judge had no power to rule the contrary. 35. ——— Default in payment—Expiration of time for specific enforcement of contract. A bond for money provided that on failure on the part of the obligor to pay interest as agreed in the bond, and within a certain period from date of the bond, the obligee might sue for possession of the immoveable property mortgaged in the bond. Default was made in the payment of interest as agreed, but the obligee deferred bringing a suit for possession of the mortgaged property so long that the time mentioned in the bond expired before he could obtain a decree. Held, that under these circumstances a decree for possession of the property could not be granted to him. 36. ——— Suit on bond—Limitation—Burden of proof—Indorsement of payment of instalments. Where a defendant sets up the defence of limitation, he must plead it, and show that the claim is barred. If, when the plaintiff has proved his case, the fact show that the cause of action accrued at a date earlier than the period of limitation, and the plea of limitation has been set up by the defendant, the latter will be entitled to take advantage of the plaintiff's evidence that the claim is barred, and to have judgment given in his favour. The obligee of a bond by which obligor covenanted to pay the sum of ₹3,000 by annual instalments of ₹200, and in which it was also agreed that payments of the instalments should be indorsed on the bond, brought a suit against the obligor, alleging default in payment, and claiming to recover the amount of the bond. He gave credit for payment of the instalments for seven years, and alleged that his cause of action arose upon default in payment of the eighth instalment. The bond showed on its face indorsements of the payments for which credit was given. The obligor alleged that no instalments were paid after the third year, that therefore the debt became due at an earlier date than that stated by the plaintiff, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Held, that, inasmuch as the defendant adduced no evidence to show that the later instalments were not paid, and inasmuch as the evidence produced by the plaintiff did not show that the debt accrued at a date earlier than the limitation period, the plea of limitation failed. There was a further stipulation that, on default of payment, the bond was to be enforced as a decree. On failure of payment, the obligee applied for execution under s. 53, Act XX of 1866, but the Subordinate Judge ordered the payment to be made by instalments. On an application to the High Court under s. 15 of the Charter Act:—Held, that the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to pass a decree on the bond altering or varying its terms. S. 194, Act VIII of 1859, did not apply. KHETTRA MOHUN BABOO v. RASHBEHARI BABOO

It is of no consequence whether the alteration would be beneficial or detrimental to the party sought to be charged on the contract. Where after a bond had been executed by the first defendant and delivered to the plaintiff, the name of the second defendant was added as an executant without any authority from him and without the assent of the first defendant. Held, that this was such an alteration in the deed as would vitiate it against the first defendant. Held, further, that the plaintiff was not entitled to succeed on the basis of the original consideration and to rely on the altered bond as proof of acknowledgment. Master v *Miller, 1 Sm. The bond further contained a stipulation that the borrower should not be empowered to repay the money within three years. And if he did pay within three years, he should nevertheless be obliged to pay three years' interest at the rate mentioned. Held, that although it could not be said that the execution of this bond was procured by means of undue influence or that the rate of interest penal, nevertheless the bargain was an unconscionable bargain against which the Court might properly give relief. of Contract Act—Right of suit—Civil suit maintainable in respect of act amounting to criminal offence—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Arts. 6, 115—Local Board's Act (Madras), ss. 162-C and 162-D do not bar a civil suit on contract. An agreement between a contractor and a Local Board contained the following terms: "As I have taken over under contract for R406 the right to collect the fees on the articles brought for sale in Udipi market from 1st April 1902 to 31st March 1903, I am bound to act according to the following conditions:—I am not entitled to collect more than the undermentioned rate of fees from the persons seated and trading on the site of the fair.

I am bound to put up a board with the rates of fees to be collected by me and my name in English and Canarese in a public place in the market. If I, my agent, or servant were to act contrary to the above regulations, I shall be liable to pay a fine not exceeding R50 imposed by the President of the Taluk Board, or I am not entitled to object if my gutta is put up for auction again subject to the loss that may be sustained by the Taluk Board." Under the terms of the above contract, the President of the Taluk Board imposed on the defendant a fine of R20 on 4th November 1902 in respect of illegal excessive collections made by his agent. The defendant not having paid the fine, the President instituted a civil suit for the amount of the fine on 4th January 1904. Held, that the suit was maintainable, although the acts of the defendant's agent amounted to a criminal offence and no criminal proceedings were taken against the agent. It is doubtful whether the doctrine that a person injured by a felonious act cannot seek civil redress without prosecuting the felon in the Criminal Courts, applies in India; and the doctrine does not apply where a principal is used in the Civil Courts in respect of the wrongful acts of his agent. Held, also, that the agreement in question was not a bailbond or recognisance within the meaning of the exception to s. 74 of the Contract Act, and though given for the performance of a public duty, it was not given under the provisions of any law. The exception to s. 74 did not apply and the plaintiff was entitled to reasonable damages under the section. Held, also, that the suit was based on contract and for purposes of limitation fell within Art. 68 or 115 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act and not under Art. 6 of the schedule. Held, further, that the penal clauses of ss. 162-C and 162-D of the Local Board's Act did not preclude the plaintiff from suing the defendant on his contract. When a suit is brought by material men for necessaries supplied to a foreign ship against the surplus proceeds of such ship lying in the registry of the Court, and there is no opposition on the part of the owners of these proceeds, the Court has a discretionary power to allow the claim of the material men to be paid out of such unclaimed proceeds. In re the proceeds of the "ASIA." 3. ——— Master's lien for wages— Sale of ship—Charterer—Priority. The charterer of a ship advanced money to enable her to complete the voyage, and obtained as security a "bottomry-bond," signed by both the master and owner. On the completion of the voyage, the charterer got the ship arrested and sold, and the money was brought into Court. Before any order had been made for the payment of the proceeds out of Court, the master also had got the ship arrested at his suit for wages due, but no decree had been obtained. Subsequently, the charterer, without notice to the master, obtained an order of Court for the payment of the proceeds of sale to satisfy his bottomry-bond. Thereupon the master applied to restrain the charterer from taking the money out of Court until the claim for wages had been first satisfied. Held, that the master had a lien on the proceeds for wages due to him at the time of the sale of the ship, prior to that to the bottomry-bond-holder, and that he was entitled to have the proceeds retained in Court until the hearing of his claim. In the matter of the SHIP "PORTUGAL." . . 5 B. 4. ——— Master's lien for disbursements and wages—Towage—Priority of lien. A ship was chartered for a voyage from Calcutta to Jedda and back. While at Jedda, the master found it necessary to borrow money for the wages of the crew and other purposes; and with the consent of the owner, tenders were invited by advertisement for a sum for which a bottomry-bond was to be given. Several tenders were made, and one by the Charterer of the ship was accepted. A bottomry-bond was executed by the master, with the consent of the owner, in which was included the expense of certain repairs which had been found necessary at an intermediate port on the voyage from Calcutta, and for which the master had made himself liable. By the bond the master bound himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, for the payment of the sum named therein, and part of the consideration was expressed to be the payment of the debt which the master had incurred at the intermediate port. On arriving in the Hooghly, the ship was taken in charge by a pilot, under whose advice the master engaged a steamer to tow her to Calcutta. He was sued in Calcutta for the hire of the steamer, and had to pay the claim. When the ship arrived in Calcutta, the bond-holder obtained a decree on his bond, and had the ship arrested and sold; but on the application of the master, who had put in a claim for wages, the Court ordered that the proceeds should remain in Court pending the consideration of the master's claim. In a suit by the master to recover the balance of wages due to him as master of the ship, and for the expense of the steamer which towed the ship up the river to Calcutta:—Held, that the towage was a disbursement fairly made, and of which the bond-holder had the benefit; the master, therefore, had a lien on the ship for such disbursement. Semble: The master also had a lien for wages down to the time when he was duly discharged, and not merely down to the time of the arrival in port and arrest of the ship. The master, however, having bound himself by the terms of the bond, was precluded thereby from setting up his lien against that of the bond-holder, to whom, on the face of the bond, he had constituted himself a debtor. In the matter of the SHIP "PORTUGAL" . . . 6 B. 6. ——— Owner's covenant to pay—Construction of deed of hypothecation—Uncertainty of agreement. The owners of a vessel for the purpose of repairing it borrowed a sum of ₹10,000 from the plaintiff and executed an instrument stating the purpose of the loan and hypothecating the vessel to him and promising to repay the principal with interest by the 12th of March 1891. The instrument proceeded as follows :—"You have no connection with the security or seaworthiness (yogyam) of the said ship up to the above stipulated time. If the money is not paid in the said stipulated time, we shall add vattam at ₹20 per cent. per annum on the amount of principal and interest accruing on that date, adding vattam once in twelve months until date of payment after the said stipulated time on the hypothecation security (adamana yogyam) of the said ship, and shall get back this mortgage bond." The money was not repaid on the stipulated date, and the vessel, after making several voyages, foundered in port. Held, that the instrument was not a bottomry-bond, and the plaintiff was not entitled under it, regarded as an instrument of hypothecation merely to recover the enhanced interest referred to in the passage above quoted, because that part of the agreement was void for uncertainty. 1. ——— Demarcation of boundary line—Beng. Reg. X of 1822, ss. 2, 3, and 8—Suit for declaration of boundary contrary to survey award—Proprietary rights, exercise of—Presumption of ownership—Beng. Reg. XI of 1825, s. 5, cl. 12. At the time of the Permanent Settlement the northern boundary of the pergunnah Shoosung (situated in Mymensingh, at the foot of the Garrow hills) was not defined by Government. From before that time, and certainly for more than sixty years, the zamindars of the pergunnah have always, but in an irregular and uncertain manner, exercised certain rights in the Garrow hills and over the inhabitants, who are half savages, such as hunting elephants, cutting wood, levying cesses on the inhabitants when possible (including in some parts of the hills a tribute of one rupee per hut), and exacting occasional services from them. Government held a survey, and declared the northern boundary of pergunnah Shoosung to be a line running along the base of the Garrow hills. The zamindar thereupon sued to set aside the survey, and for a declaration that the northern boundary lay many miles further north, and that the intermediate hill country belonged to him as forming part of pergunnah Shoosung. Held (by SETON-KARR, J.), that the acts of possession proved by the zamindar were sufficient under the circumstances to prove his proprietary right in the disputed tract, and for the passing of a decree in his favour. Held (by MACPHERSON, J.), that they were not sufficient to entitle him to a decree, being acts of mere easement independent of possession. Held by PEACOCK, C.J., JACKSON and PHEAR, JJ., on appeal under the Letters Patent, that the rules laid down by Regulation X of 1802 were intended to take effect only within the tract of country described in s. 2, within which the administration of civil and criminal justice, etc., was by s. 3 declared to be vested in an officer to be denominated the Civil Commissioner of the north-eastern parts of Rungpore. The proviso in s. 8 was not intended to give substantive powers to the Governor General in Council in respect of other tracts of the country, and cl. 2 of the same section did not intend to take away the power of any Civil Court except within that tract. The proviso contained in s. 8 does not authorize Government to separate any part of the Garrow country beyond that described in s. 2 from the district and from the general Regulations, but merely directs the separation of such tracts from the estates of the neighbouring zamindars, and the discontinuance of the collection of cesses by the zamindars from the Garrows. By cl. 2, s. 8, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is taken away only in respect of acts of the above description, done under the authority of the Government; but that does not take away the right of a zamindar to contest a survey award drawing a line which deprives him of part of his zamindari and his permanently-settled estate. Where a Rajah had exercised rights and collected dues on certain hills and in forests north of an alleged line, and it was the unanimous opinion of all the revenue authorities that the forests were within his permanently-settled estate, the assumption by them and Government of such line as the boundary of the Rajah's estate, throwing upon him the onus of proving his claim to any portion north of that line, was held to be arbitrary and anomalous. If such proceedings were adopted under cl. 12, s. 5, Regulation IX of 1825, they were wholly irregular, and the irregularity can be no ground for excluding the Court from examining them. When a man is found exercising, on both sides of a boundary line, without objection, rights of ownership or incorporeal rights, and when it is not shown that there is any other owner of the soil, or that any objection to the exercise of such rights was made during a long course of years, his acts cannot be treated as the encroachments of a wrong-doer. Per PHEAR, J.—Where acts of user illustrate all the modes of enjoyment of which a disputed property can reasonably be expected to be capable, it can be rightly attributed to proprietorship of the tract upon which they were exercised. A broker is entitled to his commission where he has induced in the vendor the contracting mind, the willingness to open negotiations upon a reasonable basis, even though a change or modification of the terms of the contract is made by the buyer and seller without his intervention. A broker sued the Municipality of Bombay for brokerage in respect of lands purchased by them: Held, that if during the time that the broker was negotiating with the vendor the latter was induced to consent to the sale, the broker was entitled to his brokerage. It was not material to inquire what operated upon the mind of the vendor, and whether it was the advice of friends, or the knowledge that his land could be acquired compulsorily, or the persuasions of the broker. It was sufficient to support the broker's claim if the vendor's acceptance of the terms was brought about during his intervention; and the fact that the Municipal Commissioner stepped in at the last moment, and himself actually struck the bargain, did not deprive the broker of his brokerage. Primarily a broker is merely the agent of the party by whom he is originally employed. To make the other side liable to pay him brokerage, it must be shown that he has been employed by such party to act for him, or that in the contract he has agreed to pay brokerage. 2. ——— Suit for brokerage—Contract effected by broker not carried out by purchaser—Quantam meruit. The plaintiff was employed by the defendants as broker to sell certain property. The defendant's letter, dated 3rd January 1895, engaging him as broker stated as follows:—"It is understood that the brokerage will be paid on receipt by us of the money, and that this transaction is to be completed within a fortnight from date." The plaintiff negotiated with one Pestonji Patel and his brother, who eventually agreed to become purchasers, but stipulated for four or five months within which to pay the purchase-money. On the 1st February 1895, the defendants through the plaintiff finally closed the contract with the purchasers, one of the terms of which provided that R10,000 should be paid immediately as earnest and the balance (R27,000) of the purchase-money to be paid within four months. The purchasers were, however, unable to pay the R10,000 earnest-money, and they handed to the defendants three Bank of Bombay shares as security for the performance of the contract. One of the purchasers shortly afterwards died: the defendants apparently abandoned the idea of enforcing the contract, and at the end of the year they returned to the purchasers' family two of the Bank of Bombay shares, having (as they alleged) sold the third to defray the expenses which they had incurred in connection with the transaction. The plaintiff sued to recover R1,500 as brokerage from the defendants. Held, that under the circumstances the plantiff was not entitled to recover the R1,500, but only to a quantum meruit, there being no previous agreement as to the time when the brokerage was to be paid; and that he was only entitled to a percentage (5 per cent.) on the value of the shares which had been actually received by the defendants. Part of the business for which the plaintiff was employed was to find a solvent purchaser. STOKES v. SOONDERNATH KHOTE . . . I. L. R. 22 Bom. 540

A part of the premises was re-valued and its assessment increased, in March 1903, in consequence of the improvements made including the deviations. In May 1903 a prosecution was instituted against him in respect of the cooking-shed only, and an order for partial demolition passed in August of the same year. The rest of the premises was re-assessed in September 1904 at a higher rate on account of the improvements. In February 1905 a notice was served on the petitioner to show cause why the additions, which were not in accordance with the sanctioned plan, should not be demolished, and an order was made by the Magistrate in August 1905 directing the demolition of such portion of the premises :—Held, that under s. 349 of the Calcutta Municipal Act it is discretionary with the Magistrate to pass an order of demolition or not, and that, under the circumstances of the case, the order was not a fair or proper one and could be set aside by the High Court. BUILDING ERECTED BY ADJOINING OWNERS.

——— Liability of adjoining owners for costs of party wall—Agreements for building—Decision of Government surveyor made final in case of dispute—Right of suit—Right of one owner over portion of party wall not used or built on by the other. Under separate agreements made by them respectively with Government, the plaintiff and defendant held adjoining plots of land for building. The agreements contained the same terms and stipulations, among which were the following :—"(a) The buildings to be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses. (b) All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties." The plaintiff employed a contractor to erect a house upon his plot of land. The house was completed in 1870, the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the conditions contained in the agreement with Government. Disputes subsequently arose between the plaintiff and his contractor, which were not settled until the 26th August 1878, on which date the plaintiff paid the contractor a sum of R20,515-4-11, which included the cost of the party wall. After the plaintiff's house had been completed, the defendant built his house upon the adjoining land, and in so doing he used a large portion of the party wall as the southern wall of his house. He paid the plaintiff half the cost of the portion used by him. The rear portion of the said wall not used by the defendant, as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of the plaintiff. The plaintiff demanded payment of half the cost of that part of the wall not used by the defendants, but the defendants refused to pay. The plaintiff then claimed that part of the wall as his own property, and proceeded to open windows in it. The defendants objected. The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit, claiming from the defendants payment of half the cost of the said portion of the wall not used by the defendants, and, in the event of such payment not being awarded, he prayed for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the said portion of the wall, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the sole enjoyment thereof. The brother (Khatav Luddha) of the first defendant was originally made the second defendant of the suit. He, however, disclaimed all interest in the premises, and it appeared that in 1876 the first defendant had sold the property to him (Khatav Luddha), who in 1879 sold it to Kesserbai, the first defendant's wife. Kesserbai accordingly was made the second defendant in the place of Khatav Luddha. Both the defendants pleaded limitation, and denied their liability to pay any part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use. The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the said wall, and claimed to set off this payment against the claim of the plaintiff. At the original hearing, SCOTT, J. held (i) that the part of the wall in dispute, although not used by the defendants, was a party wall, having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the said wall was erected ; (ii) that Kesserbai was liable, equally with the first defendant, to pay for this part of the wall, having purchased the property subject to the terms of the original agreement of which she presumably had notice ; (iii) that the suit was not barred, but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor, in whose decision lay all disputes as to such cost ; and that, until his decision was given, there was no complete cause of action. SCOTT, J., accordingly, on 11th December 1882, decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall, and that the defendants were entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from them, the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant. The case was thereupon adjourned, in order that the certificate of the Government surveyor might be obtained. The Government surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall, but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, etc., of the wall. The case came on again before SCOTT, J., who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined, and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendants appealed. Held, that, having regard to the terms of the agreements under which the plaintiff and defendants respectively held their property, the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant's set-off or the other points raised by the pleadings. These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue and upon which the Court might give judgment. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to use the portion of the wall not occupied by the defendants in any way except as a party wall. It was erected under the agreement as a party wall, and that it should be used for a purpose inconsistent with the idea of its being a party wall would be opposed to the true intention of the parties to the agreement, whether Government or the lessees. The plaintiff was not entitled to the full right of ownership over it, as if it had been built on his own ground: the declaration and injunction asked for, therefore, were refused.

BUILDING LEASE.

——— Party wall, liability for cost of—Agreement to refer disputes to a third person—Effect of such agreement on the right to sue—Award of such third person essential to right of action—Surveyor's certificate—Limitation—Covenant—Right to sue—Stranger to consideration—Landlord and tenant. The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant half the cost of a party wall. The plaintiff and defendants were lessees of adjoining pieces of land under agreements made between them respectively and the Secretary of State for India in Council as lessor. The terms and conditions of the two agreements were the same. By these agreements the plaintiff and defendant respectively agreed to build houses upon the said pieces of land in the manner therein specified, and the agreements contained the two following clauses:—(1) "The buildings to be continuous with party walls common to both adjoining houses." (2) "All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties." In pursuance of the said agreements, the plaintiff and defendants respectively erected buildings on the said pieces of land. The plaintiff caused the northern wall of his building to be built as a party wall, and it was used by the defendants as the southern wall of the building, erected by them. The defendants paid the builder, who was employed by the plaintiff, a sum of R700 on account of the cost of erecting the party wall, but the rest of the cost was defrayed by the plaintiff. The party wall was completed in November 1871, but, in consequence of disputes which arose between the plaintiff and the building contractor, the sum payable to the latter was not ascertained for some years. In March 1879 the plaintiff caused the party wall to be measured by a surveyor, and on the 7th June 1879 demanded from the defendants payment of half the cost. The defendants, however, falling to pay the sum demanded, the plaintiff, after notice to the defendants, caused the cost of the said party wall to be ascertained by the Government surveyor, who by a certificate, dated the 25th February 1882, certified that the share of the cost to be borne by the defendants for the said party wall was R3,226. The plaintiff in this action sought to recover this sum from the defendants minus the R700 which, as above stated, the defendants had already paid, and for which the plaintiff gave them credit. The defendants in their written statement alleged that the party wall had been partly built with materials supplied by them, and that in the year 1870 they had adjusted accounts with the plaintiff in respect of the said materials and the said party wall, and it was then agreed that the sum of R700 paid by the defendants should be treated as a final settlement. They also alleged that the plaintiff had settled disputes with the building contractors, and had only paid them three annas in the rupee on the amount of their claim in full satisfaction; the defendants pleaded that they ought not to be charged with more than their due proportion of such reduced amount. It was further contended for the defendant that their obligation to pay half the cost of the party wall existed independently of the arrangement between them and the plaintiff to refer the matter to the Government surveyor; that this latter covenant was only collateral, and did not interfere with the plaintiff's right to sue the defendants for their half share of the cost; that the plaintiff's cause of action in this respect arose on the 15th October 1878, when the contractor's claim was finally settled, and that this suit not having been brought for more than three years after that date, it was barred by limitation. Held, that the suit was not barred. There was no right of action independently of the valuation and award of the Government surveyor. There was no separate covenant to pay compensation to which the covenant for reference to the Government surveyor could be collateral. The rights of the parties were defined by the contracts, and under these each lessee might have the benefit of a party wall on such terms, and no others, as he on his part submitted to. Payment of a share of the cost was not one of those terms except in so far as each lessee, if a dispute arose, was bound by the decision of a Government surveyor. That decision was not ancillary, serving to give greater explicitness to a right already fully subsisting. It was essential to the right itself, and, until it was made, no cause of action for the moiety of the cost arose. Where, in leases granted by one lessor to several lessees taking sites for buildings intended to be contiguous and to form one block or group in mutual relation, there is a common covenant which is an inducement to the lessee to take the lease, and which he must know is equally an inducement to his neighbour to take his lease, neither can be called a stranger to the consideration. Each may be regarded as an equitable assignee of the covenants which the lessor made for his benefit as lessee. Each, consequently, has an equitable right to enforce against the other the obligation stipulated for in his interest, and serving as a part of his inducement (as the other knew) to the contract. _____ s. 4—Buddhist law of marriage in British Burma—Wife's claim upon husband for maintenance. By the Buddhist law of marriage, as administered in the Courts of British Burma, it is the duty of the husband to provide subsistence for his wife and to furnish her with suitable clothes and ornaments. If he fails to do so, he is liable to pay debts contracted by her for necessaries; but it appears that this law would not be applicable where she has sufficient means of her own. No authority has been found for saying that, where the wife has maintained herself, she can sue her husband for maintenance for the period during which she has done so. A wife married according to Burmese rights and customs claimed from her husband, in a Court in British Burma, a certain sum for her expenses of necessaries and living for a past period during which she had maintained herself. Held, that this was a question "regarding marriage" within the meaning of the Burma Courts Act, XVII of 1875, s. 4, and that, therefore, the Buddhist law formed the rule of decision. The law, as stated above, was accordingly applicable. Semble: That if this had been a case in which, by the above Act, a Court would have had to act according to the rule of justice, equity, and good conscience, there would have been no ground for making the husband liable upon this claim, regard being had to the Burmese law as to the property of married persons. But in either case publicity must be given to the relationship, and the amount of proof of publicity required will be greater in cases of the latter category when no distinct occasion can be appealed to. In the case of a child leaving its natural parents and being brought up in the house of another person who treats it as a father would a child, the inference of the relationship existing, and the publicity of the relationship may naturally be drawn from the facts of the lives of the parties, apart from their verbal statements. But in the case of an adult adoption where the inferences to be drawn from "bringing up" are necessarily absent, it is especially requisite to insist on adequate proof. In this case an orphan adult niece claimed the estate of a childless uncle with whom it was only natural she should live, on the ground that she had been taken by him as his adopted daughter when she was over 30 years of age, the evidence of the publicity of the relationship alleged depending upon the testimony of the claimant herself, and the statements of the deceased uncle spoken to by witnesses, and the consequence of upholding the adoption being the disinherison of those entitled to succeed:—Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to establish the adoption. Where parties might have precluded the raising of subsequent questions by means of an actual, though not ceremonial, adoption in the presence of witnesses, and they had not done so, but had left the fact of adoption to be inferred from past statements and conduct, adequate proof of publicity and notoriety of the relationship should be insisted on. BURMESE LAW—DIVORCE.

——— Burman Buddhists, Law as to Divorce among—Husband and wife—Buddhist Law—Dhammathats, authority of—Menu Kyay, authority of—Desertion—Procedure. In a suit for divorce instituted by a Burman husband on the ground that his wife had deserted him for no reason whatever, and had been living separate for the past eight months, refusing to resume cohabitation with him (there being no charge against the wife of misconduct affecting morality or of any bad habits), the wife pleaded in defence that the above ground was, under Buddhist Law, no ground for a divorce, and further pleaded the conduct of the petitioner as a justification for her refusal to cohabit with him. No division of property had taken place between husband and wife. Held, upon a reference to the High Court, that upon the law as administered among Buddhists the petitioner was not entitled to a divorce. If the plaintiff in a suit for divorce governed by the above law establishes any of the grounds which the Dhammathats recognize as good grounds for a divorce, he will be entitled to a divorce. The Dhammathats contemplate grounds justifying a divorce other than those mentioned in the judgment of the Special Court in Nga Nwe v. Mi Su Ma (unreported), viz., other than matricide, parricide, killing, stealing, shedding the blood of a Buddha, rahan, heresy, and adultery. A desertion, properly so-called, by the wife is a good ground for divorce by the husband, provided that during the period of one year prescribed by the Menu Kyay (bk. Nor is it inconsistent with an effectual dedication that the owner should continue to make any and all uses of the land, which do not interfere with the uses for which it is dedicated. Held, in respect of land, which had not been expressly dedicated, but was used by the public as a burning ground, that the circumstances of the case showed that the owner made a dedication of the user of the property for the purposes of a burning ground, such dedication to remain in force only so long as the property continued to be used as a burning ground. When the sole use to which property had been dedicated becomes impossible of execution by reason of a statutory acquisition and compulsory use for purposes inconsistent with the original dedication it reverts to the dedicator or his representative. Although it is an essential element of a good dedication that it should be irrevocable, nevertheless when, after a valid dedication has been made, the use for which the property is dedicated becomes impossible of execution or the object of the use wholly fails, there is an abandonment in consequence of which the rights of the public therein fail and a reversion takes place, the dedication being taken to have spent its force when the use ceases. *Monmotha Nath v. Unlike the road-land, which was acquired by the Collector in the above case, the burning ground in this case, treated as such, had a market-value, which had been actually assessed. The word ghat in s. 30 of the Bengal Municipal Act does not include a tract of and used as a burning ground. S. 226 provides that a month's notice shall be given before any action is brought under the Act against the Justices. By Act V of 1857 the Oriental Gas Company was empowered to lay down pipes and execute other necessary works for the supply of gas to Calcutta. In an application by the Company for a writ of mandamus to compel the Justices to join with the Company in referring to a Judge of the Small Cause Court to ascertain the amount payable to the Company as compensation for damage alleged to have been occasioned to their pipes, etc., by the drainage works of the Justices, an affidavit was filed, in which the Company's manager stated specifically the loss that had been occasioned, and that he had, on personal inspection, satisfied himself that the loss was occasioned by the negligent execution of the drainage works of the Justices. The affidavit on behalf of the Justices stated that, "in carrying out such drainage works, the Justices, or their contractors, agents, or servants, have not damaged the pipes, etc., of the Company, and that the Justices deny that they are in any manner liable for the damage in respect of which compensation is sought by the Company, or that they have done or caused any damage to the Company." Held (per PHEAR, J.), on the facts, that the Justices works had caused damage to the Company's main and pipes. Held, also, that the compensation-clause of s. 151, Bengal Act VI of 1863, makes the Justices liable to compensate owners of land, or of any interest in land through which the drainage works are authorized to be carried, for any damage caused by any proceedings in such works. It applies to cases where the works have been done with due care and skill, and where but for the Act there would have been a right of action against the Justices. Held, also, that the denial of liability by the Justices was simply a general denial that any damage had been done to the Company; the question, therefore, between the parties resolved itself into a dispute as to the amount of damage which, by s. 151, must be settled in the manner provided by s. 229. Hence the Company was entitled to a writ of mandamus. Held, also, that s. 226 applies to proceedings dehors the Act, and not to proceedings taken to enforce compliance with the provisions of the Act. In support of a rule nisi for a certiorari for bringing up the order that it might be quashed, it was argued that the Chairman had not, as such, jurisdiction to make the order; and that it was invalid, as notice had not been given, and the proceedings had not been reduced to writing. Cause was shown that the description of the Chairman was immaterial, as he was also a Justice of the Peace, and that such summary proceedings were necessary for the public safety. Held, that the Act does not empower the Chairman of the Justices, as such, to issue a warrant under the 200th section; that such a warrant must show, on the face of it, that the Justice issuing it had jurisdiction; that the application under s. 200 must be reduced to writing; that the evidence taken therefrom must be recorded; and that notice must be given to the party proceeded against. by B, and it was shown that notice of the assessment under class II, Sch. 3, had been duly served on A, and that, though he then denied his liability to take out any license, and stated that he carried on no business as alleged, he had not appealed against the assessment under s. 79. It was further shown that the assessment had been confirmed by the Chairman of the Corporation, but that the amount had not been paid. A thereupon tendered evidence to show that he was not liable to take out any license; but B refused to hear such evidence, and, convicting A, sentenced him to pay a fine. On an application, under the above circumstances, to the High Court under s. 147, Act X of 1875: Held, that the finality of the decision of the Chairman referred to in s. 79 has only reference to the class under which a particular person, who is admittedly bound to take out a license under s. 75, should be assessed, and not to the case where the liability to take out a license at all is denied, this being a question which can only be determined judicially after taking evidence by a competent Court in a prosecution under s. 77, and that, therefore, the refusal of B to hear the evidence tendered by A on this point was illegal. The Corporation demanded from the plaintiff, after receipt of the notice, payment of rates on the basis of the assessment prior to such notice, and it was contended on behalf of the Corporation that, as the owners of certain other shares into which the plot was divided objected to the assessment made of their shares effect could not be given, until the disposal of such objections, to the notice of separate assessment.

Held, that the Corporation were justified in refusing to give effect to the notice of separate assessments, until the disposal of such objections. The objections in question were disposed of during the currency of the quarter commencing on the 1st October 1901, and the assessment book was amended during that quarter. Held, that the separate assessment under s. 170 of the Municipal Act took effect from the commencement of the next quarter. The Corporation also distrained for rates claimed on the basis of the previous assessment, such distraint being made without previous presentation of rate bills, or notice of demand, as required by the provisions of the Act. Held, that the omission to present such bills, and to serve a notice of demand, amounted to a mere irregularity under s. 225, and the only damages recoverable would be the special damages actually sustained. Bengal General Clauses Act (Ben. Act I of 1899) saves the operation of a repealed Act in such a case, where the building was commenced when the old Act was in force. The words " material alteration of the structure of any house," in s. 236 of Ben. Act II of 1888, contemplated the erection of anything on a site attached to, or detached from, any building standing on it, so as to alter the structure of the house, that is to say, of the house with all the buildings standing on that site. Sanction was necessary for such building, and failure to obtain the same entailed the liability under s. 241 of that Act. Where, therefore, a building, detached from other houses, but standing on the same site, was commenced before Ben. Act III of 1899 came in force, but was completed after that period : Held, that Ben. Act II of 1888 applied, and that sanction was necessary under s. 236 of the latter Act, and the liability under s. 241 of that Act continued. But an order of demolition passed thereon under s. 449 (3) of Ben. Act III of 1899 was illegal. KESHUB CHANDRA SEN v. CALCUTTA MUNICIPAL CORPORATION (1902) . . 7 C. W. N. 374

(a) and (d)—Acquisition of land for Municipality—Market-value, presumption as to—Applicability—"Re-assessment," meaning of—"District," meaning of—Bustee land, valuation of—Owner and tenant's interests. The performance by the Chairman of the Corporation of the duties of a Collector under cl. (a) of s. 557 of the Calcutta Municipal Act is not a condition precedent to the applicability of the provisions of the other clauses of the section. Where, therefore, land was acquired in Calcutta for the Municipality, but the Chairman did not act as Collector in the proceedings: Held, that this would not prevent the application of the presumption under cl. (d) of the section that the market-value is 25 times the annual valuation of the property as entered in the assessment book prescribed by the Calcutta Municipal Act. The term "land" as used in s. 557, cl. (d), includes "bustee" land. The term "district" as used in the proviso to that section is equivalent to the term "ward." The term "re-assessment" in the same proviso signifies revaluation and not reimposition of rate or tax. Valuation does not mean merely the amount of the valuation, but covers the whole process or act of valuation. Where, therefore, a substantial part of the act of assessment or valuation was completed before the commencement of the present Act, it cannot be said that there was a re-assessment after the commencement of the Act, merely because the valuation did not become final within the meaning of s. 163, cl. (1), until after the commencement of the Act. Corporation of Calcutta v. Bhupati Roy Chowdhry, I. L. R. 26 Calc. 74, 77, referred to. Held, that there has been no re-assessment made after the commencement of the Act for Ward No. X, as the valuation for that ward had been made before the commencement of the Act, though it came into operation on the 1st April 1900 and under s. 7 of the present Act, is to remain in force till the 31st March 1906. Therefore the presumption under s. 557, cl. (d), does not arise with reference to land in that ward. In assessing compensation payable to owners of bustee land in Calcutta acquired on behalf of the Municipality: Held, that the proper method of valuing such land was to ascertain the value of the land and huts as a whole, and deducting therefrom the value of the huts of which the tenants were the owners, their tenancy (being a tenancy-at-will) having practically no market value. On these valuations, assessments of rates were made for a period of six years expiring on various dates on or before the 31st March, 1900. On 1st April, 1900, Bengal Act III of 1899 came into force. Shortly before that date the Commissioners made new valuations. These valuations were made under Bengal Act II of 1888, which was then in force, and were all completed prior to the 1st April, 1900. Objections to the valuations and the assessments made thereon were filed by the owners under Bengal Act II of 1888. The objections were disposed of by the Vice-Chairman, and the owners appealed therefrom to the Small Cause Court. These appeals were filed after 1st April, 1900, under the provisions of Bengal Act III of 1899. The Chief Judge held that the new valuations and assessments were not in force at the commencement of Bengal Act III of 1899 within the meaning of s. 152 thereof, and he set them aside. He further declared that the valuations in force at the commencement of Bengal Act III of 1899 were the previous valuations of 1894, and he directed those valuations to remain in force for the periods mentioned in Sch. VII, col. 2, of Bengal Act III of 1899. Held, that the Small Cause

The procedure laid down by that section as to the form of the notice is directory only. The Small Cause Court having jurisdiction to deal with the matter, the High Court cannot interfere either under s. 622, Civil Procedure Code, or s. 15 of the Charter. A valuation was made by the Calcutta Municipality of a holding, the rate-payer objected to the amount, and the Vice-Chairman of the Municipality, on hearing the objection, fixed the valuation at a certain amount. Within six years from this valuation fixed after objection, a re-valuation was made by the municipality and the rate-payer objected to the legality of such valuation on the ground that the municipality had no power to make a re-valuation within six years from the date of the last valuation. The Vice-Chairman overruled the objection, and the rate-payer appealed under s. 157 of the Act to the Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Sealdah, who allowed the appeal. Held, that, inasmuch as the objection raised by the rate-payer was an objection to the valuation within the meaning of s. 135 of the Act, the Judge of the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to deal with it. That being so, it was not open to the High Court to interfere either under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, or under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vic., c. 104. The Corporation, after granting sanction under s. 247 of the Act, withdrew it on the ground that the plaintiff had not complied with what it believed to be his undertaking. Held, that the withdrawal of the sanction was not done, nor did it purport to have been done, under the Act; and that, the suit for damages having been based upon such withdrawal, the special limitation of three months as provided by s. 427 of the Act did not apply to it. 2. ——— Grant of land by military authorities for building purposes—Resumption of land by civil authorities—Assignment of profits of the land to municipal Committee—Liability of grantee to pay ground-rent—Refusal of grantee to pay ground-rent to municipality—Suit by the Secretary of State for India for declaration of title and assessment of rent—Cause of action—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Right of grantee to compensation in case of ejectment. Certain land situate within the limits of a cantonment was granted free of rent for building purposes by the military authorities. Under the Military Regulations relating to such grants, such a grant could not be resumed by the Government without a month's notice, and without the payment of the value of such buildings which might have been authorized to be erected. The land was subsequently resumed by the civil authorities, and, the land being within municipal limits, the ground-rents on it were assigned to the municipality. The Municipal Committee having demanded ground-rent in respect of the buildings erected on such land under such grant from the representative in title of the original grantee, and the latter having refused to pay the same or to vacate the land, the Secretary of State for India in Council sued him in the Civil Court for a declaration of proprietary right to the land for its assessment to ground-rent, and in the event of the refusal of the defendant to pay such rent, when fixed, for his ejectment therefrom, and for mesne profits of the land for six years. The cause of action was stated in the plaint to be the refusal of the defendant to pay ground-rent or to accept a lease or to surrender the land, after a notice to that effect had been issued to him by the Municipal Committee as the plaintiff's agents. Held, that the Municipal Committee were the plaintiff's duly authorized agents to lease and obtain rent for the land occupied by the defendant's buildings with their compounds; that such notice was properly issued in that character on behalf of the plaintiff; and that the defendant's subsequent refusal to pay rent, or to accept a lease or evacuate the premises, amount to a sufficient denial of the plaintiff's title to afford him a good cause of action; that assuming that no agreement to pay rent existed, the plaintiff was entitled to demand and recover reasonable compensation for the use and occupation of the land by the defendant; that the suit was maintainable in the Civil Court, and it had power to grant the plaintiff the reliefs sought; that by the conditions of the grant by the military authorities the plaintiff was not disqualified from demanding ground-rent for the land before he had paid the defendant the value of the buildings, but that, looking to those conditions, it would not be fair or equitable to grant the plaintiff a degree, pure and simple, for the ejectment of the defendant, but he should be put under the condition that, if in case of the defendant's refusal to pay the rent fixed he desired to eject him, the value of the buildings as cantonment residences must first be determined and, when determined, must be tendered to the defendant, and, if the latter refused to accept it, the plaintiff would then be entitled to eject him. CANTONMENT PROPERTY.

——— Grant—Notice of resumption—Offer of compensation—Condition precedent—Notice to one of three executors—Joint occupants. A certain plot known as No. 1, Queen's Gardens, situate within the limits of the Poona Cantonment, was in the year 1862 granted by the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army to one Edalji Nasarvanji Colabavala under the terms of a General Order, dated the 31st July 1856. The 14th clause of the said General Order was in these terms :—" Permission to occupy such ground in a military cantonment confers no proprietary right, it continues the property of the State. It is resumable at the pleasure of Government, but in all practicable cases one month's notice of resumption will be given, and the value of the buildings which may have been erected thereon, as estimated by committee, will be paid to the owner." After the grant the grantee erected a bungalow on the plot, and in the year 1874 sold the bungalow and all his interest in the land to Hari Ravji Chiphunkar, who died in the year 1896 leaving a will under which he appointed defendants Nos. 1—3 as executors. On the 19th October 1903 the military authorities gave to defendant No. 1 a notice requiring him to deliver possession of the land to the Cantonment Magistrate on the 1st December following. The notice further stated that Government was prepared to pay defendant No. 1 R15,500 as compensation for all the buildings standing on the land, or if the defendant disputed the said amount, then such amount as may be determined by a Committee of Arbitration, and that on defendant's failure to comply with the terms of the notice a suit in ejectment would be filed. The defendants having failed to comply with the notice, the Secretary of State for India in Council brought the present suit in the year 1904 to recover possession of the land, claiming that "there is a right of resumption, which is presently exercisable." Defendants Nos. 1—3 denied the right and contended that the notice of resumption was not proper and that the plaintiff had no right to resume, the value of the buildings being not estimated by a committee. Defendant No. 4, who was a lessee of defendants Nos. 1—3, expressed his willingness to abide by the orders of the Court as to giving up possession. The Judge having dismissed the suit on the ground that the notice to give up possession was not proper and was not given to the proper parties, the plaintiff appealed. Held, reversing the decree, that the General Order stated in terms as clear as possible that no proprietary right was conferred by reason of a permission to occupy the ground which alone was granted, and that the ground continued the property of the State and was resumable at the pleasure of Government. Held, further, that the notice of resumption was not a condition precedent to the right of resumption. Even assuming that notice was a condition precedent, that provision had been satisfied by giving notice to one of the three executors, who were joint occupants. The provision as to notice was nothing more than a statement of what will be done, when practicable, for the purpose of saving the occupant from such inconvenience as an immediate resumption might involve. Held, further, that though the value of the buildings erected had not been estimated by a committee, it was not a condition precedent to resumption, though, no doubt, the right to that payment would arise on resumption. Secretary of State v. Jagan Prasad, *I. On these facts, the Magistrate held that the act of the accused amounted to "supplying" liquor to a soldier within the meaning of the term as used in s. 13 of the Cantonments Act (XIII of 1889), and convicted and sentenced him under the section. Held, reversing the convicton and sentence, that the term "supply" in s. 13 of the Cantonments Act (XIII of 1889) must have a restricted meaning put upon it and it is inapplicable in the case of a servant giving his master liquor belonging to the master himself. Its context "barters or sells" indicates that it has the same idea underlying it in common with them. In a suit filed in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge of Belgaum, in its small cause jurisdiction, to recover R172 as arrears of rent, a question having arisen whether that Court, the pecuniary limit of whose jurisdiction as the Court of Small Causes was R500, or the Court of the Belgaum Cantonment Magistrate invested with small cause powers, had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Held, that the Cantonment Court alone had jurisdiction. By notification No. 2305, published at page 314 of the Bombay Government Gazette for 1887, the pecuniary limit of the (Belgaum) Cantonment Court is declared to be R200; and the declaration which was made under Act III of 1880 [which is an Act repealed by the Cantonments Act] is kept alive by s. 2, cl. 2, of the Cantonments Act, and it is, therefore, such an order of the Local Government as is contemplated by s. 10 of Act XIII of 1889. 4. ——— Delivery of goods carried by sea—Landing goods—Custom of port of Bombay—Possession of goods. A carrier by sea is obliged to make an actual delivery of goods carried by him to the consignee, but such primâ facie obligation may be affected by the custom of the port where the goods are to be delivered. Neither by the custom of the port of Bombay nor by the provisions of the Customs Act is the master of a ship bound to wait fifteen days before commencing to land his cargo; but within a reasonable time after the arrival of his ship—48 hours in the case of a sailing vessel, and somewhat less in the case of a steamer—he is at liberty to land goods if the consignee has not sent boats for them; and such landing is not unlawful, nor a breach of contract as carrier on the part of the master. The landing of the goods under the above circumstances and setting them apart for the consignee do not constitute a delivery of them to the consignee; but such goods, after being so landed, continue in the possession of the master as carrier. Course of legislation with reference to the landing of goods on the custom-house wharf reviewed. Quære: Whether, under the special circumstances of this case, the goods, when so landed, remained in the custody of the master in his capacity of common carrier or as a warehouseman? 5. ——— Dâk-carriage proprietor—Bailee for hire—Negligence—Onus of proof. A person carrying on the ordinary business of a proprietor of dâk-carriages does not come within the term "common carrier" as that term is understood in the English Law. Such a person is bound to exercise reasonable and ordinary care in respect of baggage entrusted to him, but is not responsible for any loss which may not arise from the negligence or default of himself or his servants, he not being a common carrier bound to ensure the safe conveyance of the baggage against all risk, save the act of God or the Queen's enemies. He is to be regarded as a bailee for hire, and the fact that he does not deliver the baggage at the end of the journey should be accepted as primâ facie proof that the loss has been occasioned by negligence for which he is responsible, and consequently the onus of proof lies on him that reasonable care was exercised by him. 6. ——— Conveyance of goods by Government bullock train—Post Office Act XIV of 1866—Bailee for hire—Negligence—Condition. Goods conveyed by the Government bullock train are not entrusted to the Post Office for conveyance within the meaning of Act XIV of 1866. In respect of the Government bullock train, Government must be regarded as an ordinary bailee for hire, and not as a common carrier. As such bailees apart from any special condition limiting its liability, it is bound to take ordinary care of good, entrusted to it for conveyance; and if goods are stolen through the negligence of its servants, it is liable to make good the loss to the consignor. But it may, as may any other bailee for hire, limit its liability by conditions, provided those conditions are not repugnant to public policy or positive law. A condition that it will not be responsible for loss occasioned by the negligence of its servants is certainly not repugnant to positive law, nor a condition repugnant to public policy. on the back. These conditions, among other things, stated that the company would not be responsible for loss or damage arising from accidents or risks of the sea; that the ticket was delivered subject to the conditions that certain articles of a specified nature should be made the subject of a special declaration, in default of which the company would not be liable; that the company would not be answerable for unregistered luggage; and that luggage might be insured at any of the company's offices. It was not stated where registration of luggage might be effected. The ticket was not signed by the plaintiff. The plaintiff alleged that he did not understand the French language, and that the conditions had not been explained to him by any person. Held, that the company being a foreign company were not common-carriers; that the plaintiff was bound by the clauses and conditions on the back of the passage-ticket; that none of the conditions had the effect of relieving the company from the consequences of their own negligence; that, in order to establish a defence upon the ground that the plaintiff's luggage was not registered, it was necessary for the defendants to prove, not only that the plaintiff was bound by the conditions, but also that they were ready and willing to register the plaintiff's luggage, and that the plaintiff did not in fact register it; that as the contract was made in Calcutta, the defendants were bound by the provisions of s. 151 of the Indian Contract Act. The goods were short delivered, and the plaintiff brought a suit to recover the value. Held per GARTH, C.J., PRINSEP, J., and WILSON, J., that the Railway Company could not be held liable to account to the consignee for any loss from any cause whatever during the whole time that the goods were under their charge, inasmuch as the plaintiff had entered into a special contract to hold them harmless in accordance with s. 10 of Act IV of 1879. Held per O'KINEALY, J., that it was doubtful whether ss. 151 and 161 of the Contract Act applied to carriers by rail; but even assuming that these sections did not apply, the Railway Company would be in the position of carriers before the passing of the Carriers Act, and were entitled to protect themselves from lia-

The plaintiffs entrusted to the defendants, who were common carriers under the Carriers Act, III of 1865, certain goods which were lost in the course of their carriage on one of the defendants' steamers. On the facts it was found that the defendants took as much care of the goods as a man of ordinary prudence would under similar circumstances take of his own goods of the same bulk, quality, and value as the goods bailed; and that the loss was not occasioned by the act of God or the Queen's enemies. There was no special contract of the nature provided for by s. 6, Act III of 1865. Held, that ss. 151, 152 of the Contract Act did not apply, and that the defendants were liable for the loss of the goods. The goods were received for carriage by the defendants under conditions printed on the back of "forwarding note" signed by the plaintiff, by one of which conditions the defendants protected themselves from liability against accident of certain particular kinds, and "from any accident, loss, or damage resulting from negligence, etc." Held, that the loss was not occasioned by the negligence of the defendants; that the forwarding note "was a special contract" within the meaning of the Carriers Act; that the clause purporting to protect the defendants from negligence was bad as being in contravention of the Carriers Act; but that, nevertheless, the contract was not thereby rendered wholly bad, but was divisible, being good so far as it provided that the defendants were not to be liable for loss by accident, but had so far as it provided that they should not be liable for negligence. His responsibility to the owner does not originate in contract, but is cast upon him by reason of his exercising this public employment for reward. His liability as an insurer is an incident of the contract between him and the owner not inconsistent with the provisions of the Contract Act; and the Law of Carriers partly written and partly unwritten remained as before that Act. The Railways Acts of 1879 and 1890 reduced the responsibility of carriers by railway to that of bailees under the Contract Act, but this does not affect the construction of the law relating to common carriers and the Act of 1865. Notwithstanding some general expressions in the chapter on bailments, a common carrier's responsibility is not within the Contract Act, 1872. 15. ——— Common carriers—Foreign carrier contracting in Calcutta, law applicable to—Negligence and misfeasance. Carriers by sea, for hire, are common carriers by the Common Law of England; and, where the contract is made in Calcutta, whatever be the nationality of the carriers, they will be governed by the lex loci contractus, which is the Common Law of England. Mackillican v. The Compagnie Des Messageries Maritimes de France, I. L. R. 6 Calc. 227, not followed. Under the English Common Law, a common carrier may protect himself from liability for deliberate acts or misfeasance on the part of himself or his servants, but he must do so by clear, definite, unambiguous words. Landing goods in rainy weather, instead of delaying delivery, is negligence and not misfeasance.

They did not declare the value of the articles, which exceeded R100, nor disclose the contents of the parcel. 1. ——— ss. 6 and 8—Negligence—Accident, loss by—Special contract—Suit for damages. The plaintiffs delivered to the defendants certain goods for carriage to Calcutta in a flat belonging to the defendants. The goods were carried under the terms of a special contract or "forwarding note," signed by the shipper. One of the conditions of the forwarding note was as follows:—"The company will not be under any liability for damages or compensation in respect of loss of, or damage to, goods . . ., except such liability as they are or may be subject to under the provisions of any law for the time being in force or of any contract other than this for the time being in existence between the Company and the shipper." While on board the defendants' flat, the goods were destroyed by fire. At the trial of the case, the defendants gave evidence showing the state of things before the fire occurred, the circumstances leading to the discovery of the fire (but not the cause or origin of it), and the measures taken to extinguish the fire. Held, that the occurrence of a fire, under the circumstances disclosed in the case, without any explanation as to the origin of it, was of itself evidence of negligence. Held, also, reversing the decision of SALE, J., that the defendants had not discharged the onus cast upon them by law of showing that there was no negligence. Central Cachar Tea Company v. Rivers Steam Navigation Company, I. L. R. 24 Calc. 787, note, explained. Held on the construction of the above clause (per SALE, J., in the Court below, and per TREVELYAN, J., in the Court of Appeal), that the words "in any law for the time being in force" must be taken to refer not to the common law, but to the law as laid down in the Carriers Act (III of 1865), and that, unless their liability was enlarged by express contract, the defendant company were liable only for loss or damage of which, under s. 6 of that Act, they were not allowed to relieve themselves, that is, only for loss occasioned by the negligence or criminal acts of themselves, their servants or agents. The decision of HILL, J., in Central Cachar Tea Co. v. Rivers Steam Navigation Co., unreported, followed. Semble, on appeal (per MACPHERSON, J., MACLEAN, C.J., doubting), that the above construction of the clause was correct. 2. ——— The Judicial Committee dismissed an appeal in the above case from the decree of the Appellate High Court, which proceeded on s. 9 of the Carriers Act (III of 1865), that Court having taken the non-delivery as placing the burden of proving absence of negligence on the carriers. There were facts showing that no

He was proceeded against under Act I of 1871 (Cattle Trespass Act), and under the provisions of s. 22 ordered to pay compensation to the complainant, and in default to undergo one month's rigorous imprisonment. Held, that s. 22 was inapplicable to the facts of the case, and that the order must be set aside. On the facts it was not a case of "illegal seizure and detention" of cattle, but rather one of theft, as all the elements of that offence were present, and the accused should have been charged with and tried for that offence. Held, further, that the sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of the compensation was not warranted by law. Compensation may be levied as a fine, and the ordinary mode of levying fines is laid down in s. 386 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The law nowhere provides that fines may be levied by means of imprisonment. PARYAG RAI v. ARJU MIAN

1. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 43—Earlier suit on adjusted account—Subsequent suit on a mortgage—Distinct causes of action—Relief not claimed in the earlier suit. A plaintiff omitted to claim relief in a suit on an adjusted account, which he subsequently claimed in a suit based upon a mortgage. Held, that, the causes of action for the two suits being distinct, the omission to claim the relief in the earlier suit did not operate as a bar to the subsequent suit under s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). 2. ——— Jurisdiction—Foreign judgment—Cause of action—Award, suit on—Arbitration Act (52 and 53 Vict., c. 49), s. 12. An award was made against the defendant in England for payment of a certain sum of money to the plaintiffs and an order under s. 12 of the Arbitration Act (52 and 53 Vict., c. 49) was made thereon. The defendant, who at the time of the commencement of the suit was not dwelling, or carrying on business, or personally working for gain, within the limits of the Ordinary Original Jurisdiction of this Court in consideration of the plaintiff's agent (in Calcutta) undertaking not to institute any suit for a certain time, made a promise to pay in part £500 within a certain period and the balance of the amount of the award in time. The plaintiffs instituted, with leave under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, this suit for the amount of the award. Held, that under the above circumstances, the consideration for the promise on the part of the plaintiff's agent was illusory, amounting only to a promise on the defendant's part to do what he was already legally bound to do, and the transaction formed no part of the cause of action and this Court had no jurisdiction to try the suit. "Cause of action" defined. Read v. Brown, L. R. 22 Q. B. D. 128, referred to. Semble: An order under s. 12 of the Arbitration Act (52 and 53 Vict., c. 49) enforcing an award made in England is not such a judgment that a suit in a Court in this country can be instituted on it as on a foreign judgment. But on the facts as stated above, the Court was at liberty to make the decree it did, on the footing that the suit was one based on the award and not on the order made under s. 12 of the Arbitration Act. 3. ——— Suit for "maintenance" of possession—Pleadings—Suit virtually to procure rectification of an erroneous decree. Plaintiff in a suit for possession as usufructuary mortgagee of 13 bighas had to redeem five prior usufructuary mortgages comprising part of 13 bighas mortgaged to him and some 15 bighas in addition: but the decree, which he obtained, was drawn up erroneously and gave the plaintiff a right to the possession of 13 bighas only and not of the whole 28 bighas. Plaintiff never appealed against this decree, nor did he apply in review to have the error in the decree corrected, but he subsequently brought a suit in which he asked, first, for "maintenance" of possession in respect of the 15 bighas and, secondly, for recovery of possession, if he should be found not to be in possession. He alleged in his plaint that he was in possession and that one of the defendants at the instigation of another was interfering with his rights. It was found that plaintiff had never obtained possession of the 15 bighas. Held, that the suit did not lie. If the suit was for maintenance of possession no cause of action appeared, and in any other view the suit was one virtually to set right an erroneous decree, which could not be done by means of such a suit. 4. ——— Malicious prosecution—Letters Patent, cl. 12—Leave—Liability of prosecutor when prosecution ordered by Court. "Cause of action" means that bundle of essential facts which it is necessary for a plaintiff to prove before he can succeed in the case. A person is responsible not merely for starting a prosecution, but also for continuing the same and he is so responsible whether such prosecution was ordered by the Court or was initiated by the party himself. The plaintiff, a resident in British India, was charged with a criminal offence by the defendant in the Magistrate's Court at Rajkot. In order to secure his attendance the defendant moved the Bombay Government to initiate extradition proceedings against the plaintiff before the Chief Presidency Magistrate in Bombay, who, however, held that a case for extradition had not been made out. The plaintiff obtained leave from the High Court to file a suit against the defendant in Bombay for malicious prosecution. On an application by the defendant to have the leave rescinded: Held, that a material part of the cause of action accrued in Bombay and that the High Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Fitzjohn v. *Mackinder, 9 C. 5. ——— Slander of title—Cause of action—Damages—Counterfeiting trademark—Allegation to the Collector of Customs—Detention of goods in consequence by the Collector—Action of Collector whether a judicial proceeding—Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889). There were allegations in the plaint (a) that the defendants were interested in putting a stop to the sale of goods imported by the plaintiff, (b) that when the same were in the Calcutta Customs House, the defendants with intent to injure the plaintiff had falsely alleged to the Collector of Customs that the marks on those goods were an imitation of somebody else's, (c) that the defendants had thereby induced the Collector to detain the goods in the Customs House and had also persuaded and induced the Collector to make an ex parte order that the plaintiff's marks were a fraudulent imitation, and (d) that in consequence the plaintiff had suffered special damage. Held, that the plaint did disclose a cause of action and should not have been rejected. Ratcliffe v. Evans, L. R. 2 Q. B. 524; White v. Mellin, [1895] A. C. 154, referred to. MACLEAN, C.J. This was virtually a case of slander of title, and in order to succeed, the plaintiff had to show that the statements of the defendants were false, malicious, and that he had suffered special damage. Here, though malice had not been specifically pleaded, it was undoubtedly to be implied from the allegations (a) and (b). In any case, the suit should not have been dismissed on this account, but the plaintiff ought to have been allowed to plead special damage. SALE, J. No question arose in this case as to the legality of the Collector's action. Moreover, the finding of the Collector was not a judicial act and the plaintiff was entitled to disregard it so far as his right to sue in the Civil Court was concerned, and he was not bound to move the higher executive authorities to have the finding set aside. CENTRAL PROVINCES LAND REVENUE ACT (XVIII OF 1881).

———— s. 4 (8A)—Central Provinces Tenancy Act (XI of 1898)—Gaontia in Sambalpore District—Suit for ejectment by—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—"Gaontia," if proprietor—Gochar land, if "common land"—Recognition of defendant's tenancy by settlement department after institution of suit—Second appeal. Gochar lands are lands reserved for the proprietor of a Government village in the district of Sambalpore and cannot be classed in the same category as common lands, which are the property of the general body of villagers. For the purposes of a suit in ejectment brought by a gaontia of a village, the gaontia must be taken to be a "proprietor" of the same as defined in s. 4 (8A) of Act XVIII of 1881 and as such he is entitled to bring the suit. Civil Court must adjudicate on the rights of the parties as they existed when the plaint was filed, and a recognition of the defendant's tenancy by the Settlement Department subsequent to the institution of an ejectment suit by the gaontia is of no avail to the defendant. Besides the entry in the settlement record is not conclusive. It is only a matter of presumption. "The holder of a survey number" mentioned in s. 2 (10), Expl. II of the Central Provinces Tenancy Act XI of 1898, means the holder when proceedings are instituted in the Civil Court and a holder under a subsequent settlement cannot claim to be a tenant of the farmer or gaontia. L. J. 359*, referred to. Held, further, that when the transfer was made before Act XI of 1898 came into force, under s. 43 of Act IX of 1883, as amended by Act XVII of 1889, the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain such a suit for ejectment, and that its jurisdiction was not taken away by the passing of the new Act. (IX of 1883, as amended by Act XVII of 1889), a transfer of a portion only of an occupancy-holding is not void, and it does not entitle the landlord to exercise his right of re-entry, either as regards the entire holding or as regards the portion transferred. II, Art. 12 (b).* A certificate under s. 7 of the Public Demands Recovery Act drawn up on an old form where the word "Collector" occurred, but which was signed by a person, who obviously was the certificate Officer and who had in another part of the document signed himself as such, is not invalid. Under the proviso to s. 31 of the Public Demands Recovery Act, service of notice required by s. 10 can, in the first instance, be made by registered post addressed to the judgment-debtor's last known residence, though no other mode of service has been previously resorted to. A sale proclamation, when issued by the properly qualified officer, is equally effectual whether he signs himself as "Certificate Officer" or as "Judge." Where there is credible evidence of the service of the sale proclamation, and there has been a considerable lapse of time, it is to be presumed that all the necessary formalities were complied with. S. 19 of the Public Demands Recovery Act, as amended by Bengal Act I of 1897, renders s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code applicable in its entirety to proceedings in execution of a certificate, and a separate suit to set aside a sale held in the enforcement of such certificate is not maintainable. Janki Dass v. Ram Golam Sahu, I. L. R. 28 Calc. 813, referred to. The present suit, if regarded as one to set aside a certificate under s. 7 of the Public Demands Recovery Act, is barred by s. 16; and if as one to set aside the sale, is barred by Art. 12 (b) of Sch. II of the Limitation Act. BARHAMDEO NARAYAN SING v. BIBI RASUL BANDI (1905) . . I. L. R. 32 Calc. 691

A certificate can only be modified on such a ground provided that a suit for such purpose is not barred. S. 19 of Bengal Act I of 1895 as amended by Bengal Act I of 1897 makes s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code applicable to proceedings in execution of a certificate made under the Act. Ram Taruck Hazra v. *Dilwur Ali, I. Where a sale in execution of a certificate is sought to be set aside, not on the ground of invalidity of the proceedings anterior to execution, which are the foundation of the sale, but on the ground of irregularity in the execution proceedings, the judgment-debtor must proceed under s. 20 of the Act, and s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code bars a separate suit. The words of the section are imperative, and not permissive. The use of the words "may appoint" in this section does not imply that the District Judge has any discretion in a proper case to appoint or not to appoint an administrator. Where the Judge considered that he was bound to make an order directing administrators appointed under Regulation VIII of 1827 to make over the property of the deceased to one of the rival claimants who was judicially declared to be the heir of the deceased:—Held, that, so long as the party against whom the decision in the matter of the rival claims was given had a right of appeal, the order of the Judge was one which he could not make under the Regulation, and that in exercising his jurisdiction under the Regulation he had exercised it illegally, and, that being so, the High Court had power, under s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, to interfere in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction. 10. _____ Certificate under Act XXVII of 1860—Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827, s. 9—Jurisdiction to grant certificate of administration—Foreigners residing abroad. Under s. 3 of Act XXVII of 1860, a certificate can be granted only for the estate of a British subject either resident within the district where the certificate is sought, or else having no fixed place of residence. The Act does not make provision for administration of the effects of a foreigner domiciled abroad. While Act XXVII of 1860 has regard to the person, Regulation VIII of 1827, on the other hand, looks simply to the locality of the assets as the ground of the Court's jurisdiction to grant a certificate of administration. The intention of s. 9 seems to be that when there are assets within a zilla, and the circumstances exist which are specified in the section, a certificate of administration may be granted. The authority given under s. 9 must be understood to be the same as under s. 7. B, a sardar of Baroda, residing within the Gaikwar's territory, died there, leaving considerable property in the district of Surat. On his death, L, the Assistant Collector of Surat, was appointed administrator of B's estate, under s. 9 of Regulation VIII of 1827. Shortly after his appointment as administrator, L went to England on furlough. During his absence, the plaintiffs sued, as heirs of B, to recover the balance of principal and interest due on a bond executed by the defendants in favour of B. Held, that the plaintiffs were incompetent to sue. L having been appointed administrator of B's estate, and never having been relieved of his office as administrator by the Court, as contemplated by s. 9 of Regulation VIII of 1827, his status still subsisted, and while it subsisted, no one else could represent the estate. The appointment of an administrator excludes other representatives so long as it endures. IBRAHIM ALI KHAN v. ZIAULNISSA LADLI BEGAM

11. _____ Act XIX of 1841—Summary procedure—Act XXVII of 1860. A (a Hindu) died intestate in December 1865, leaving his widow in possession of his property, moveable and immoveable. The descent of A's property was admittedly governed by the law of the Mitakshara. On the 19th January 1866, A's nephew presented a petition to the Zillah Court, under Act XIX of 1841, denying the title of the widow. Upon this alone the Judge directed the widow to come in and show cause, which she did on the 2nd February following. A daughter of A on the 19th March presented a petition in opposition to the nephew's claim for possession. The nephew filed a reply. In the meantime, the widow applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, which was opposed by both nephew and daughter. The nephew also filed a cross-petition under Act XXVII of 1860. All these petitions came on by consent together for adjudication on a state of facts admitted by all parties through their pleaders, who also, by consent between themselves, submitted their view of the question of law to be decided on the Acts of 1841 and 1860. The questions so submitted were:—(1)Did it appear on the evidence that there was a separation between

A and his nephew according to the Mitakshara doctrine ? (2) If the evidence per se established a legal separation, was such separation negatived by certain admissions of A ? The Judge refused the application of the widow under Act XXVII of 1860, and granted possession to the nephew under Act XIX of 1841. The nephew was a man of substance, and able to bring a regular suit, and there was no evidence of possession by force or fraud on the part of the widow, the only question being her right according to the Mitakshara law. Held, that the Judge was in error in proceeding summarily under Act XIX of 1841 on the declaration of the applicant alone and without other enquiry, but that this defect was cured by the widow's appearing. That the Judge ought not to have tried the cases under Act XIX of 1841 and Act XXVII of 1860 together and on the same issues ; but the Judge having jurisdiction over the subject-matter and to frame the issues, his order was not open to appeal or review. 2. ACTS XXVII OF 1860 AND VII OF 1889, AND GRANT OF CERTIFICATE.

1. ——— Act XXVII of 1860—Object of Act—Trustee. The object of Act XXVII of 1860 is not to enable parties to litigate questions of disputed title, but to enable debtors to pay the debts due by them with safety to the representatives of deceased Hindus and others, and to facilitate the collection of such debts by removing all doubts as to the legal title to demand and receive the same. In other words, the objects of the Act are to enable debtors to get sufficient acquittances when they pay money due to the estate of a deceased, and to preserve that estate from loss by giving some one the right to collect the debts, lest they should be lost, e.g., by the operation of the law of limitation. The holder of a certificate is a trustee liable to account for the moneys received by him to the legal heirs or representatives of the deceased. In the matter of the petition of NOBODIP CHUNDER BISWAS. 2. ——— Application of Act—Act XXVII of 1860, s. 2—Presidency Town—Natives—Refusal to pay—Want of fraudulent or vexatious motive in withholding debt. Act XXVII of 1860, which provides that no debtor of a deceased person shall be compelled to pay his debt to any person claiming to be entitled to the effects of such deceased person, without the production of a certificate to collect debts or probate or letters of administration, except under certain circumstances, is applicable to Hindus within the Presidency Towns. Where a debtor of a deceased Hindu who died intestate declined to pay the debt to his widow unless she produced letters of administration to the estate of the deceased, and the widow sued to recover the debt without taking out a certificate or letters of administration, and it was found that there was no reasonable doubt that the widow was entitled to the debt, but that the debtor refused to pay neither from any fraudulent nor vexatious motive, but to avoid the risk of having to pay the debt twice over :—Held, that the suit must be dismissed. A suit having been filed against V by the widow of the deceased, who claimed his estate, R offered to pay the debt to V on production of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, but not otherwise. Held, that, as R had by the heirs of the deceased mortgagee, whether maintainable without a succession certificate in a case where the mortgagee becomes entitled to a personal decree against the mortgagor on the happening of certain events. In a suit by the heirs of a deceased mortgagee upon an usufructuary mortgage, by the terms of which the mortgagee was precluded from suing for the money, the Court of first instance gave a personal decree against the mortgagor by reason of the mortgage security having been impaired on the happening of subsequent events. The lower Appellate Court reversed the decision of the first Court on the ground that, having reference to s. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), the suit was not maintainable without a certificate. Held, that in such a case it could not be said that the money for which the suit was brought was a debt due to the estate of the deceased mortgagee within the meaning of s. 4, sub-s. (1), cl. (a) of the Succession Certificate Act, and that the suit was maintainable. UMESH CHANDRA PRAMANICK v. MOTHURA MOHAN HALDAR (1901) . I. L. R. 28 Calc. 246; s.c. 5 C. W. N. 607

18. ——— Act VII of 1889—Right to sue without a certificate—Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4—"Debt"—Suit by son of deceased mortgagee for amount due on usufructuary mortgage—Failure to produce certificate of heirship—Right to recover. A Hindu, being the usufructuary mortgagee of certain lands, died, leaving an adopted son and two widows. The widows assigned the mortgage without consideration. The mortgagor sold the equity of redemption to a purchaser who paid off the mortgage to the assignee of the widows. The adopted son then sued the mortgagor, the widows, their assignee and the purchaser of the equity of redemption, to recover the amount due under the mortgage, or for possession of the lands until the mortgage amount should be paid; but he did not produce a certificate of heirship. Held, that he was entitled to recover as against the mortgaged property. The money sued for was not due under a contract, but was in reality the value of the plaintiffs' mortgage interest. In strictness, plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the land itself, and it was only by his consent that money was awarded in lieu of the land. The amount could not, therefore, rightly be treated as a debt, within the meaning of the Succession Certificate Act, and the failure of the plaintiff to produce a certificate was no bar to a decree being passed in his favour. 3. RIGHT TO SUE OR EXECUTE DECREE WITHOUT CERTIFICATE.

1. ——— Representative of deceased creditor, suit by—Act XXVII of 1860—Court Fees Act, 1870, Sch. 1, cl. 12. A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 is not necessary to give to a person, claiming to be the representative of a deceased creditor, the right to institute a suit to recover a debt due to the estate of the deceased, or the right to present an application for execution of a decree obtained by the deceased. But such certificate, or a probate, or letters of administration, must be produced by the person proceeding as representative before a decree or order can be passed, or process of execution issued for payment of the debt due, unless the Court should think that payment is withheld from fraudulent or vexatious motives, and not from any reasonable doubt as to the party entitled. The effect of the provision in the note to Art. 12, Sch. 1 of the Court Fees Act (No. VII of 1870), on the operation of a certificate duly granted, which has become liable to cancellation under that provision, but has not been cancelled, considered. The family subsequently became divided, and the hypothecated property was divided between defendants Nos. 1 and 2. Defendant No. 1 afterwards hypothecated part of his share of a private debt to defendant No. 3, who having sued on his hypothecation and brought the land to sale in execution, became the purchaser. Held, that the plaintiff was under no obligation to obtain a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 for the purpose of maintaining the suit. 29. ——— Debtor of a deceased person—Sale of deshmukhi hak—Vesting of the hak in the vendee—Death of the vendee—Recovery of the hak by the vendors—Suit for damages—Money had and received. S. 4 of Act VII of 1889 (Succession Certificate Act) prevents a Civil Court from passing a decree against a debtor of a deceased person for payment of his debt, except on production of one or other of the documents there mentioned. T and others, who were entitled to recover from the Government treasury a certain sum on account of deshmukhi hak, sold it to B in 1873 in consideration of a debt due to him. B died in the year 1884. In the year 1886 T and his co-vendors themselves recovered from the Government the said sum, which, under the sale-deed, was recoverable by B. In a suit brought by the heirs of B to recover the amount from T and the other executants of the sale-deed:—Held, that a certificate under Act VII of 1889 was not required to enable the plaintiffs to sue. By the sale in 1873 the property in the amount of the hak sold had become vested in the deceased before his death, but the defendants never became his debtors at any time, as the amount so assigned was not received by them from the revenue authorities till after his death in 1884. For wrongfully receiving it in 1886, the defendants could either be sued in damages by the persons entitled to receive the hak or treated as debtors and sued for money had and received to their use. undivided brothers ; N was the elder, but R was the manager of the family property. N died, leaving a widow and three sons, and after his death R sued the defendant to recover certain debts due to the family. The parties referred the dispute to three arbitrators appointed by them without the intervention of the Court, and applied to the Court to have the arbitrators' award filed. He died, and the surviving brother applied for execution of the decree. Held, that, if the debt was in its nature a family debt, the right to execute the decree would have devolved on him by survivorship, and not as the heir of his deceased brother, and in that case no certificate of heirship under s. 4 of Act VII of 1889 would be necessary ; but if, on the contrary, the debt was part of the separate property of the deceased, the applicant could only execute the decree as heir, and must, in that case, obtained a certificate to enable him to proceed. 34. ——— Act coming into force while suit was pending, effect of, on suit—Suit for foreclosure or sale—Mortgage by conditional sale. On 28th March 1871, the defendant's father borrowed a sum of money from the plaintiff's father, and placed him in possession of certain land under an instrument of mortgage, which provided for the application of the usufruct in liquidation of the interest and then in reduction of the principal ; the instrument also contained a covenant for the repayment in four years of the balance that might then be due by the mortgagor and a stipulation that, on default, the mortgagor was to surrender the property to the mortgagee as if it had been sold to him. In 1874, the mortgagor resumed possession without discharging the mortgage-debt. The mortgagee having died, his sons, on 14th April 1888, filed the present suit on the mortgage, and prayed for a decree for foreclosure or sale. During the pendency of the suit the Succession Certificate Act of 1889 came into operation, but the plaintiffs obtained no certificate under it. Held, that the plaintiffs were not precluded from obtaining a decree by reason of their not having obtained a certificate under the abovementioned Act. The Judge held that the plaintiffs could not proceed with the suit without a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889). Held, reversing the order, that as the rent sued upon became due after the deaths of the deceased partners, it formed no part of their estates at the time of their respective deaths, and no certificate was, therefore, necessary under the Succession Certificate Act. Whilst the suit was pending, J died, and S was allowed to be substituted in his place as plaintiff. A decree was made for sale of the property, but the personal relief was not granted, as it was held to be barred by lapse of time. Held, that this was not " a decree against a debtor for payment of his debt " within the meaning of s. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889). Roghu Nath Saha v. *Poresh Nath Pundari, I. 28. ——— Nephew — Act XXVII of 1860—Act XL of 1858. Where a will appointed the nephews of the testator to manage 4 annas of the property (the subject of the will) in their own right and 12 annas as guardians of a minor son :—Held, that the nephews were entitled to one certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to collect the debts of the whole estate, and to another certificate under Act XL of 1858 to take charge of the minor's 12 annas. MAKHUN CHUNDER SHAHA v. CHAND MONEE DASSEE . 8 W. R. 105

29. ——— Nephew—Certificate of uncle's property. Whether a nephew takes his uncle's share by mere survivorship or by inheritance, if he takes on the ground of their having been joint in estate, he "succeeds to," and "becomes entitled to the effects of," the deceased within the meaning of Act XXVII of 1860. JUSODA KOONWAR v. GOUREE BYJNATH SAHAE SINGH 6 W. R. 139

30. ——— Disciple—Certificate to estate of Hindu devotee—Mental incapacity to succeed. The person entitled to a certificate enabling him to collect the debts due to the estate of a deceased ascetic or devotee must be the disciple, or spiritual brother, or preceptor of the deceased, and such person should not be deprived of his right, even though mentally incapable of succeeding to the office of the deceased. GUREEB DOSS v. MUNGUL DOSS . 14 W. R. 383

31. ——— Spiritual son—Personal estate of a deceased mohunt—Spiritual brother. The person entitled to collect the outstanding debts due to the private estate of a deceased mohunt is the spiritual son (the chela) and not the spiritual brother (guru bhai) of the deceased. DUKHARAM BHARTI v. LUCHMUN BHARTI I. L. R. 4 Calc. 954 : 4 C. L. R. 49

32. ——— Illegitimate sons. There being evidence in this case of the deceased having assigned his property to his illegitimate sons and acknowleged them as his sons, a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to administer to his estate was granted to them in preference to the childless widows of his brother and nephew. PRODHAN RAM v. JERIA KOOER . 17 W. R. 189

33. ——— Adopted son—Act XXVII of 1860—Title under adoption. An adoption de facto must be supposed valid until it is set aside, and a party so adopted is entitled to object to other parties receiving a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 in respect of the property he takes under the adoption. In granting such a certificate, a Judge must look to fitness as well as to propinquity. NUNKOO SINGH v. PURM DHUN SINGH 12 W. R. 356

34 ——— Adopted son—Right to certificate of a son adopted after the death of his adoptive father. A son adopted in pursuance of an unoomoti pattro (power to adopt), some time after the death of his adoptive father, does not require, and is not entitled to obtain, a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, to enable him to collect debts in respect of the properties left by his adoptive father, which accrued due while they were under the management of his adoptive mother. The estate of the adoptive father, if the adoption is a good one, vests immediately on the adoption in the adopted son ; and debts to it, if they accrued due after the death of the adoptive father, are debts recoverable by the adopted son in his own right and not as representative of his adoptive father. NARAIN MAL v. KOOER NARAIN MYTEE I. L. R. 5 Calc. 251

35. ——— Grandmother—Act XXVII of 1860—Act XL of 1858. Where the grandmother of minors applied for certificates under Acts XL of 1858 and XXVII of 1860, the father consenting and approving, it was held that there was nothing in the law to prevent the certificates being granted if the applicant was competent and willing to take them. COMRAO DOOLHAEN v. AGA MEER . . . . 12 W. R. 119

36. ——— Mother-in-law—Act XXVII of 1860. The circumstance of a deceased party having on the day of his death informed his debtor that he had given the whole of the moneys due to him to his mother-in-law was held to be a sufficient indication (whether the gift was valid or not) that she was the proper person to receive the money due to the deceased and the certificate under Act XXVII of 1860. In cases under Act XXVII of 1860, Judges should always certify whether the certificate has been actually granted. ZEEMUTOONISSA KHANUM v. KHUTOO BEGUM . . . . . 12 W. R. 239

37. ——— Mother—Husband. A mother is not entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to collect debts due to her deceased daughter, in preference to the husband of the deceased. Such certificate, however, will not authorize the husband's interference with the mother's possession of the landed property which she claims as her own. MOHUN SOONDUR KOONWAR v. RAMANOOGRO NARAIN . 3 W. R. Mis. 3

38. ——— Mother of adopted son. The mother of a deceased adopted minor son is his legal representative, and entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 as his legal heir. DEENO MOYEE DOSSEE v. DOORGA PERSHAD MITTER . . . . 3 W. R. Mis. 6

39. _____ Widow—Disputed adoption. When the title of a person claiming as adopted son of the deceased is disputed, the certificate may properly be granted to the widow of the deceased. DIRG PAUL SINGH v. GAINDA KOONWAR . . . . 1 Agra Mis. 13

40. _____ Widow—Act XXVII of 1860 s. 3—Act XL of 1858, s. 3. A, as widow of B and guardian under a will of his minor son, obtained a certificate under s. 3 of Act XL of 1858. C, another widow of B, subsequently applied for a certificate under s. 3 of Act XXVII of 1860. The Judge summarily rejected C's application on the ground that the grant of a certificate to her would lead to confusion. Held, on appeal, that the Judge ought to have issued notices and proceeded under s. 3 of Act XXVII of 1860. In the matter of RAISUNNISSA BEGUM 2 B. L. R. A. C. 129 : 10 W. R. 62

41. _____ Widow—Certificate as guardian after grant of certificate of administration. Two certificates of administration cannot run together. So a widow who fails to appear and contest the grant of a certificate to another party, made prior to her own application, cannot claim one for herself afterwards, but she may be allowed a certificate to act as guardian of her minor (adopted) son. SHAM MANNA v. RAMDYAL GOOHOO 1 W. R. Mis. 3

42. _____ Widow—Widow as guardian of son. A certificate may be granted to a widow, as guardian of her minor son, to collect the debts due to her deceased husband, notwithstanding that the adoption of the husband may have been set aside. NITTO KALLEE DEBEE v. OBHOY GOBIND CHOWDHRY . . 5 W. R. Mis. 10

43. _____ Widow—Cousin and partner. A widow is entitled (in preference to a cousin who also claimed as surviving partner) to a certificate to collect the debts, joint as well as separate, of her late husband. SHIB GOLAM SAHOO v. GUNGA KOONWAREE . 1 W. R. Mis. 32

44. _____ Widow—Claims of objectors on application for certificate. The allegation of objectors who claim the property of a deceased person under a tukseemnamah transferring the property from the widow to them should be enquired into ; and if it is proved to be genuine, the objectors are entitled to a certificate, instead of the widow, as legal heir of the deceased. DEB PERSHAD v. MONGA KOONWAR . 4 W. R. Mis. 19

45. _____ Widow—Certificate of husband's property. The petitioner, a Hindu widow, applied for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 of her deceased husband's estate, and stated in her petition that her husband possessed, at the time of his death, self-acquired property, besides the property he had inherited from his brother. The opposing parties set up a will of the deceased's father, under which a certain share of the testator's estate was given to the petitioner's husband, and in the event of his death without children to his mother, and after her death to his brother. Held, that it was not necessary for the purpose of the application to decide on the validity or otherwise of the will, as the widow was entitled to a certificate in respect of her husband's property; and further that the will, which purported, in certain events, to give to the testator's widow that share of the property which he bequeathed to his son (the petitioner's husband), could not affect her claim to the certificate in respect of her husband's self-acquired property. KHOODOOMONEY DABEE v. GOLUCKMONEY DABEE . 1 Ind. Jur. O. S. 36

4. ISSUE OF, AND RIGHT TO, CERTIFICATE —contd.

46. _____ Widow—Failure of objector to prove title. Where a Judge, holding that the special title put forward by an objector had not been proved, decided that the widow of the deceased was best entitled to a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, the decision was held to be correct, inasmuch as the Judge was not deciding upon the general right and title of the parties to the property, but under a special law for the collection of debts and for the protection of debtors. PROTAP NARAIN DOSS v. POORNOMASHEE DAYE 14 W. R. 415

47. _____ Widow—Application for certificate to enable widow to receive sale-proceeds of estate sold after death of husband. Where the widow of a deceased applied for a certificate, without which she was refused some sale-proceeds of an estate of the deceased sold after his death for arrears of revenue, and the Judge rejected her application on the ground that the case did not come within the scope of the Act, as " the sum in deposit was not in any sense a debt due to the deceased at the time of his death":—Held, that, as the sale-proceeds were payable to the estate of the deceased, there was nothing in the law to prevent the Judge from entertaining the application. In the matter of the petition of TRIPOORA SOONDUREE 22 W. R. 45

48. _____ Right to guardianship of Hindu widow—Grant of certificate of administration under Act XL of 1858. The relations of her deceased husband are entitled to be the guardians of a Hindu widow in preference to her paternal relations. A certificate of administration under Act XL of 1858, was, therefore, granted to one of the former in preference to the latter. KHUDIRAM MOOKERJEE v. BONWARI LALL ROY I. L. R. 16 Calc. 584

49. _____ Representative of a deceased person—Person claiming to be entitled to the effects of the deceased—Purchaser at sale in execution of a decree against a deceased person—Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4.

4. ISSUE OF, AND RIGHT TO, CERTIFICATE —concld.

A certain debt due to P (deceased) was sold in execution of a decree against him, and was purchased by M. In order to enable him to recover the said debt, M applied to the District Judge for a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889). The Judge rejected the application on the ground that the applicant was not a representative of the deceased. Held, reversing the decree, that the applicant, having purchased at the auction-sale the debt as part of the deceased's effects, which was sold as such by the Court, was entitled to a certificate under s. 4 (a) of the Succession Certificate Act. MANCHARAM PRANJIVAN v. BAI MAHALI . . I. L. R. 18 Bom. 315

50. ——— Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 1, cl. 4—Right to certificate under will—Validity of will—Hindu Wills Act, XXI of 1870. Cl. 4 of s. 1 of the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889) does not preclude an applicant from obtaining a certificate under the will of the deceased. A will having been held to be genuine in a contest between the parties, and there being no suggestion that the will was one to which the Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870) applied:—Held, that the Court could not refuse to grant the certificate. DAVE LILADHAR KASHIRAM v. BAI PARVATI I. L. R. 18 Bom. 608

5. NATURE AND FORM OF CERTIFICATE.

1. ——— Certificate for portion of property. The Act does not authorize the grant of a certificate for a portion of the property or debts, whether such portion be separate and defined or not. BEYCHAN SAHOO v. GANESH SAHOO 2 N. W. 439

2. ——— Limited certificate. A certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 cannot be limited to particular debts. In the matter of the petition of PRAN KHAN . . . 17 W. R. 238

3. ——— Certificate to collect fractional share of debts. Certificates to collect fractional parts of debts due to a deceased cannot be granted to different heirs according to their respective shares in the inheritance, but one certificate to collect debts should be granted to all or such of the heirs as would consent to act in concert. AMIRUNISSA BARKAT v. AFFIATTUNISSA 3 B. L. R. A. C. 404 : 12 W. R. 307

4. ——— The appellant was the son by the first wife of the deceased : the respondent, the second wife of the deceased, applied for a certificate for herself and on behalf of her minor sons ; the Judge gave her a certificate for a 12-anna share. Held, on appeal, that the certificate should be granted jointly to the appellant and respondent. The granting of a certificate does not determine any question of title, or decide what property does or does not belong to the estate of the deceased. It merely enables the person to whom it is granted to collect the assets of the deceased, and is conclusive of her representative title against all debtors to the deceased. A certificate cannot be granted for the collection of fractions of the debts of the deceased. WASELUN HAK v. GOWHURUNNISSA BIBI 1 B. L. R. S. N. 7 : 10 W. R. 105

5. ——— Act XXVII of 1860 does not contemplate a division of the certificate, or a power to collect fractional shares of debt. BHOODUN v. JAN KHAN . . 13 W. R. 265

6. ——— Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 7—Grant of certificate not to be partial. A District Court acting under s. 7 of Act VII of 1889 must, if there are several applicants, elect to which, if any, a certificate should be granted. It is not competent to such Court to grant separate certificates to different persons for partial collection of the debts in respect of which a certificate is sought. SHITAB DEI v. DEBI PRASAD . . . . I. L. R. 16 All. 21

7. ——— Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 6—Certificate not necessarily to collect all the debts of the deceased. A Court may legally grant to an applicant, under Act VII of 1889, a certificate for the collection of a specified debt or specified debts of a deceased person. The Court is not bound to grant a certificate only for the collection of the whole of the debts of the deceased. In the matter of the petition of INDARMAN . . . I. L. R. 18 All. 45

8. ——— Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 4—Application for certificate for collection of part only of a debt. A certificate for collection of debts under Act VII of 1889 may be given for the collection of any one or more separate debts of the deceased, but not for the collection of part only of a debt. Where, however, a portion of a debt in respect of which a certificate is sought has been discharged, it is not necessary for the applicant to pay duty on more than the unsatisfied portion of the debt. MUHAMMAD ALI KHAN v. PUTTAN BIBI . I. L. R. 19 All. 129

9. ——— Joint certificate—Ground for appeal against order. It is no ground for appeal against an order granting a certificate that the Judge joined with the appellant another person who had an interest in the debts to be collected. In the matter of the petition of PRAN KHAN 17 W. R. 238

10. ——— Rival claimants —Discretion of Judge. Where there are rival claimants for a certificate to collect the debts of a deceased person, the Judge has, under s. 3, Act XXVII of 1860, a discretion to present it to such person as, under the circumstances of the case, shall appear best entitled to it. Quære : Has he

15. _____ Widows of deceased. Where the widows of an intestate applied for administration to the estate of the deceased:—Held, that the District Judge, before whom the application was made, was right in following the usual practice (which was declared to be a reasonable practice) of his Court in refusing to grant such administration to the widows jointly. heirship to the estate of R. Before their application was heard, L's widow repudiated the joint application, and prayed for the grant of a certificate to her alone. The District Judge, however, ordered a joint certificate to be issued to the two widows. On appeal from this order by L's widow: —Held, that, under Act XXVII of 1860, a joint certificate could not be granted. S having predeceased R, his interest in the family property and sacra reverted to R and L, and after L's death the estates vested in L's widow, who had, therefore, a better claim to be entrusted with getting in the debts. The order of the lower Court was varied by directing the certificate to go to L's widow alone on her giving security for half the amount of the outstandings. JAMNABAI v. HASTUBAI . . . . I. L. 6. PROCEDURE.

1. _____ Evidence improperly taken. In an application for a certificate of administration, the District Judge having delegated the examination of the witnesses in the case to the Nazir of the Court and having on the evidence so taken made an order granting the certificate:—Held, that the procedure was illegal, and that the order so passed must be annulled, and further proceedings for the investigation of the title directed, in which the witnesses should be examined by the Judge himself. LUKSHMIBAI RAM SANSHEDAPPA v. RUDRAPPA BIN GANGOPPA 2 Bom., 2nd Ed., 382.

2. _____ Enquiry as to right—Evidence of right. Although no question of title is judicially determined as the result of an enquiry under Act XXVII of 1860, yet the Court is bound under the Act to give the certificate to the person who makes out a title, and for that purpose, when parties are not agreed as to the facts, to try the issues in the ordinary way by the aid of evidence. ANUNDEE KOOER v. BACHOO SINGH

3. _____ Ground for refusal. A Hindu woman applied for a certificate of administration under Act XXVII of 1860 to the estate of her brother, who had died seven years before and whose property had since been in the possession of his so-called heir-at-law. The applicant alleged that at the time of her brother's death she was pregnant, and subsequently gave birth to a son, who died in infancy. As representative of that son, who was deceased's legal heir, she asked for the certificate. The lower Court summarily rejected her application on the ground of lapse of time. Held, that this was not a sufficient reason for rejecting the application, and that the Judge must proceed to an enquiry under the Act. DURGADASI DABI v. JUDUNAUTH MOOKERJEE

2 B. L. R. Ap. 26

4. ——— Application for succession certificate—Order for costs of adjournment against opposing party—Effect of non-compliance with such order—Civil Procedure Code, s. 158. A widow applied for a succession certificate to her late husband. The application was opposed by his brother who claimed to have been undivided from him. The matter came on for hearing but was adjourned on his application, he being ordered to pay the costs. He failed to pay the costs, and the certificate was issued to the widow. Held, that s. 158 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable to the case in the absence of a specific order making the payment of costs a condition precedent to the hearing of the evidence of the party in default. VIRABHADRAPPA CHETTI v. CHINNAMMA

5. ——— Question of legitimacy. On an application for a certificate of administration under Act XXVII of 1860, where the applicant claimed as heir of the deceased and impugned his marriage:—Held, that the Judge was bound to enquire summarily into the question of the marriage of the deceased and the consequent legitimacy of his children. TAYLOR v. NUNDU JAN . . W. R. 1864 Mis. 25

6. ——— Question of validity of will. An application having been made by the widow of a deceased proprietor for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 on the ground that she was entitled in right of inheritance (her husband having separated himself from his brother, the objector), and a will also having been set up which gave her extensive rights over the estate, the Judge granted the application without going into the validity of the will. Held, that, for the purposes of the Act, it was quite sufficient to decide the case upon the question whether the estates of the two brothers were joint or separate at the time of the death of the applicant's husband. SOOKRAJ BAHADOOR v. JUREENA BIBEE

7. ——— Claim under will. When a party claims a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 by reason of a will said to have been executed by the deceased, the Judge should decide upon the issue raised by him and say whether under the will he has a preferable right, instead of granting a certificate to the widow of the deceased upon her giving security to satisfy any claims which may be brought, should the will be proved to be a genuine document in a Civil Court. JUGGUT CHUNDER ROY v. CHUNDER MONEE SHAHA

8. ——— Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), ss. 1, 4, and 6—Question of validity of will—Remand, order of. K F and K A applied to the District Court for a certificate of administration under s. 6 of Act VII of 1889 to enable them to collect the debts due to one P, deceased. They alleged that P had made a will appointing them trustees to collect his debts. B also applied for a certificate on the ground that she was P's heir. She disputed the genuineness of the alleged will. The District Judge rejected both the applications on the ground that the validity of the will could not be settled in a summary proceeding. On appeal the High Court remanded the matter for rehearing holding that the District Judge had jurisdiction to decide upon the genuineness of the will. At the rehearing, B withdrew her application, but the Judge held that, as K F and K A claimed a certificate as executors of the will and not as heirs, they should take out probate of the will. He, therefore, refused their application. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that the duty of the District Judge in carrying out the remand order of the High Court was confined exclusively to determining whether the applicants or the heir was entitled to the certificate, and that he could not refuse the certificate simply because the applicants might have asked for probate, as the case did not fall under cl. 4 of s. 1 of Act VII of 1889. KALIDAS FAKIRCHAND v. BAI MAHALI

9. ——— Question of validity of alleged adoption—Question of title. A, alleging himself to be an adopted son, opposed the application for the grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to B, who, irrespective of the alleged adoption, would be the legal lineal heir of the deceased. The Court before whom the application was made refused the grant of the certificate on the ground that sufficient primâ facie evidence existed establishing the validity of the adoption. On appeal:—Held, that the Appellate Court, concurring with the opinion expressed by the Court of first instance in respect of the factum of the adoption, would not be justified in setting aside the decision on the ground that such Court was wrong in entering into and deciding the question as to the validity of the adoption. On an application for the grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, which is opposed by a party who alleges he has a preferable title to it, the Court should adjudicate the question of title, with a view to determine which party has the preferential right to the certificate. In the matter of the petition of SHEETANATH MOOKERJEE v. PROMOTHONATH MOOKERJEE

10. ——— Act XXVII of 1860—Question of Title. The Court will refuse to grant an application for a certificate to collect the debts of an intestate who has been dead forty years at the time of making the application, the presumption being that, owing to the operation of the law of limitation, there could be now no debts due to him which could be recovered. A question of title cannot be judicially determined between parties in an application under Act XXVII of 1860; therefore, where the object of such an application was to obtain a judicial determination as to the validity of an alleged adoption:—Held, that such a question could only be decided in a Civil Court. 11. ——— Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), s. 7 (3)—Inquiry as to right to certificate—Question of Title. The intention of sub-cl. (3) to s. 7 of the Succession Certificate Act is not to save the Court the trouble of making any inquiry at all where the applicant is not heir to the deceased, but it is to allow the primâ facie title to the certificate to prevail when a question of law or fact arises on inquiry too difficult to be determined in a summary proceeding. SIVAMMA v. SUBBAMMA . I. L. R. 17 Mad. 477

12. ——— Act XXVII of 1860—Rival claimants for certificate—Procedure—Trial of questions of title. In a case of rival claimants to certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to the estate of a deceased Mahomedan lady, A based his claim on the ground that the deceased was a Sunni, and that he being a Sunni was her nearest heir. B's claim was founded on the allegation that the deceased was a Shiah, and that he being a Shiah had the preferential title. The Judge declined to receive the whole of the evidence tendered, and to go into the question of title. On appeal the case was remanded to the Judge for determination of the question whether the deceased was a Sunni or a Shiah, and which of the parties had the preferential title to the certificate upon the entire evidence. Per GHOSE, J. Where the question as to right to a certificate is between two parties, one of whom, according to certain given facts, would be the heir and the other a total stranger, those facts must be gone into and determined, although such procedure involve to a certain extent the trial of a question of title. 18. ——— Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889), ss. 17 and 20—Certificate of heirship—Grant of certificate by Political Agent—Irregularities in making grant—Jurisdiction of Civil Court. A District Judge cannot treat a certificate of heirship granted by the Political Agent in a Native State as invalid because the applicant had not given to him the requisite information as to the other members of the family, and no notices had been issued to them. These irregularities of procedure may be a reason for the Political Agent to cancel the grant, but they do not enable the District Court to treat it as a nullity. A certificate of heirship stamped with the proper stamp, and granted by the Political Agent of a Native State, must be recognised by the Civil Courts in British India "as having the same effect in British India as a certificate granted under this Act" as provided by s. 17 of Act VII of 1889, and under s. 20 precludes the granting of a certificate by a Civil Court. 8. CANCELMENT AND RECALL OF CERTIFICATE.

1. ——— ——— Act XXVII of 1860, s. 6—Grant of certificate by District Court—Petition to High Court by objector for fresh certificate—Supersession of certificate granted by District Court. S. 6 of Act XXVII of 1860 contemplates two different proceedings which may arise under different circumstances. One of these proceedings is an appeal, which has the effect of suspending the "granting," i.e., the issuing of the certificate; and the intention of the Legislature was that, upon an adverse order being made, the person objecting to it might thereupon appeal, and the effect of this would be to oblige the District Judge to hold his hand and not to issue the certificate until the decision of the appeal. The other proceeding is by way of petition to the High Court, after the certificate has been granted by the District Court, to grant a fresh certificate in supersession of the first; and the latter portion of s. 6 shows that the person who obtains the fresh certificate need not be the person who obtained the first, and there is nothing to limit the powers of the Court on petition to grant a fresh certificate to any person, including the person who opposed the granting of the original certificate who may prove himself entitled thereto, or to confine the exercise of such powers to cases where the first certificate was defective in form. The executors applied for a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889) to recover a debt due to the deceased's estate from one N. B opposed this application and claimed the certificate for herself by a separate application. The District Judge rejected B's application, and issued a certificate to the executors on 14th September 1892. In the meantime, one M obtained a decree against B as legal representative of P, and in execution bought P's right, title, and interest in the debt due from N. On 12th September 1892, M applied for certificate, under Act VII of 1889, to recover this debt. The District Judge rejected this application. M appealed to the High Court. To this appeal the executors were made parties at their own request. The High Court reversed the District Judge's order, and remanded the case for disposal on the merits. Upon the remand the executors did not appear before the District Judge to contest M's application, and the District Judge granted him a certificate. Thereupon he applied for revocation of the certificate previously granted to the executors, and the executors in their turn applied for a revocation of the certificate granted to him. The District judge revoked M's certificate on the ground that he had fraudulently concealed from the Court the previous grant of a certificate to the executors. Held, on appeal by M, that the District Judge had a right, under s. 18, cl. CERTIORARI, WRIT OF—

1. _____ High Court's Criminal Procedure Act, X of 1875. The power of the High Court to issue a writ of certiorari was not taken away by s. 147 of the High Court's Criminal Procedure Act, X of 1875. REG. v. RAMDAS SAMALDAS . . . . 12 Bom. 217

2. _____ Removal of case from Small Cause Court—Letters Patent, cl. 13—Inability of Small Cause Court to issue commission. The Bombay Court of Small Causes is subject to the superintendence of the High Court within the meaning of cl. 13 of the Letters Patent of the High Court, and the latter has, therefore, power, for purposes of justice, to remove a case from the Small Cause Court and itself to try and determine such case. The inability of the Small Cause Court to issue a commission to examine for the defence witnesses residing outside its jurisdiction, though not in general, may, under peculiar circumstances, be a good ground for granting an order to remove a case from the Small Cause Court into the High Court. Terms upon which such order will be granted. PIRBHAI KHIMJI v. BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY 8 Bom. O. C. 59

5. _____ Police Act XIII of 1856, s. 111—Conviction on merits—Error in decision on merits—Affidavits, use of. S. 111 of the Police Act (XIII of 1856) did not give jurisdiction to the High Court, when a case was brought before it on certiorari, to enquire whether the Magistrate had come to a correct conclusion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. The object of that section was to limit the objections to a conviction to some substantial meritorious ground, such as want of jurisdiction or the like, and to prevent a conviction from being quashed on a mere error of form or of procedure. But the section did not give the High Court any right to interfere on the ground that the Magistrate had come to a wrong conclusion on the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused person. Though affidavits may be used to show a want of jurisdiction in a Magistrate, even though such affidavits contradict for this purpose the finding of the Magistrate, they cannot be used as affording materials for reviewing the Magistrate's decision on the merits. 8. ——— Cesses on debutter lands—"Owner and holder"—*Beng. The words "owner and holder" in s. 56 of that Act are not limited to any one person, nor for the purposes of that section must the owner be in actual possession. The plaintiff, who was a patnidar of the defendants, having paid certain cesses in respect of what he described in his plaint to be "debutter lakhiraj lands" lying within the ambit of his patni, sued the defendants to recover the amount of such cesses. The defendant admitted that he was proprietor of the estate in which the lands were situated, but denied his liability for the cesses. Held, that the defendant was not liable to pay the amount of the cesses, but that the person liable was the idol through its shebait, or some person in receipt of the rents and profits of the land, or some person in actual

In the same case in the Privy Council: Held, affirming the High Court decision, that payments over and above rent, and described as abwabs in the zamindari accounts, for which as abwabs, the tenant was sued, were held to be rightly treated as abwabs and not as forming part of the rent fixed. They were held not to be recoverable from the tenant, although they had been paid for a period of unknown length, and according to a long standing practice, not having been, if payable at the time of the Permanent Settlement, consolidated with the rent, as they should have been if then payable, under s. 54 of Regulation VIII of 1793. Not having been so consolidated, they could not be recovered under s. 61. If not payable at the time of the Permanent Settlement, they came under the term of new abwabs, and in that case were illegal under s. 55. TILUKHDARI SINGH v. CHULHAN MAHTON . I. L. R. 17 Calc. 131

Where by a kabuliat dated 1869 the defendant, as holder of a mokurari tenure, agreed to pay a certain fixed sum as rent, and also certain items designated tehwari and salami, it was held that they were not illegal cesses within the Full Bench ruling of Chultan Mahton v. Tilukdari Singh, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 175, not being uncertain and arbitrary in their character, but specific sums which the tenants agreed to pay to the landlords, and the payment of which, no less than the payment of the rent itself, formed part of the consideration upon which the tenancy was created, and which were in fact part of the rent agreed to be paid, although not so described; they were recoverable therefore under Reg. V of 1812, ss. 2, 3.* In a suit for rent at the rate of R22-2 per annum the defence was that the yearly rent was not R22-2, but R18-10-6, and that the difference was made up of certain illegal cesses such as sarak, neg, and khuruch, which had been paid for a long time with the rent and without specification in the rent receipts. Both the lower Courts found that R18-10-6 was the defendant's asul jama. Held by the Full Bench, upon a review of the history of abwabs, that the amounts sued for under the head of sarak, neg, and khuruch were abwabs, and were therefore not recoverable, and that all additions to the actual rent under the denomination of abwabs are illegal, and any agreement to pay them is void. Pudma Nund Singh v. *Baij Nath Singh, I. CESSION OF BRITISH TERRITORY IN INDIA.

1. ——— Evidence of cession—Transfer or re-arrangement of jurisdiction in British territory—Statutes 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 85, s. 43—Statutes 24 & 25 Vic., c. 67, s. 22—Statutes 24 & 25 Vic., c. 104, s. 9—Evidence Act, s. 113—Effect of cession of territorial jurisdiction. The power to cede territory was not one of the powers to which the Secretary of State for India in Council succeeded under 21 & 22 Vic., c. 106, when the Government of India was by that statute transferred to Her Majesty, inasmuch as such a power was not possessed by the East India Company. DAMODAR GORDHAN v. GANESH DEORAM

10 Bom. 37

Held, on appeal to the Privy Council, as follows:—Semble: That the general and abstract doctrine laid down by the High Court at Bombay, that it is beyond the power of the British Crown, without the consent of the Imperial Parliament, to make a cession of territory within the jurisdiction of any of the British Courts in India, in time of peace, to a foreign power, is erroneous. Where an objection is taken to the territorial jurisdiction of a British Court, on the ground that the territory over which the jurisdiction of the Court extended has been ceded to a foreign power, such a cession must be regularly proved, and cannot be established by uncertain inferences from equivocal acts. An agreement on the part of the Government of India purporting to transfer certain villages, forming part of a Regulation province within the Bombay Presidency, and subject to ordinary British jurisdiction, to the extraordinary jurisdiction of the Political Agency of a Native State, does not constitute a cession of territory. A re-arrangement of jurisdiction within British territory in India, by the exclusion of a certain district from the Regulations and Codes there in force, and from the jurisdiction of all the High Courts, with a view to the establishment therein of a native jurisdiction under British supervision and control, cannot be carried out except by legislation, under the provisions of the Imperial Statutes 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 85, s. 43; 24 & 25 Vic., c. 67, s. 22; and 24 & 25 Vic., c. 104, s. 9. The Governor General in Council being precluded by the Act 24 & 25 Vic., c. 67, s. 22, from legislating directly as to the sovereignty or dominion of the Crown over any part of its territory in India, or as to the allegiance of British subjects, cannot, by any legislative Act (e.g., by The Evidence Act of 1872, s. 113) purporting to make a notification in the Government Gazette conclusive evidence of a cession of territory, exclude judicial enquiry as to the nature and lawfulness of that cession. 1. ——— Maintenance—Void agreement—Alienation by Hindu widow—Waste. A Hindu widow, as the heiress of her husband, sued his four surviving brothers, who retained the enjoyment of the whole joint estate, for the recovery of her share. While the suit was pending, on the 24th April 1859, she entered into an agreement with the defendant G, by which, after reciting the nature of her claim, and stating that she was too poor to prosecute it, she assigned to him all she might be entitled to receive from the joint estate in right of her deceased husband, together with all interest and accumulations thereon, and all advantage to be derived from the suit about to be instituted by the defendant G, and she appointed him her attorney to institute and carry on any suit in her name for recovering her right and share in the property; it being agreed that he should retain one moiety of what might be recovered absolutely for his own benefit as remuneration, and out of the other moiety should repay himself such sums as he might from time to time have advanced or paid for her maintenance, with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, and also such sums and costs as he might from time to time have advanced or been put to in carrying on the suits, with interest at 12 per cent. per annum, and should pay over the residue to the widow herself. Subsequently that suit was withdrawn. In May 1859, the widow, by G, filed a fresh bill against her husband's surviving brothers for recovery of her husband's share in the estate together with accumulations, and in August 1861 obtained a decree for a large sum of money out of the joint estate—"the whole to be enjoyed by her as a Hindu widow in the manner prescribed by Hindu law." By a deed dated November 14th, 1860, G assigned his interest under the assignment of April 1859 to H S, the defendant. In a suit brought on the 22nd February 1866 by the reversionary heirs of the husband, in the Court of the Principal Sudder Ameen of Hooghly, against the widow, G, and H S, the last one of whom alone resided in Calcutta, which suit was on the 23rd of April 1866 removed into the High Court on the application of G and H S, it was prayed that the agreement of April 1859 and all sub-assignments that might have been made be set aside as void, and that the money should be paid into Court and kept there during the life of the widow defendant for the benefit of the reversionary heirs, and in order to prevent waste. Held by PHEAR, J., that the suit, being one to prevent contemplated waste, was not barred by lapse of time. The agreement of 4th April 1859 was void as being without definite consideration, and being in the nature of a gambling transaction, not valid against heirs under Hindu law; and it was also void, being of a champertous nature, and contrary to public policy. The law which forbids and avoids all acts contrary to public policy, and subversive of the general interests of society, is in force in this country. Independent of the Charter, there is a power inherent in any Court of Justice which receives its authority from the State to make the interests of private persons subordinate to those of the public, and to take care that where they are in conflict, the latter should prevail. Held on appeal by PEACOCK, C.J., and MACPHERSON, J., that the suit could be maintained for the relief sought, and for the protection of the property; that the deed of the 4th April 1859, so far as it related to the moiety of the property assigned to the defendant G absolutely, was not binding on the plaintiffs or on the persons who, upon the death of the widow, might succeed to the property of her deceased husband. Though not void on the ground of champerty, it was an unconscionable bargain, and a speculative, if not a gambling, contract, and there was no necessity for such an alienation by the widow. But so far as regards the assignment of the moiety as security for the advances and expenses which G or his assigns might reasonably and properly make or incur for the maintenance of the widow, for carrying on the necessary proceedings to enforce the rights, with 12 per cent. interest on such advances, it was not void, but created a charge upon that moiety, which was binding upon the reversionary heirs of the husband to the extent of such advances and expenses. There was legal necessity for such charge, and it affected the moiety both of principal and accumulations. Held by MACPHERSON, J., that the agreement of April 1859 was void by English law as being a mere gambling transaction and contrary to public policy and illegal. retain three-fourths for his own purposes and for hospitality, and pay the remaining fourth for the maintenance of the widow and the heir. Held, that the assignment was valid, the purpose for which the lands were dedicated being provided for; and that, although the transaction amounted to champerty, that was no ground for treating it as invalid. An assignment between Hindus of property the subject-matter of litigation, on conditions which constitute champerty, is not on that ground invalid. 8. ——— Maintenance—Application of law of champerty—Duty of Court—Specific performance of lease savouring of champerty. The law of England as to the offences of maintenance and champerty does not apply to natives of India. In dealing with objections to their contracts, on the ground of maintenance and champerty, the Court must look to the general principles regarding public policy and the administration of justice upon which that law at present rests. To constitute "maintenance" improper litigation must have been stirred up with a bad motive for purposes contrary to public policy and justice. "Champerty" is a species of "maintenance" and of the same character, but with the additional feature of a condition or bargain providing for a participation in the subject-matter of the litigation. Specific performance decreed of a lease, though the lease formed part of an arrangement whereby, as a consideration for the lease, the plaintiff was to lend the defendant money to enable him (inter alia) to commence proceedings against the then tenant of the subject-matter of the intended lease. The question as to how far the English law relating to maintenance and champerty is applicable to Hindus in the presidency towns considered. Quære: Whether that law was ever applicable to cases where pecuniary assistance is afforded to defendants. The Administrator General of Madras administered to L's estate, but the personal representatives of M contested the right of the Administrator General to pay over the fund to those of L. The result was that L's representatives were recommended by their attorney, C, to apply to one J (the present plaintiff), who was also a client of C's, for the necessary funds. J consented to advance money for the purpose of the suit, and on the 28th July 1869 a so-called deed of mortgage, drawn up by C, was executed between the present defendants as mortgagors and the plaintiff, J, as mortgagee, whereby, in consideration of an advance of the sum of R5,000 (the receipt of R1,800 of which was by the instrument acknowledged) to be made by J to such attorney as he should select, before the 31st of December 1869, the defendants mortgaged everything which they might be entitled to recover by suit, the mortgage to be defeasible on payment of 50 per cent. of what they might recover by suit, and a further 50 per cent. upon all to which they might be entitled as the persons entitled to L's estate. They also covenanted to repay the money lent with interest. The present defendants succeeded in their suit against the Administrator General, and this suit was brought by J to recover a commission of 50 per cent. on the sum recovered, and the sums advanced, with interest. Defendants denied that plaintiff had fulfilled his part of the agreement and alleged that in consequence of his neglecting to supply funds they had been compelled to borrow of a third party. They also pleaded that the agreement was void for champerty and maintenance. Held, that by the law of England, which prevailed in the present suit, this contract was clearly void, being contrary to the plain provision of the common and statute law against maintenance, and that it was also void as being contrary to public policy. The Court further found that the plaintiff had failed to fulfil his part of the contract, but allowed him to recover the sum really advanced by him, viz., R2,200 with interest. 15. ——— Alienation by Hindu widow. K D, a Hindu widow, having applied to H S to aid her in leaving the family dwelling-house of her late husband, G C C, where she alleged she was improperly treated and placed under restraint by the plaintiff, her husband's sole surviving brother, H S, at his own cost, enabled her to do so. She then applied to H S to advance funds for the payment of certain debts incurred by her in consequence of the plaintiff's refusal to pay her any portion of the family estate, to allow her a monthly sum for maintenance, and to manage and conduct for her a suit which she proposed to institute to establish her right to a portion of the joint estate; and H S consented to do so upon certain terms, which were embodied in a deed by which K D assigned to H S all her right, share and interest as widow of G C C in the joint estate and in the accumulations thereof, and in the separate estate of G C C, and all benefit to be derived from the intended suit; on trust, first, to repay all the costs of the suit; secondly, to retain, by way of remuneration for managing the suit, one half of what might be recovered therein; and, thirdly, to hold the residue as security for repayment, with interest at 12 per cent., of the sums advanced by H S; the surplus, after satisfying all such sums, to be paid to K D. Then K D, with the aid and under the management of H S, brought a suit against the plaintiff and other members of the joint family of G C C for a declaration of her rights under the will of his father, R C, and for the administration of G C C's share of the joint estate. The result of this suit was that K D was (among other things) declared entitled as a Hindu widow to R1,01,302-14-10 in respect of the accumulations of the joint property, between the dates of R C's and G C C's deaths, the plaintiff paid the R1,01,302-14-10 into Court, under an order made in the suit. K D subsequently obtained an order, under which she took this sum out of Court, notwithstanding that the plaintiff applied for an injunction to restrain her taking it out. Upon her obtaining that order, the plaintiff, as immediate reversionary heir of G C C, instituted the present suit against K D and H S, to restrain K D from taking the R1,01,302-14-10 out of Court, and to compel her to bring back any portion thereof which she might have already received; and for a declaration that the assignment to H S created no valid charge thereon. Held (following the decision in the case of Grose v. Amritamayi Dasi, 4 B. L. R. O. C. 1), that the assignment to H S was not binding on the reversionary heirs of G C C, except as regards the charge on one moiety for expenses incurred and advances made by H S whether by way of maintenance or otherwise, with interest thereon at 12 per cent. 16. ——— Operation of conveyance pendente lite—Conditional transfer—Maintenance. N, claiming to be entitled to certain real and personal property as heir of one J, brought a suit under Act XIX of 1841 to obtain possession thereof; and, in order to provide funds to carry on the litigation, executed an ikrarnama, whereby he purported to relinquish and convey to one K a moiety of his right, title, and interest in the property, in consideration of the sum of R50, K agreeing to take all proper steps and to defray all expenses necessary for the recovery of the property, which was valued in the ikrarnama at R75,000. K accordingly carried on the suit and incurred costs to the extent of R1,700, but the suit was ultimately dismissed. The property was afterwards taken possession of by the Court of Wards on behalf of one S, who claimed under an alleged adoption by one A, the person last in possession. Thereafter K sold his interest under the ikrarnama, which he valued at R2,18,000, to the plaintiff for the sum of R1,700. In a suit brought against the Court of Wards as representing S for the recovery of a moiety of the property or its value, in which N refused to join as plaintiff and was made a defendant:—Held, that the suit was not maintainable; the conveyance by N to K did not operate as a present transfer of the property, but only as an agreement to transfer it on conditions which were never fulfilled; the plaintiff was not entitled to recover as against S, who was no party to the deed. Held, also, that the transaction was void as being contrary to public policy, and one to which effect ought not to be given by the Court. 18. ——— Bond executed by Hindu widows—Maintenance—Fraud—Undue influence and threats. The three childless widows of a zamindar instituted a suit against the rightful heir to their husband's estate, in which they unsuccessfully disputed his legitimacy. Previously thereto they had obtained advances of money from the present plaintiff, and executed in his favour an agreement and a bond, whereby they secured to him the payment of large sums in case they recovered their husband's estate, and virtually gave to him the entire control of their suit. Subsequently they agreed with the rightful heir to compromise the suit, which compromise, however, was never acted upon, partly owing, it was alleged, to the subsequent conduct of the heir. At the date of the compromise the heir, who had just attained his majority, and was without proper counsel or assistance, and acted under threats from the plaintiff, a powerful and wealthy banker, that he would carry on the litigation against him per fas aut nefas, was induced, contrary to his own judgment and sense of right, and without any evidence that the sum claimed was really due to the plaintiff, to execute a bond in his favour, whereby he bound himself to pay a large sum of money claimed by the plaintiff as being due from the widows; the plaintiff on his part agreeing that he would treat such payment as a satisfaction of his claim against the widows, but meanwhile that he would retain the securities which he held from them. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the heir to enforce the last-mentioned bond:—Held, that the bond was wholly invalid and fraudulent as against the defendant, and that, as there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant independently of the bond, it could not stand as a security for anything which might be justly due from the widows. Quære: Whether the plaintiff could have recovered from the widows, if they had been successful against the heir, the large sums of money secured by their bond and agreement. The law of champerty and maintenance is not the same in India as in England. The English statute with regard to champerty is not applicable in the moussil in India. The Indian Courts in every transaction must decide upon the fact whether it is merely the acquisition of an interest in the subject of litigation bonâ fide entered into, or whether it is an unfair or illegitimate transaction got up for the purpose merely of spoil, or of litigation, disturbing the peace of families, and carried on from a corrupt or other improper motive. 19. ——— Agreement against public policy—Maintenance—Malicious prosecution—Reasonable and probable cause—Practice—Security for costs by a person not a party to the suit. In a deed, dated 17th July 1867, it was recited that A was entitled to certain property then in possession of D and E, and that A and B, her husband, "having no funds to adopt or to commence legal proceedings" for the recovery of the property, had applied to C to assist them in commencing and conducting the necessary suits and to make all the requisite disbursements connected therewith until their final termination, and that C had agreed to do so; and also, as A and B had "no means whatever" to pay to them or the survivor R150 a month until the final termination of the litigation. Then followed the appointment by A and B of C to be their attorney to institute and prosecute all necessary suits, to sign all papers and documents, to receive all moneys and take possession of all lands, etc., to which A and B might become entitled under any decree or order that might be made, and to appoint attorneys and vakils. C then covenanted to institute and prosecute the necessary suits, and to make the necessary advances and payments and to pay R150 a month to A and B. Then it was agreed that out of the moneys or proceeds of lands, etc., recovered, C should, in the first place, retain and reimburse himself all advances and payments made by him with interest thereon at 12 per cent.; in the second place, retain to himself, by way of remuneration for his trouble and risk, one-third of the nett proceeds of the litigation; and, in the third place, make over the remaining two-thirds to A and B. A and B covenanted not to intermeddle with C in prosecuting the litigation, that they would render him all possible assistance, and that the power-of-attorney given by them to C should be irrevocable so long as he prosecuted the litigation and paid the monthly allowance of R150. It was provided, however, that if B wished to devote all his time thereto, he might have the management of the litigation, but under the control of C; and that A and B might revoke the power-of-attorney on repayment to C of all money advanced by him with interest at 12 per cent. and the sum of R2,000 by way of liquidated damages. A power was also reserved to A and B to compromise, but only with the consent of C, unless the sum to be received on the compromise should exceed the total amount of C's advances with interest at 12 per cent. In pursuance of this agreement, a suit was instituted in the names of A and B against D and E to recover possession of the property. This suit was by the High Court decreed in the plaintiff's favour, but was on appeal dismissed by the Privy Council with costs. While the suit was in the Court of first instance, D and E applied to have C added as a party. This application was refused, and D and E did not appeal from that refusal. Pending the litigation, A and B brought a suit against D and E for wasilat, and obtained a decree. On the 21st September A and B executed a memorandum of agreement, whereby C purchased all their rights in the two suits brought by them against D and E. D and E now brought a suit against C, alleging that they had suffered loss and damage by the litigation instituted by A and B; that C was guilty of champerty and maintenance; that the litigation was commenced and continued maliciously by C in the names of persons who had no legal or equitable right, and without reasonable or probable cause; that the agreement of 17th July 1867 was illegal and contrary to public policy; that the litigation was carried on by C at his own expense and for his own benefit; and that C was the real mover in the proceedings, and illegally used the procedure of the Court to the damage and injury of the plaintiffs. Held, in the Court below and on appeal, that there was reasonable and probable cause for the institution of the wasilat suit brought by A and B against D and E. Held, by MACPHERSON, J., that the agreement of July 1867 was illegal and against public policy, as also were the subsequent institution and maintaining of the suit against D and E by C; and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from C the loss they had sustained by reason of the suits which he (substantially only for his own benefit) had maintained against them. Held, on appeal (reversing the decision of the Court below), that the suit was not maintainable. The English statutes with regard to champerty and maintenance do not apply to India. In England, champerty and maintenance were offences punishable by the Common Law; and the ground on which an action is allowed in England,—viz., that C had been guilty of an offence by which the plaintiff had suffered damage,—does not exist in India. The only ground, on which agreements which savour of champerty or maintenance are held to be void in this country, is that they are contrary to public policy. Assuming that the agreement of July 1867 was a valid one, and that C did thereby acquire an interest in the subject-matter of the suit, and supplied the means of carrying it on, such acts did not entitle the plaintiffs to maintain the present suit, or to recover against C the costs of the former suit. C ought to have been made a co-plaintiff with A and B in the former suit, or he ought to have been called upon to give security for the costs of that suit. CHUNDERKANT MOOKERJEE v. RAMCOOMAR KOONDOO . 13 B. L. R. 530: 22 W. R. 138

In the same case: Held, on appeal to the Privy Council, that the English laws of maintenance and champerty are not of force as specific laws in India, either in the mofussil or in the presidency towns. The ground on which contracts of the nature of champerty and maintenance should be held by the Indian Courts to be invalid is that they are contrary to public policy. An agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit in consideration of having a share in the property if recovered is not necessarily opposed to public policy, since cases may easily be supposed in which it would be in furtherance of right and justice that a suitor who had a just title to property, and no means to support it, should be assisted in this way. But agreements purporting to be made to meet such cases, when found to be extortionate and unconscionable so as to be inequitable, or to be entered into for improper objects, as for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring others by encouraging unrighteous suits, are contrary to public policy, and ought not to have effect given to them. Since by the law of India a champertous agreement does not constitute a punishable offence, an action in that country, founded on alleged champerty, to recover losses and costs incurred in litigation, cannot be sustained on the ground that a remedy by action accrues where an indictable offence has been committed. No action will lie for improperly putting the law in motion in the name of a third party, unless it is alleged and proved that it has been done maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause. In the absence of such proof, an action for losses and costs incurred in defending a suit will not lie as against a person who is alleged to have been a mover in that suit, and to have had an interest in it, but who had not been made a party to the record, since such a state of things creates no legal privity from which a promise can be implied on which an action on contract can be founded, nor does it, ex hypothesi, constitute a legal wrong. 20. ——— Agreement to supply money for another person's suit—Excess of the reward rendering such agreement inequitable. A fair agreement to supply money to a suitor to carry on a suit, in consideration of the lender's having share of the property sued for, if recovered, is not to be regarded as necessarily opposed to public policy, or, merely on this ground, void. But in agreements of this kind the questions are (a) whether the agreement is extortionate and unconscionable, so as to be inequitable against the borrower; or (b) whether the agreement has been made not with the bonâ fide object of assisting claim believed to be just and of obtaining reasonable compensation therefor, but for improper objects, as for the purpose of gambling in litigation, or of injuring others, so as to be, for these reasons, contrary to public policy. In either of these cases, effect is not to be given to the agreement. Here, upon the facts, the above case (b) did not arise, and this agreement was not contrary to public policy. But this agreement fell within case (a), and the judgment of the High Court was affirmed, that the agreement was so extortionate and unconscionable, in regard to the excess of the reward, that it was inequitable, and, therefore, not enforceable against the defendant. Ramcoomer Coondoo v. *Chunder Kanto Mookerjee, I. In 1878 the first plaintiff, G J, alleging that the said compromise had been fraudulently effected, and that the defendant, M K, at the time of the compromise, had been and was still possessed of ample property to pay off his liabilities, induced the liquidator of the company to assign to him the company's claim against M K, and brought this suit, praying that the compromise with P might be declared not binding, and that M K might be ordered to pay the plaintiff, as assignee of the N F Co., the sum of R1,61,500 with interest. Held, that the assignment to the plaintiff, G J, of the claims of the N F Co. against M K was effected with a view to litigation, and that, under the circumstances, the suit was not maintainable. The agreement provided that V should defend the suit, but if the result of the suit should be to establish the plaintiff's right to seize the house in execution, then that H should be at liberty to cancel the contract of sale. Held, that the agreement of 12th December amounted to an absolute sale by V to H of the equity of redemption of the house in question, and that it was not champertous. 25. ——— Agreement to share property the subject of suit—Claim for payment for work done and expenses properly incurred—Agreements not opposed to public policy. The English law of champerty is not in force in India. Agreements made by claimants of property in litigation to share it with others on their obtaining decrees in consideration of funds being supplied by the latter for carrying on their suits are not in themselves opposed to public policy, nor are they necessarily void. But such agreements, when extortionate, are inequitable, and in that case should not receive effect. the specific English law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India, and while fair agreements to supply funds to carry on litigation in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered should not be regarded as per se opposed to public policy, yet such agreement should be carefully watched, and if extortionate and unconscionable, or made not with the bonâ fide object of assisting for a reasonable recompense, a claim believed to be just, but for the purpose of gambling in litigation, or of injuring or oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits, should be held contrary to public policy, and not enforced. For the purposes of meeting the expenses of an appeal to the High Court, the appellant, on the advice of his legal adviser, executed a bond for R25,000 in consideration of the obligee agreeing to defray such expenses. The obligor agreed to pay the R25,000 within one year from his recovering possession of the property in suit; and at the request of the obligor's pleader, the obligee advanced R3,700, which was applied to the expenses of the appeal. The High Court dismissed the appeal; and in a deed executed by the obligor in favour of the obligee and others for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a further appeal to the Privy Council, he admitted his liability under the former bond. The Privy Council decreed his appeal, and he obtained possession of the property in suit, but declined to pay the R25,000, upon which the obligee sued upon the bond. It was found that, apart from the moneys borrowed by the obligor from time to time, he was without even the means of subsistence; that he executed the bond with his eyes open and perfectly understood his position and the effect of both the instruments executed by him; that no fraud or improper pressure appeared to have been applied to him; that his legal advisers had acted honestly and to the best of their ability in his interest; that there was nothing to show that, having regard to the risks of the litigation, he could have obtained the assistance necessary for the prosecution of his appeal on better terms than those contained in the bond; that without such assistance he could not have appealed to the High Court; and that the obligee gave him such assistance upon his application. Held, also, that the obligee could not, under the circumstances, have considered both that the obligor's claim was a just one and reasonably likely to succeed, and that the R25,000 was a reasonable recompense in the event of success for the advance of R3,700; and the bond was therefore a gambling in litigation, which it would be contrary to public policy to enforce. The Court gave the plaintiff a decree for the R3,700 actually advanced, with simple interest at 20 per cent. per annum from the date of the bond to the date of the decree, with costs in proportion, and interest at 6 per cent. per annum on the R3,700, interests and costs, from the date of the decree until payment. The defendant admitted the mortgage, but set up an unregistered bedavapatra (release) of the equity of redemption dated 1865, alleged to have been passed to him by the father of the plaintiff's assignor for a consideration of R800. He also contended that the plaintiff's assignment was champertous, and made with the view of depriving him of the property. The Court of first instance held that the assignment was "a gambling transaction and entered into with the object of gaining the spoils of an unrighteous litigation, and null and void as opposed to public policy," and that the release set up by the defendant could not be given in proof for want of registration, and, therefore, rejected the plaintiff's claim. On appeal to the High Court, Held, reversing the decree of the lower Court, that, allthough the transaction might not be a praiseworthy one in foro conscientiæ, it could not be regarded by a Civil Court as one entered into "with the object of gaining the spoils of an unrighteous litigation." The lower Court dismissed the claim of A, but relying upon the prayer for general relief made a decree in favour of B and C. Held, that the plaintiffs B and C were entitled to no relief in the suit. Held, further, that a prayer for general relief is limited by the facts alleged and by the prayer for express relief. Cargill v. Bower, L. L. R. 2 Calc. 233, L. R. 4 I. A. 23; Kunwar Ram Lal v. Nil Kanth, L. R. 20 I. A. 112, I. L. R. 20 Calc. 843; Achal Ram v. Kuzim Husain Khan, I. L. R. 27 All. 27, L. R. 32 I. A. 113, followed. An assignment of property said to be worth three lakhs, by persons claiming to be the next reversioners on the death of a female owner, for a consideration of R52,600, of which sum R600 was paid at the time of the execution of the deed and the balance payable in portion to the success of a suit by the assignee and assignors to recover the property, for the prosecution of which suit the assignee was to supply the funds. Held, not to be a transaction contrary to public policy and void on that ground by reason of the provision for payment of the purchase money. Whether it was an unfair and unconscionable bargain by reason of the inadequacy of the price was a question between the assignors and assignee, which it was unnecessary to decide in a suit in which the assignors did not repudiate the transaction, but asked that effect be given to it and for that purpose joined the assignee as plaintiff in the suit. A person, who claims title under conveyances from a Hindu female heir with a limited interest, and who seeks to enforce that title against reversioners is always subject to the burden of proving not only the genuineness of his conveyances, but the full comprehension by the limited owner of the nature of the alienations she was making, and also that those alienations were justified by necessity, or at least that the alienee did all that was reasonable to satisfy himself of the existence of such necessity. And this burden lies the more heavily on one who comes into Court with the case that he did not take from a limited owner, but from one, whose title he alleges to have been adverse to that owner. The defendant's title to the property in suit depended on an alienation made in his favour by one of three Hindu ladies, who was not the heir of the last male owner, and on two subsequent deeds of sale, which it was sought to set aside in this suit, in which the real owner had joined. Held, with reference to the earlier transactions, that the onus on the defendant had not been discharged, and that there was no satisfactory evidence that they had been authorized in any way by the real owner. Now could she ratify them under s. 196 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) by becoming a party to the later transactions; it would be a serious extension of the law, as hitherto applied, to hold that a woman with a limited interest could by acts ex post facto charge upon the estate, which she represents, obligations not originally binding upon it. Though the deeds of sale were therefore invalid, the consideration being for the most part not justified by legal necessity, yet as to certain sums in both deeds as to which such necessity was established, it was held that the first Court had rightly made the decree for possession conditional on the payment by the plaintiff of such sums to the defendant. As the deeds were void, as

The omission of the word "dishonestly," both in the charge and in the record of the conviction, is not a ground for reversal of conviction and sentence where an accused person has fully understood the nature of the offence with which he is charged, and had not been prejudiced by the omission. Conviction and sentence recorded by a Magistrate, and reversed by the Sessions Judge upon this ground, restored by the High Court, on appeal directed by Government under s. 272, Criminal Procedure Code. Although the verification of plaints containing false statements is punishable according to the provisions of the law for the time being in force for the punishment of giving or fabricating false evidence, still it is not quite the same thing as giving false evidence. Three separate offences should not be lumped together in a single charge, but each offence should form a separate head of charge, with reference to which

57. ——— Alternative charge—Common object—Unlawful assembly—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 236. Fourteen accused were charged with rioting armed with deadly weapons, and with murder and causing grievous hurt during such riot. The common object alleged by the prosecution was to compel the payment of certain money by one of the persons of the opposite party. Some of the accused, who admitted their presence at the scene of the occurrence, stated that they had been attacked on account of an allegation being made that one of the opposite party had enticed away another's wife, and that they had merely acted in self-defence. On the close of the case for the prosecution, the Sessions Judge, considering that possibly the common object alleged by the prosecution might be considered not to have been proved, amended the charge and added an alternative common object to it, namely, that the object of the assembly was to punish one of the opposite side for enticing away another's wife. There was no evidence on the record to prove the alternative common object, it being based solely on a portion of the statements of some of the accused. Held, that, if the Sessions Judge was of opinion that there were grounds for charging the accused with a common object other than that alleged by the prosecution, his proper course was not to amend the charge, but to add a separate count or counts to the charge upon which a separate verdict could be taken. S. 236 of the Code of Criminal Procedure only authorizes a charge in the alternative when it is doubtful which of several offences the facts which can be proved will constitute, and not where there may be a doubt as to the facts which constitute one of the elements of the offence. A charge is a precise formulation of the specific accusation made against a person, who is entitled to know its nature at the earliest stage. After the accusation has been formulated in the shape of a charge, the Sessions Court may then either commit the accused for trial before itself upon the charge so framed, or admit him to bail for the same purpose. R was examined as a witness by the Sessions Judge in a case. On the 15th of February the Sessions Judge delivered judgment in that case, and on the same day, purporting to act under s. 477 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, had R arrested and committed to jail on charges under ss. 193, 466 and 471 of the Penal Code. The 25th of February was fixed for commencing the preliminary inquiry. No proceeding was drawn up or charge framed on the 15th. On the 16th of February an order was recorded by the Sessions Judge as follows:—"In the course of the Sessions trial decided yesterday, I came to the opinion, for reasons stated in my judgment then delivered, that R has committed offences under ss. 193, 466 and 471 of the Penal Code, and that it is my duty to hold an inquiry preliminary to committing him to the High Court to be tried for those offences. R was yesterday arrested and committed to jail. There was then no time, owing to the lateness of the hour, to draw up this formal proceeding. He will be produced before me, as directed in the warrant, on the 25th of February, when evidence will be taken." Held, that the proceeding of the 16th of February contained no particulars of the statements made and acts done by R upon which perjury and forgery were charged against him, and was not in any sense a charge or order of commitment, and was not warranted by law. The accused was tried in one trial on charges under ss. 467, 468 and 109 of the Penal Code with regard to the alleged forgery of the kabala; under s. 82 of the Registration Act, and ss. 467, 109 and s. 471 of the Penal Code with regard to the mortgage-deed, and also on charges under ss. 471 and 511 of the Penal Code with reference to the attempt to cheat the Loan Office. The accused was convicted under ss. 467, 109, 417, 511 and 471 of the Penal Code. Held, on appeal, (i) that, as the alleged forgery of the kabala and the presentation of the forged mortgage-deed to the Secretary of the Loan Office could not be said to be parts of the same transaction, there had been a misjoinder of charges; (ii) that the charge to the jury was defective, inasmuch as it did not show what the facts of the case were, what the evidence adduced was, or what was the case for the accused; and (iii) that, inasmuch as the evidence on the record showed that there was a case which ought to be investigated by a jury, the accused should be retried. 17. ——— Charge, alteration of. On the 8th August 1884 a Magistrate of the second class began an enquiry in a case in which several persons were accused of rioting and of voluntarily causing grievous hurt. On the 6th September the powers of a Magistrate of the first class were conferred on the Magistrate by an order of Government, which was communicated to him on the 8th September. On the 9th September, the case for the prosecution having closed, the Magistrate framed charges against each of the accused under ss. 323 and 325 of the Penal Code, recorded the statements of the accused and the evidence for the defence, and on the 10th September convicted the accused on all the charges, passing upon each of them, in respect of each charge, sentences which he could pass as a Magistrate of the first class, but could not have passed as a Magistrate of the second class. On appeal the Sessions Judge, on the ground that the prisoners had committed the offence described in s. 148 of the Penal Code, held that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were illegal, as being inconsistent with the provisions of s. 71, paragraphs 2 and 4; and he accordingly reduced the sentences of imprisonment which the Magistrate had passed to the maximum of imprisonment which the Magistrate could have inflicted under s. 148. Held by the Full Bench (PETHERAM, C.J., and BRODHURST, J., dissenting), that the sentences passed by the Magistrate were legal. Per PETHERAM, C.J., that the Judge in this case had no power

The jury, having considered their verdict, were asked by the Clerk of the Crown if they were agreed. The foreman replied that they were, and that their verdict was guilty, and when further asked, he said "guilty of abetment—of abetment generally." On the application of counsel for the prosecution, a charge was then added of "abetment of murder committed by some person or persons unknown." The additional charge was read aloud to the jury, but was not specially explained to the prisoner, nor was he called upon to plead to it. Counsel for the prisoner was asked by the Judge if he desired to have a new trial on the charge as amended, but he declined. The three charges (i.e., the two original charges and the additional charge) were then read to the jury, who after deliberation returned a verdict of "not guilty" on charges Nos. 1 and 2, and of "guilty" on charge No. 3, viz., of abetment of murder by a certain person or persons unknown. On the application of counsel for the prisoner, the following points were reserved: (i) whether, under the circumstances, the Court had power to add a new charge; (ii) whether the verdict returned on the new charge was valid, the prisoner not having been called on to plead to it. Held (SCOTT, J., dissentiente), that the Judge was wrong in framing a new charge in addition to the original charges. The error, however, was one of form and not of substance, and under s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), the Court declined to interfere with the conviction. Held, also, that having regard to ss. 228, 229, and 230 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the charge of abetment of murder by B might have been changed into one of abetment generally. Held, also, that, in any case, the conviction was good under ss. 236 and 237 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It was doubtful whether the evidence would establish the offence of murder, abetment of murder by B, or abetment of murder by some one unknown. Even if there had been no charge properly framed, the Judge might, under s. 237, have accepted the verdict returned by the jury and entered it on the record. The fact that the Judge framed a charge which, ex hypothesi, was beyond his authority, and accepted a verdict on that charge, did not affect the legality of the conviction. Held, that the omission to read and explain the charge to the prisoner did not, under the circumstances, prejudice the prisoner, and was, therefore, immaterial. In the Criminal Procedure Code generally the word " charge " is used as the statement of a specific offence, and not as indicating the entire series of offences of which a prisoner is accused. There is nothing in the Code to indicate that the word is to have a different construction in ss. 226 and 227 from what it has in other sections. The words " without a charge " in s. 226 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) will properly apply not only to a case in which there is no charge at all, but also to a case in which there is no charge of such an offence as the Sessions Judge or Clerk of the Crown may think the prisoner ought to be tried for. If the word " alter " in s. 227 is to be taken to include " addition," as it does in s. 226, the addition permitted must be an addition to some specific charge in the nature of an alteration, and not the addition of a new charge. The words " return of the verdict " in s. 227 mean the return of the final verdict which the Judge is bound to record. Per SCOTT, J. The test of the admissibility of proposed amendments to a charge is whether such amendment will prejudice the prisoner. The word " charge " is used in the Code both as indicating the whole series of counts or heads of charge, and also as indicating a charge of one specific offence. In s. 227 it is used in the former sense. The word " alter " in s. 227 must be taken to be equivalent to the words " add to or otherwise alter " which are used in s. 226, and consequently the addition of the new " head of charge " is an alteration within the meaning of s. 227. If the prosecution establishes certain acts constituting an offence and the Court misapplies the law by charging and convicting an accused person for an offence other than that for which he should have been properly charged, and if, notwithstanding such error, the accused has by his defence endeavoured to meet the accusation of the commission of these acts, then the Appellate Court may alter the charge or finding and convict him for an offence which those acts properly constitute, provided the accused be not prejudiced by the alteration in the finding. theft : that was the only charge which they were called upon to answer. In appeal the District Magistrate held that no theft had been committed, but he convicted the accused of being members of an unlawful assembly. Held, that on the trial the accused were called upon to answer only a charge of theft, they were never called upon to answer any other charge, and they therefore could not fairly be convicted on their appeal of an offence of an entirely different character. It is on the proceedings taken before the Magistrate that the facts constituting an offence for which a trial is held are made known to the accused, and the law is applied by the Magistrate to the facts established, so as to constitute the charge which the accused is called upon to answer. It therefore cannot be said that sufficient notice was given to the accused, because mention of s. 147 of the Penal Code (rioting) together with theft was made in the final report of the police as the offences considered to have been established ; and that the accused must have been made acquainted with such report. 1. SUMMING UP IN GENERAL CASES.

CHARGE—contd.

1. ——— Mode of summing up evidence—Duty of Judge. In charging a jury, a Judge is not bound to do more than lay carefully and plainly before them the evidence as recorded by him, noting discrepancies and inconsistencies, and pointing out generally the way in which it is favourable or unfavourable to accused. QUEEN v. CHUNDER KUMAR MUZOOMDAR

25 W. R. Cr. 54

2. ——— Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 298—Duty of Judge when the jury are uncertain as to the offence committed. A jury, after retiring, returned to the box, and, after unanimously finding both prisoners not guilty of the charges framed against them, stated to the Judge that they thought an offence had been committed by one of the prisoners, but were uncertain as to the section of the Penal Code applicable to his case; the Judge thereupon made over to them a copy of the Penal Code, leaving them to decide under what section the offence fell. Held, that he had failed in his duty, and that he should have asked the jury what doubts they had as to the crime which had been committed, and should have explained to them the law and informed them what offence the facts would prove against the prisoner if they believed those facts. JASPATH SINGH v. QUEEN-EMPRESS . I. L. R. 14 Calc. 164

3. ——— Omission to point out legal bearings—Reading evidence to jury in important cases. On a trial by jury a Sessions Judge in summing up should give a full and detailed statement of the evidence on both sides; he should point out the legal bearing of it, and what weight the jury ought to attach to its several parts. His omission to do so, if the accused is thereby prejudiced, amounts to such an error in law as would justify a Court of Appeal in setting aside the verdict. No general rule can be laid down as to when a prisoner is prejudiced by a defective summing up, but in general, if the finding of the jury in such a case is one that an Appeal Court would set aside if the trial had taken place with the aid of assessors, the Court will interfere and set the verdict aside. In capital cases and all cases of a serious or complicated nature, the Judge ought to read over the evidence in extenso to the jury. REG. v. FATTECHAND VASTACHAND . . 5 Bom. Cr. 85

4. ——— Duty of Judge in charging jury. In delivering a charge to the jury it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to call the attention of the jury to the facts and then to leave it to them to consider whether, from the facts, they conclude that a particular criminal act was done, and if they so conclude, then to direct them that the case comes within a particular section of the Code. 5. ——— Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861), s. 255. In this case the Court was of opinion that the Judge's charge to the jury was not a summing up for the prosecution and defence such as is prescribed by s. 255, Act XXV of 1861. 6. ——— Explaining the law. In charging a jury it is incumbent on the Judge to explain the law to them in order to assist them in applying the law to the facts of the case. Mere reference to sections of the Penal Code defining the offences is not sufficient. ABBAS PEADA v. QUEEN-EMPRESS

7. ——— Law bearing on case—Presumption of innocence. A Judge's charge to the jury should consist only of a summing up of all the evidence, and a showing how the law applies to it. Where facts are as consistent with a prisoner's innocence as with his guilt, innocence must be presumed; and criminal intent or knowledge is not necessarily imputable to every man who acts contrary to the provisions of the law. QUEEN v. NOBOKRISTO GHOSE . 8 W. R. Cr. 87

8. ——— Charge when there is no evidence. Where there is no evidence against a prisoner, the Judge ought to charge the jury for an acquittal, and not leave the jury to say whether the prisoner is guilty or not. QUEEN v. GREEDHARY MANJEE . . 7 W. R. Cr. 39

9. ——— Where a summing up of a Judge to a jury points out to the jury the principal features of the evidence as regards both the case of the Crown and the defence of the prisoners, it complies with the requisition of the Code of Criminal Procedure. QUEEN v. SHEPPARD

10. ——— Omission to sum up evidence—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 379. Where the provisions of s. 379 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1861, were neglected, and the Judge did not sum up the evidence at all, a new trial was ordered. Queen v. *Elahi Bax, B. 11. ——— Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 379. Under s. 379 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, a Judge should sum up the evidence on both sides before requiring the jury to deliver their verdict. Under s. 439, however, the High Court thought it unnecessary to set aside a conviction in a case in which this was not done. QUEEN v. SITWA alias SITARAM

13. ——— Statement of Judge's own opinion. A Sessions Judge in summing up is bound to advise a jury on questions of fact, and may tell the jury the impression which the evidence has made upon his own mind. QUEEN v. DWARKANATH SEN . . . . 13 W. R. Cr. 34

14. ——— A Judge may give the jury his opinion of the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, if he shows them clearly that the decision rests with them. QUEEN v. ABDOOL JULEEL . . . . W. R. 1864, Cr. 5

15. ——— A Judge in directing a jury should confine himself to a general commentary on the evidence and a statement of the legal offence proved, should such evidence be credited. He should not give a positive opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused person. QUEEN v. BHARUT CHUNDER . 1 W. R. Cr. 2
QUEEN v. GUNGA BISHEN . 1 W. R. Cr. 26

16. ——— Judge's opinion as to certain portion of evidence. It is open to a Judge in charging the jury to express his opinion as to the effect of a certain portion of the evidence; but he should always be careful to add that it is for the jury to form their own opinion. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BEPIN BISWAS . I. L. R. 10 Calc. 970

17. ——— Expression of opinion by Judge upon questions of fact—Charge to the jury, form of. Sub-s. (2) of s. 298 of the Code of Criminal Procedure allows a Judge to express to the jury his own opinion upon any questions of fact, provided that he leaves the decision upon the questions of fact entirely to the jury. The tendency of the charge as a whole ought to be to give a correct direction to the mind of the jury. Queen v. Gagalu, 6 B. L. R. Ap. 50 ; 12 W. R. Cr. 80, referred to. RAHAMAT ALI v. EMPRESS the substance of the charge against a prisoner, and which the jury themselves have to enquire into and arrive at as their verdict, ought not to be allowed to go to the jury, and still less so when the person does not orally depose before the jury, but his evidence is presented to them in the form of a written deposition. 20. ——— Different trials for same crime—Fresh charge to jury. When different trials are held at different times and against different prisoners in respect of the same crime, a new charge to each jury should be delivered in each case. 21. ——— Sessions Judge—Jury—Summing up—Defective direction—Contentions placed before the Jury—Judge should not omit pointedly to call attention of the jury to matters of prime importance, especially if they favour the accused. A Sessions Judge, in summing up, is entitled to have regard to the elaboration and skill with which the rival contentions have been placed before the jury by the advocates on both sides, but he should not in doing so omit pointedly to call the attention of the jury to matters of prime importance, especially if they favour the accused, merely because they have been discussed by the advocate. EMPEROR v. MALGOWDA BASGOWDA (1902) . . . I. L. R. 27 Bom. 644

22. ——— *Jury—Heads of charge—Contents of, and time of recording heads of charge—Misdirection of Jury—Omission to read whole of the depositions of witnesses—Omission to direct Jury to draw a "presumption" against the prosecution, when certain witnesses were not called—Direction in rioting cases—Oral proof of statements by witnesses to the police—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 162, 297, and 367—Circular Orders of the High Court, Chap. It is not necessary that the heads of charge to the jury should be reduced to writing before delivery of the charge, but they ought to be written as soon as possible thereafter and when the facts are fresh in the Judge's mind. The heads of charge should represent with absolute accuracy the substance of the charge, and be such as to enable the High Court on appeal to see distinctly, whether the case was fairly and properly placed before the jury. Circular Orders of the High Court, Chap. I, Order 59, referred to. It is not incumbent on the Judge to read the whole of the depositions of the witnesses to the jury. the Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 114, Ill. (g), that their evidence would be unfavourable to the Crown, if he has pointed out that the jury might properly draw any inference they pleased from such omission. S. 141 of the Penal Code is sufficiently explained to the jury, if the Judge has told them that, if five persons go in a body with the common object of murdering a man, and if he is killed in the prosecution of the common object, then, no matter who struck the fatal blow, all are equally guilty of murder under ss. $\frac{302}{149}$ of the Penal Code. S. 162 of the present Criminal Procedure Code prohibits the use of the record of the statement of a witness taken under s. 161 as evidence, but does not override the general provisions of the Evidence Act as to proof of such statement by oral evidence, and such statement is admissible under s. 157 of the Act in corroboration of the evidence of the witness given at the trial. 2. MISDIRECTION.

1. _____ Misdirection. In giving a warning to a jury not to disbelieve a mass of otherwise consistent evidence, because in one or two minor and immaterial points the witnesses made different statements, a Judge exercises a wise discretion, and affords no ground for the objection of misdirection to the jury. QUEEN v. BUSTEE KHAN . . . . . 1 W. R. Cr. 17

2. _____ Omission to direct on important point. In considering whether a Judge has misdirected the jury, the tenor and general effect of the whole summing up should be looked at, and if, upon the whole summing up, the Court is of opinion that substantially the proper direction has been given to the jury, it will not interfere, though the Judge has omitted to direct the jury expressly on some important point. REG. v. PURTANJI DINSHA . . . . 10 Bom. 75

3. _____ Omission to aid jury as to facts—Finding on fact by Judge. A summing up to the jury in which the Sessions Judge gave no aid to the jury in the arrangement of the facts which were spoken to by the witnesses, and himself found facts which he should have put to the jury, was pronounced defective, and a verdict founded thereon was set aside and the prisoner ordered to be released. QUEEN v. RAM GOPAL DHUR . . . . 10 W. R. Cr. 7

4. _____ Omission to call attention of jury to evidence of witnesses for defence.

In summing up a case to the jury, the Judge omitted to call their attention to the evidence of the witnesses for the defence. This evidence appeared to the High Court to be untrustworthy. Held, that the summing up was not defective on account of this omission on the part of the Judge. In the matter of the petition of ROCHIA MOHATO. EMPRESS v. ROCHIA MOHATO

5. _____ Judge stating what facts are proved—Erroneous view of law—Evidence Act, s. 103—Onus of proof—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 537. It is the province of the jury, and not of the Judge, to say what facts are or are not proved. Where a Judge in giving charge to the jury, after stating certain facts, said : "Hence the reasons given" (in the deed for its execution) "turn out to be false" : Held, that the Judge should have left it to the jury to form their own conclusion. When there has been a material misdirection in a charge to a jury, it is not covered by s. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Judge, in stating to the jury that under s. 103 of the Evidence Act the onus may be said to lie on the accused, to show that the deed in respect of which he was charged with forgery was genuine, took an erroneous view of the law and misdirected the jury. *Empress v. 6. _____ Duty of Judge—Omission to explain law as bearing on the facts. Per FIELD, J. It is the duty of a Judge to give a direction upon the law to the jury so far as to make them understand the law as bearing upon the facts ; and if he does not give them an explanation of the law sufficiently comprehensive to enable them to decide the particular issue, it is a misdirection. In the matter of the petition of JHUBBOO MAHTON. 7. _____ Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 297, 423 (d)—Effect of omission to explain the law to jury—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 142, 147, 380, 395—Practice. In a trial by jury, the accused were charged with offences under the Penal Code. The Judge, while charging the jury, omitted to explain the law by which they were to be guided. The jury returned a verdict of guilty on all counts except one, and the Judge, agreeing with the verdict, convicted the accused. Held, that the omission to explain the law to the jury amounted to a misdirection vitiating the verdict within the meaning of s. 423 (d), Criminal Procedure Code. Wajadar Khan v. *Queen Empress, I. CHARGE TO JURY—contd.

2. MISDIRECTION—contd.

8. _____ Case under cl. 26, Letters Patent, 1865—Charge to jury, misunderstanding of. Mere misunderstanding on the part of bystanders in Court, or counsel engaged in a case, of expressions used by a Judge in charging a jury (where it appears that the expressions used by the Judge were such as ought to have been understood by any reasonable man, having regard to what was proved in the case, and what was said to the jury afterwards), will not constitute misdirection. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SHIB CHUNDER MITTER I. L. R. 10 Calc. 1079

9. _____ Omission to point out weakness of evidence for prosecution—Error of law. The omission of a Judge to point out to the jury the weakness of the evidence against the accused and the possibility of other persons being the guilty parties does not amount to a positive misdirection. In a case where there was some evidence to go to the jury, and no error in law was committed, the Court cannot interfere. QUEEN v. CHOONEE . . . . 5 W. R. Cr. 13

10. _____ Omission to call attention to fact in favour of accused. Three persons, who were attacked and wounded in an affray, informed the police on the same day that the persons who had attacked them were A, B, and C. Eighteen days afterwards the same complainants gave to the Magistrate enquiring into the case the names of four other persons who, they said, with the three persons first accused, formed the attacking party. The seven accused were tried jointly for the offence before the Additional Recorder of Rangoon and a jury. In his charge to the jury the Additional Recorder omitted to call their attention to the fact that four out of the seven accused had not been mentioned by the prosecutors until after eighteen days had passed over. The prisoners were convicted. Held, that the Additional Recorder misdirected the jury; that under the circumstances the misdirection prejudiced the four persons last accused; and that the verdict must be set aside as far as they were concerned. LEIU TU v. QUEEN-EMPRESS . . . I. L. R. 11 Calc. 10

11. _____ Omission to state the defence of accused, whether a misdirection. Where the charge to the jury places prominently before the jury all the circumstances that go against the accused, but does not call their attention to any of those that are in their favour, and especially when it omits to tell the jury what the defence of the accused is, there has been a misdirection sufficient to vitiate the trial. Leiu Tu v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 10, referred to. RAHAMAT ALI v. EMPRESS . . 4 C. W. N. 196

12. _____ Admission of inadmissible evidence—Prejudice to prisoner—Re-trial. Where a Judge in his charge to the jury admitted, as receivable evidence, a hearsay statement against the accused, and also an anonymous letter which was put in without an attempt to show how or by whom it was sent, it was held that the jury had been misdirected and the accused prejudiced. The High Court on this, not being able to say positively, on a perusal of the evidence, that the accused was innocent, did not dispose of the case, but ordered a new trial. QUEEN v. CHUNDER KOOMAR MOZOOMDAR . . . . 24 W. R. Cr. 77

13. _____ Erroneous direction as to corroboration of accomplice's evidence. Held, in a case of murder, that the Judge had not given a proper direction to the jury in telling them that it was for them to consider whether the evidence of the accomplice was strictly corroborated as to the prisoners; that it was not enough that the evidence should disclose a state of facts consistent with the possibility of the truth of the accomplice's story; and that the Judge ought to have gone through the history of the crime as detailed by the accomplices, to point out any independent evidence proving facts showing that the prisoners were or must have been present at or cognizant of the murder. QUEEN v. KAROO . 6 W. R. Cr. 44
QUEEN v. KHOTUB SHEIKH . 6 W. R. Cr. 17

14. _____ Erroneous direction where evidence of accomplice is uncorroborated. Held, that, where the evidence of an accomplice is uncorroborated, the correct practice requires a Sessions Judge not merely to tell the jury that it is unusual to convict on such evidence, but that he should also tell them that it is unsafe, and contrary both to prudence and practice, to do so; yet that his omission to state this does not amount to an error in law. Reg. v. Inam, 3 Bom. Cr. 57, commented on. REG. v. GANU BIN DHAROJI 6 Bom. Cr. 57

15. _____ Erroneous direction where evidence of approver is uncorroborated. Conviction and sentence set aside (GLOVER, J., dissenting) as to two of the prisoners on the ground that there was a misdirection to the jury, because the Judge in summing up omitted to advise the jury not to convict upon the uncorroborated evidence of an approver, and because he treated as corroborative that which was no corroboration in law. QUEEN v. NAWAB JAN . . 8 W. R. Cr. 19

16. _____ Criminal Procedure Code, s. 297—Evidence of accomplice—Corroboration. A Judge should caution a jury not to accept the evidence of an approver unless it is corroborated: the omission to do so amounts to misdirection. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ARUMUGA I. L. R. 12 Mad. 196

17. _____ *Corroboration—Improper reception of evidence—Accomplice—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 114, ill. CHARGE TO JURY—contd.

2. MISDIRECTION—contd.

The accused being upon his trial at the Sessions for murder, the two principal witnesses for the prosecution were G and M, to whom pardons were tendered by the committing Magistrate under s. 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and who had accepted the pardons. The Judge read to the jury statements (which had not been admitted in evidence) by G and M purporting to have been taken under s. 364. Held, that the improper reception of such evidence constituted a decision erroneous in point of law calculated to prejudice the prisoner. The Judge further charged the jury that they were not to convict upon the evidence of G if satisfied that he was an accomplice and uncorroborated, but coupled the direction with a strong expression of opinion that G was not an accomplice. Held, that this constituted a misdirection in fact, though not in form, calculated seriously to prejudice the prisoner's case. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. O'HARA

I. L. R. 17 Calc. 642

18. _____ Omission to tell jury that evidence is inadmissible—Material error. Held (WARDEN, J., dissentiente), that the omission of the Sessions Judge to tell the jury that the statement of one prisoner is not evidence against his fellow-prisoner is a material error, and one fatal to the trial, notwithstanding that the Sessions Judge dealt with the evidence against each of the prisoners separately. REG. v. MIYA VALAD DAUD

6 Bom. Cr. 10

19. _____ Confession of accused—Subsequently retracted—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 103—Search by police of stolen property. It cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by a prisoner cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence. A jury should be asked with reference to such confessions, not whether they were corroborated by independent evidence, but whether, having regard to the circumstances under which they were made and retracted and all the circumstances connected with them, it was more probable that the original confessions or the statements retracting them were true. Criminal Procedure Code, s. 103, does not justify the view that the persons called upon to witness a search are to be selected by any person other than the officer conducting the search. If the Sessions Judge considers that the evidence of an Inspector of Police is necessary, he ought not to animadvert on his absence in charging the jury; but he should intimate his opinion to the Public Prosecutor and give him the opportunity of calling that official. It is wrong for a Judge in charging the jury to say that a head constable committed a breach of the police regulations in conducting a search with a loose shirt on, without examining him on the matter and taking evidence as to whether or not his body was examined, before he began the search. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAMAN I. L. R. 21 Mad. 83

2. MISDIRECTION—contd.

20. _____ Retracted confessions—Misdirection as to admissibility of such confessions without corroborative evidence—Error in mode of treating evidence. The accused were tried for murder. The Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury discussed the evidence generally, describing it as very poor evidence which, standing alone, amounted to nothing. He also told the jury that, as regards retracted confessions, "the law is that you are to look for corroboration in independent evidence." If that supplies such corroboration that you can confidently say, "the confessions must be absolutely true, you can act upon them, otherwise not." Held, that the charge was defective. The Sessions Judge ought to have summed up the evidence to the jury calling their attention to the material parts of it, and leaving them to form their own opinion on it, instead of treating it generally. Held, also, that the Judge had misdirected the jury, as there is no rule of law that a retracted confession cannot be treated as evidence unless it is corroborated in material particulars by independent reliable evidence. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. GANGIA

21. _____ Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 342—Consideration of document purporting to be proved by statement of accused under that section. A gap in the evidence for the prosecution cannot be filled up by any statement made by the accused in his examination under s. 342 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It is a misdirection to ask the jury to consider a document, purporting to be proved by such a statement, as evidence against the accused. BASANTA KUMAR GHATTAK v. QUEEN-EMPRESS

22. _____ Acquittal—Verdict and order of acquittal—Appeal against acquittal. In a charge, against an Inspector of Salt and Abkari, of extortion and bribery, in a Court of Session, the first witness for the prosecution deposed that, when he complained to the accused of delays which were taking place in weighing salt, the accused told him he ought to make the customary present of R100 or R50, according to the amount of salt to be weighed. The witness stated that he had refused to pay the bribe at that time, but that on the following day, when the accused stated that the weighing would only be properly proceeded with if the present were made, he consented, and the accused agreed to send his peon (who was charged with abetment) for the money. According to the witness, the peon came to the shop and was paid R50 by his accountant by his order and in his presence, and in the presence of two other persons who were in the employment of the witness. The prosecution evidence, if true, only showed that these two other persons had witnessed the transactions without taking any part in it. The accountant and the other two persons were called and gave evidence, as second, third and fourth witnesses respectively, for the prosecution. Some entries in account books were relied on in support of the oral evidence of the witnesses, but they were challenged by the accused as false entries and they were, in fact, discredited by the High Court. The writer of them was called as the fifth prosecution witness, and they had been made after the alleged transaction was over. The Sessions Judge, in his charge to the jury, warned them against accepting the evidence of accomplices without corroboration in material particulars. He said that the first and second witnesses were certainly accomplices, and that the third, fourth and fifth witnesses had put themselves practically in the same position as accomplices and that their evidence also required corroboration before the jury could act on it. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the Sessions Judge acquitted the accused. Upon an appeal being preferred by the Public Prosecutor against the acquittal on the ground of misdirection: Held, that the description of the third, fourth and fifth witnesses was a misdirection. 23. ——— Approver's evidence—Duty of Judge—Corroboration—Retrial—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 297, 298 and 337. A Sessions Judge, in laying the evidence of an approver before the jury, stated in his charge: "If you think that the approver's story is worthy of credit in itself, you have to consider whether it has been corroborated on material points," and then, after describing what in his opinion were "the points of corroboration," told the jury that "the above are the points on which the evidence has been corroborated, and that corroboration is full and complete, if you believe it. You have to consider these points and decide whether the approver has been corroborated in material points, and, if you find that to be so, then you have in his story sufficient evidence to connect all three accused with the crime." Held, that this was not a proper way to place the case before the jury. The Sessions Judge should have told the jury that, although the law permitted them to convict on the uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice, it was not the practice of our Courts, which have consistently held that it was not safe or proper to convict on such evidence without some corroboration sufficient to connect each of the accused with the offence committed. With this caution, the Sessions Judge should have laid before the jury the evidence corroborating the statement of the accomplice. The nature of the corroborative evidence must be confirmatory of some of the leading circumstances of the story of the approver as against the particular prisoner. Circumstances, under which a new trial should or should not be ordered on account of a defective summing up with reference to the weight of evidence, pointed out. *Elahee Buksh, 5 W. R. 24. ——— Inadmissible evidence—Sessions Judge—Inadmissible evidence—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 418, 423 (2). Where a charge to the jury by the Sessions Judge is, upon the whole, favourable to the accused, and most of the points of importance in favour of the accused are more or less dealt with in the charge, the mere fact that some of the points are not so amplified as they might have been does not amount to a misdirection. Before the High Court can interfere with the verdict of a jury on the ground that the evidence of accused's confession was wrongly admitted, it must be satisfied, first, that the verdict is erroneous; secondly, that the erroneousness was caused either by the Judge's misdirection to the jury as to that evidence or by a misunderstanding on their part of the law as to it as laid down by the Judge. Where material evidence, which ought not to be admitted, is admitted, and the jury are placed in possession of it, there is an error in law in the trial under s. 418 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), and there is a misdirection of law when the Judge tells the jury that it is evidence which they can consider and on which they can, if they think proper, convict the accused. The fact that, after putting the jury in possession of the inadmissible evidence, the Judge in his charge goes on also to point out circumstances which would justify the jury in disbelieving the wrongly admitted evidence, does not make the misdirection less a misdirection. Where evidence which the law says shall not be admitted is let in with other evidence legally admissible, and where the former is of a material character, it would be mere speculative refinement to hold that the jury must have, in convicting the accused, relied upon the latter and rejected the former. The law bearing on the case has been placed before you more than once in the addresses delivered by the learned pleaders on either side. I need not go into detail as to the law, therefore." Held, that it was immaterial how much or how often the jury may have been addressed by the pleaders on both sides upon the law. The responsibility of laying down the law for the guidance of the jury rested entirely with the Judge, and a verdict arrived at by the jury in the absence of any such direction

An omission to do so is not a mere irregularity within the meaning of s. 537. It is a failure to comply with an express provision of the law and will vitiate the conviction. The Judge should also point out to the jury the evidence against each of the accused and the circumstances which distinguish the cases of some of the accused from that of the others. Mangan Das v. *Emperor, I. 28. _____ Trial by Jury—Misdirection—Expression of opinion by Judge on facts—Omission to point out material evidence—Charge, heads of—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 325. An expression of opinion by the Judge on the facts without telling the jury that they are at liberty to form their own opinion in regard thereto, and also without cautioning them to give the accused the benefit of a reasonable doubt, amounts to a misdirection. Where the medical opinion was that the injuries of the deceased were not, in the case of a man in ordinary health, dangerous to life : Held, that the Judge should have specially called the attention of the jury to such opinion. Where the accused were charged under ss. 147, $\frac{147}{304}$, $\frac{149}{325}$, $\frac{149}{323}$ of the Indian Penal Code : Held, that they could not be convicted under s. 325 of the Penal Code as they had not been called upon to meet such a charge, and it was not minor to, or included in, a charge under s. $\frac{149}{325}$ of the Code. Ram Sarup Rai v. *Emperor, 6 C. 1. _____ Alibi, proof of—Erroneous direction as to admissibility of document. Upon a plea of alibi by the prisoners that they had left Patna on the 12th April 1869, and reached Port Canning on the 20th of the same month, and were not at Patna on the 30th May, the prosecutor adduced in evidence a written statement engrossed on two pieces of stamp paper, one bearing the endorsement of a stamp-vendor as sold on the 13th, and the other on the 18th April, filed on the 20th April, and alleged to bear the verification of the prisoners. No evidence was adduced to prove that the prisoners had signed it. The Judge drew the attention of the jurors to this document, and adverted to it in these terms : "If the written statement was drawn up on an earlier date than the date it bears, it could not have been prepared earlier than the day on which the principal stamp was bought,—i.e., 18th." Held, that the document should not have been received in evidence, and that there was a misdirection which contributed materially towards the jury finding the prisoner guilty. 5. ——— Dacoity—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 423—Setting aside verdict of the jury—Power of Appellate Court to deal with the case—Charge under Penal Code, ss. 395, 412. It is the duty of the Judge to call the attention of the jury to the different elements constituting the offence and to deal with the evidence by which it is proposed to make the accused liable. Failure to do so amounts to misdirection. Queen-Empress v. Balya Somya, I. L. R. 15 Bom. 369, followed. Statements by some of the accused persons which do not amount to a confession, and which do not in any way incriminate them, are not admissible in evidence against any persons other than those making them. Omission to direct the jury that in dealing with the evidence against the accused other than those making the statements they are not to take into consideration such statements also amounts to misdirection. If the verdict of the jury is set aside on any of the grounds mentioned in cl. (d) of s. 423 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), then there is no restriction on the powers of the Appellate Court to deal with a case of which it has complete seizin in any of the manners provided in that section. It was proved that the endorsement of registration which appeared on the document was a forgery. In his charge to the jury the Sessions Judge omitted to deal with the fact of the accused being in possession of the property. He also directed that the registration endorsement having been proved to be a forgery, it was for the accused persons to establish the genuineness of the document. Held, that the Sessions Judge, in omitting to deal with the fact of the possession of the accused, and in throwing the onus of proving the genuineness of the document upon them, had misdirected the jury. The charge was that the girl was kidnapped in order that she might be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse. As to this, it is sufficient to say that no other inference is possible under the circumstances. When a man carries off a young girl at night from her father's house, the presumption is that he did so with the intent indicated above. It would be open to him, if he had admitted the kidnapping, to prove that he had some other object, but no other object is apparent on the face of the facts." Held, that this amounted to a misdirection of the jury. The question of intent was a pure question of fact, but the way in which it had been put to the jury left them no option but adopt the view taken by the Judge. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. HUGHES I. L. To support a charge under the latter part of s. 475 of the Penal Code it is necessary for the prosecution to prove (1) that the accused was in possession of the papers referred to in the charge; (2) that the devices or marks were counterfeited on them; (3) that the marks were such as are used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in s. 467; and (4) that the accused intended that the marks should be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to documents either then forged or thereafter to be forged. The accused was charged with being in possession of forged documents, an offence punishable under ss. 474 and 475 of the Penal Code. In his summing up, the Sessions Judge, after stating that the documents were admitted by the defence to be forgeries, told the jury that the only issue they had to decide was whether the forged documents were in the possession of the accused, and whether the nature of one, at all events, of the documents was such as to connect them with the accused, being the kind of document he would be likely to have in his house and he alone; and that, if they found this issue in the affirmative, they must return a verdict of guilty. Held, that the charge to the jury was defective and misleading, and insufficiently complied with the requirements of s. 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. 16. ——— Rape—Erroneous verdict owing to misdirection—Failure of justice—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 418, 423 (d), and 537. On a charge of rape the Judge in his charge to the jury said: "You will observe that this sexual intercourse was against the girl's will and without her consent, etc.," instead of saying as he ought to have done, "you will have to determine upon the evidence in this case whether the intercourse was against the girl's will, etc.," and the charge went on in the same style of stating to the jury what had been proved instead of leaving it to them to decide what in their opinion was proved. In the concluding sentence of the charge the Judge said: "You have seen the witnesses, and I have no doubt that you will return a just verdict." Held, that such a charge amounted to a clear misdirection, and that the verdict was erroneous owing to such misdirection. Even the concluding sentence did not satisfy the requirements of a proper charge. The provisions in s. 423 (d) and s. 537 of the Criminal Procedure Code do not require that the Court is to go through the facts and find for itself whether the verdict is actually erroneous upon the facts. persons of the opposite party. Some of the accused who admitted their presence at the scene of the occurrence stated that they had been attacked on account of an allegation being made that one of the opposite party had enticed away another's wife, and that they had merely acted in self-defence. The case was tried before a jury, and on the close of the case for the prosecution the Sessions Judge, considering that possibly the common object alleged by the prosecution might be considered not to have been proved, amended the charge and added an alternative common object to it, viz., that the object of the assembly was to punish one of the opposite party for enticing away another's wife. There was no evidence on the record to prove the alternative common object, it being based solely on a portion of the statements of some of the accused, and the Sessions Judge put it to the jury that it was an inference that could possibly be drawn from the evidence, but it was for them to draw that inference or not. The jury convicted all the accused without specifying which common object they relied on, and were not asked, under s. 303 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, any questions for the purpose of ascertaining what their verdict was based on. Held, that the Judge had misdirected the jury, and that the verdict of the jury leaving it uncertain what was the common object which actuated the accused, was bad in law, and that the conviction must be set aside and the case re-tried. Held, further, that it was unfair to use a part of the statements of some of the accused put forward in their defence as justifying the use of force by them in repelling the attack of the opposite party, for the purpose of showing a common object as against them, and that the statements should have been taken in their entirety and could not in any event be used as against the rest of the accused. The Sessions Judge in his charge to the jury merely directed them to find whether the property was stolen, and whether it was retained by the accused. Held, that the charge was defective, and amounted to a misdirection. The Sessions Judge should have directed the jury to find (i) whether the property was stolen; (ii) whether it was dishonestly retained; and (iii) whether the accused knew or had reason to believe the same to be stolen property. 1. ——— The Trustees and Mortgagees Powers Act (XXVIII of 1866), s. 34—Non-applicability to Charitable Trusts—Indian Trusts Act (II of 1882), ss. 1, 2—Statute of Frauds (29 Ch. II, C. 3), s. 7—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 539—"Further or other relief", meaning of—Parsis—Conversion among Indian Zoroastrians—Juddins—Convert not entitled to certain religious and charitable institutions of Parsis. The Trustees and Mortgagees Powers Act (XXVIII of 1866) does not apply to Charitable Trusts. Section 2 of the Indian Trusts Act (II of 1882) expressly repeals amongst other sections s. 34 of the Trustees and Mortgagees Act. The Indian Trusts Act was made applicable to the Bombay Presidency in 1891, and since then at all events s. 34 has ceased to have any force. The saving clause in s. 1 of the Indian Trusts Act does not affect the repealing section which immediately follows and there is no saving or exception in favour of Charitable Trusts or of Trustees of properties dedicated to charity. S. 7 of the Statute of Frauds is wholly repealed by s. 2 of the Indian Trusts Act. S. 7 of the Statute of Frauds was mainly intended to regulate procedure. It never applied to India at any time; even if it did the Indian Evidence Act entirely superseded it:—Held by DAVAR, J., that s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is very limited in its scope and operation. It contemplates the institution of a suit to "obtain a decree" for reliefs which are strictly confined to five heads. The first branch of the suit clearly falls under the provisions of the section, for the plaintiffs have obtained a decree under three of the five provisions of the section, viz., (a) the appointment of new trustees, (b) vesting trust property in the trustees, and (c) settling a scheme. But the reliefs asked for in the second branch of the case, namely, the ascertainment and declaration of what are the trusts, the rectification of the trust-deeds, a declaration that the defendants have either wrongly declared the trust in the deeds or wrongly interpreted the trusts therein, do not fall under any of the five heads mentioned in the section. The words "further or other relief" that follow must necessarily be construed to refer to reliefs ejusdem generis and not to reliefs wholly outside those specifically defined under these five heads. A suit brought not to establish a public right in respect of a public trust, but to remedy a particular infringement of an individual right is not within s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882. S. 539 contemplates a suit either in the name of the Advocate-General at the instance of relators, or a suit in the name of parties "having an interest in the trust" with the consent of the Advocate-General. The "interest" of the parties here contemplated must be the "interest" that is threatened or infringed. A well-established and ancient usage prevailing amongst a community must override such of the tenets of its religion as are shown to have fallen into desuetude and conflict with ancient usage prevailing in the community. Peshotam Hormasji Dustoor v. Meherbai, I. L. R. 13 Bom. 302, and Bai Shirinbai v. Kharshedji, 22 Bom. 430, followed. Although the conversions of Juddins is permissible amongst Zoroastrians, such conversions are entirely unknown to the Zoroastrian community in India; and far from being customary or usual for it to convert a Juddin, the Zoroastrian community of India has never attempted, encouraged or permitted the conversion of Juddins to Zoroastrianism. Even if an entire alien—a Juddin—is duly admitted into the Zoroastrian religion after satisfying all conditions and undergoing all necessary ceremonies, he or she would not, as a matter of right, be entitled to the use and benefits of the funds and institutions under the defendants' management and control; these were founded and endowed only for the members of the Parsi community; and the Parsi community consists of Parsis who are descended from the original Persian emigrants, and who are born of both Zoroastrian parents, and who profess the Zoroastrian religion, the Iranis from Persia professing the Zoroastrian religion, who came to India either temporarily or permanently, and the children of Parsi fathers by alien mothers who have been duly and properly admitted into the religion. Held per BEAMAN, J., that the decision of a suit under section 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is not only binding on the parties to it, but to all persons affected by it. The expression "such further or other relief" in the section means such further or other relief as, from the nature of the introductory words and the exemplificatory cases, appears to the Court to be appropriate in such a suit, e.g., removing fraudulent trustees, restraining a breach of trust, and so forth. Any extension or limitation of the scope of a trust so as to exclude those who were intended to be included or to include those who were intended to be excluded, is a breach of trust. The Zoroastrian religion does admit and enjoin conversion. The Indian Zoroastrian while theoretically adhering to their ancient religion and consistently avowing its principal tenets, including, of course, the merit of conversion as a theological dogma, erected about themselves real caste barriers, and gradually fell under the influence of the caste idea, till, in modern popular language, it has found current expression in the term Parsi,

which now seems to have as distinctly a caste meaning and as essentially a caste connotation as that used to denominate any other great Indian caste. In the Zoroastrian community, while the religion and its ritual purity are still the mainspring of the communal life, they are so intimately bound up with the exclusiveness and the purity of the tribe or caste, that they have become practically identical. It is therefore fairly accurate to describe the Indian Zoroastrians as Parsis—thereby implying a caste, or communal, or tribal organisation. Conversion, in the abstract at any rate, and as a theoretical religious tenet, was perfectly familiar to the Parsi community, not only in the remote past but in our own time. It was not the intention of the founders of the trusts in question to extend their benefits to any one who was not in the most rigid caste-sense Parsi, that is, born into the community of the Indian Zoroastrians and born of an Indian Zoroastrian father. 2. ——— Right to retain cargo for amount of bill for freight dishonoured. M chartered a ship to load a cargo at Cardiff and proceed therewith to Madras, the freight to be paid in London on unloading and right delivery of the cargo; one-third by M's acceptance at three months from the sailing of the ship (the same to be returned if the cargo were not duly delivered), and the remainder by like bill at three months from the date of delivery in London of the certificate of right delivery of the cargo. The charter-party provided for payment of a commission on the contract, ship lost or not lost, that the £150 should be advanced in cash at the port of discharge on account of the freight against the captain's draft on M. The cargo was loaded accordingly, a bill of lading was given for the same, and the ship sailed from Cardiff on the 8th October 1863, M having consigned the cargo to A & Co., who carried on business at Madras. On the same day the owners drew a bill on M at three months for £261 1*s.* 10*d.*, being one-third of the freight. On the 10th October 1863, the general agents in London of A. & Co. advanced to M, on A & Co.'s account and out of their funds, £700, received as security for such advance the bill of lading blank, and endorsed and forwarded the bill to A & Co. On the 29th October 1863, M accepted the bill for £261 1*s.* 10*d.*, and in the following December he suspended payment, and the bill was protested. On the 14th January 1864, the ship arrived at Madras, and thereupon A & Co., as holders of the bill of lading, applied for the delivery of the cargo, and offered to advance the £150 in cash pursuant to the charter-party, but the captain claimed to retain the cargo for the value of the dishonoured bill and the balance of freight due. Held, that the terms of the contract were at variance with the right of lien so claimed, and that it was not suspended by the bill, nor revived by the freighters' insolvency. 3. ——— Freight—Bill of lading—Liability of master where quantity signed for is more than cargo shipped. The plaintiff chartered a ship of which he was master, to one C H C, of Calcutta, under a charter-party, by which it was agreed that the ship (which was then at Melbourne) should proceed to certain ports and there load a cargo for Calcutta, "the cargo to be delivered to the charterer at Calcutta, on being paid freight at and after the rate of the lump sum of £1,150 for the full reach of the ship; the said freight to be paid on the unloading and right delivery of the cargo as customary, less any advances that may have been made." On the arrival of the ship at Calcutta, C H C requested the plaintiff to deliver the cargo to the defendants as his agents, which the plaintiff agreed to do on having payment of the freight guaranteed by the defendants. The defendants were bonâ fide holders of the bills of lading which had been signed by the plaintiff in respect of the cargo. They sent to the agents of the plaintiff in Calcutta the following letter: "As it will be necessary for us for the protection of our interests to get delivery of the cargo, and as we do not care about further trouble in the matter, we agree to guarantee payment of the balance of freight due on the charter-party, less any claims for short delivery," etc. On unloading there was found to be a deficiency in quantity between the goods mentioned in the bills of lading and those actually shipped and delivered. Held, that, notwithstanding this, the plaintiff was entitled to the whole of the freight specified in the charter-party, and was justified in keeping the cargo until the freight was paid. 4. ——— Conditions precedent—"Now on her passage"—Breach of warranty—Principal and agent—Undisclosed principal. The plaintiffs entered into a contract of charter-party with the defendants, whereby it was agreed between them and the defendants, acting for the owners, "that the steamer Atholl, now on her passage to Calcutta, being tight, staunch, and strong, etc., shall receive on board from the charterers a complete cargo of merchandise, to consist of 700 tons dead weight, and being so laden shall therewith proceed to London with liberty to call for any legal purpose at any intermediate port or ports; freight to be paid on the above cargo on right delivery of the same at and after the rate of £4-2-6 per ton; charters to have the option of cancelling the charter-party, if the steamer has not arrived in Calcutta on 15th April 1871." The defendants signed the charter-party as "agents of steamer Atholl." The steamer was not, at the time the charter-party was entered into, on her way to Calcutta, being then in the port of London, and she did not start for some days after the date of the charter-party. She touched at Madras and Colombo on her way, and did not arrive in Calcutta until 11th April. Rates of freight having declined since the middle of March, at which time, it was alleged, the steamer ought to have arrived, the plaintiff sued the defendants for damages. Held the defendants were liable. The statement in the charter-party that the steamer was on her passage to Calcutta was a condition precedent. SCHILLER v. FINLAY may safely get, and deliver the same always afloat," the master is not bound to sign bills of lading for or to sail to, a port where the vessel cannot, by reason of her draught of water, lie and discharge "always afloat" without being previously lightened, even if the cost of the requisite lightening would, by the charter-party, fall on the charterers. By the terms of a charter-party a vessel was to take in a full cargo at Bombay, and therewith proceed to a "safe port in the Mediterranean (Spanish ports excluded), as ordered on signing bills of lading, or so near thereunto as she may safely get, and deliver the same to the said charterers or their assignees always afloat." Marseilles was at first named as the port of discharge, but subsequently the vessel was ordered to Cette, a French port a little to the west of Marseilles ; and bills of lading, made out for Cette, were tendered to the master for signature. The master refused to sign the bills of lading or sail for Cette. The vessel's draught of water when loaded was such that she could not have entered or lain afloat in Cette harbour without discharging a portion of her cargo. The cost of lightening the vessel by lighters outside the habour would, under the charter-party, fall on the charterers, and they were willing to incur the expenses necessary for that purpose. Held, that it was no breach of the charter-party by the master to refuse to sail to Cette, or to sign bills of lading for that port. 6. ——— Principal and agent—Charter-party signed by agents for master and owner—Parties to suit—Liability of master—Liability of Agents—Master of ship, the agent of charterer, to sign bill of lading—Right of master to recover from charterers sums paid by master as damages for short delivery of cargo—Appropriation of payments—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 69, 230, 235. By a charter-party, dated 20th September 1880, F, M & Co., as agents for master and owner, let the steam-ship Hutton to E, for a term of not less than three and not more than four months, for the sum of R15,000 per month, payable in advance. By subsequent agreement the term was extended to 30th March 1881, and the charterer was to pay at the rate of R18,000 a month for the extended time. On 27th February 1881, the ship being about to proceed on her last voyage to Calcutta, and thence to Bombay, E, finding himself unable to pay more than R6,000 out of the sum of R18,000, which was then due as hire for the month ending 9th March 1881, requested the plaintiff to pay F, M & Co. on his behalf the remaining R12,000. The plaintiffs did so in consideration of an agreement, whereby E assigned to them all the freight payable to E and all benefits under the said charter-party in respect of the then intended voyage of the Hutton. It was also agreed between the plaintiffs and E that the said ship should be consigned to the plaintiffs at Calcutta and also to them at Bombay, and that the plaintiffs should receive all the freight, passage-money, etc., to be recovered for the said voyage, the plaintiffs charging two per cent. commission on the gross value of the freight shipped in Calcutta and two per cent. on the amount of freight collected by them in Bombay, and interest on the said sum of R12,000 at the rate of nine per cent. per annum. Due notice of this agreement was given to F, M & Co. On the 11th March, E, being unable to pay the R6,000, requested the plaintiffs to pay that sum to F, M & Co. on his behalf, which the plaintiffs did,—E agreeing that the said payment should be on the same terms as those on which the R12,000 had been paid. The ship, having proceeded to Calcutta, returned with cargo to Bombay, where she arrived on 2nd April 1881. F, M & Co., as agents for master and owner, refused to allow the plaintiffs to collect the freight payable in Bombay and collected it themselves. The plaintiffs brought his suit, in the first instance, against the owner and the master of the Hutton (first and second defendants), praying for an account of the moneys received by the defendants or their agents in respect of the freight, and for payment of the balance found due after deducting the sums properly payable to the defendants for hire of the ship and for R400 damages sustained by the plaintiffs by reason of the wrongful act of the defendants, whereby the plaintiffs had been deprived of the two per cent. commission. The plaintiffs alleged that the balance due to them would be about R9,500. The first defendant did not appear. The second defendant (the master) contended that he was not liable ; that F, M & Co. had been especially appointed as agents of the owner ; that they were not his (the master's) agents ; and that they had no authority to sign the charter-party for him. He admitted that the sum of R12,000 had been paid to F, M & Co. by the plaintiffs as agents for the owner ; but as to the R6,000, he denied that it had been paid to F, M & Co. on his account or on account of the owner. He further alleged that there was a large sum due by E in respect of hire of the ship and other proper claims against him under the charter-party, and that the defendants were, therefore, justified in refusing the demands of the plaintiffs as assignees of E until the whole of their claims against E were liquidated. He alleged that F, M & Co. had received the freight of the ship, amounting to R20,426, and he claimed a lien on this sum in respect of the sum of R19,282, due for hire and other charges on the said ship, and R605 for money paid for short delivery of goods. The plaintiffs subsequently made F, M & Co. defendants to the suit. In their written statement, F, M & Co. stated that they had signed the charter party as agents only and not as principals, and they contended that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against the first defendant and the second defendant, but must elect to proceed separately against either ; and, further, that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against themselves (F, M & Co.) and the second defendant, but should elect to proceed separately against either. They admitted the receipt of the R12,000 as agents for the first defendant, and not as agents of the second defendant. As to the R6,000, they alleged that it had been paid to them, not on account of the Hutton, but in respect of claims which they had against E in connection with the Clan Gordon, another ship which had been chartered by E. They admitted the receipt of the freight of the Hutton, amounting to R20,426, but claimed a lien on this sum in respect of hire and other proper charges due under the charter-party. Held, that the second defendant (the master) was not liable on the charter-party. He had given no authority to F, M & Co. to sign it as his agents ; and his conduct in acting under the charter-party, being referable to his character of, and duty as, master, did not amount to ratification. But inasmuch as he claimed to deduct from the freight received in Bombay sums which were paid either by him or to F, M & Co. for him, he was so far a proper party to the suit. Held, also, that, under s. 230 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), F, M & Co. were not liable as principals on the charter-party, as they appeared on the face of the charter-party to have signed merely as agents. But they were liable, under s. 235 of the Contract Act, for having untruly represented themselves to be the authorized agents of the master to enter on his behalf into the contract therein contained. Their liability was limited to the amount which could have been recovered from the master if he had really been their principal. No difference was made in their liability by the fact that the owner was also liable. As to the R6,000,—Held, on the evidence that the plaintiffs at the time of the payment had specifically appropriated this sum to the hire then due for the Hutton. Held, further, that the charter-party was one of the class known as "locatio navis et operarum magistri;" that under such a charter-party the master would, as between owner and charterer, sign bills of lading as agent of the charterer ; that as between the owner and the charterer the latter was liable to defray the damages for non-performance of the contracts contained in the bills of lading, including damages for short delivery of cargo ; and that, such being the liability of E as charterer, the plaintiffs as his assignees were bound by all the equities affecting him, so that the defendants might set off as against the plaintiffs whatever the owner of the Hutton might have set off against E if he had been the plaintiff. The second defendant (the master) alleged that he had paid in Bombay certain sums of money to consignees as damages for short delivery of cargo, and he claimed credit for such payments as against the plaintiffs. Held, that he had no power to bind E by making such payments on his behalf in Bombay, where both E and the plaintiffs were residents, without the consent either of E or of the plaintiffs. In order to establish these charges against E and his assignees (the plaintiffs), it was necessary for the defendants to prove either that they were in fact due, in which case the master would be justified in paying them under s. 69 of the Contract Act, or that their correctness had been admitted by E or his agents.

7. ——————— Misdescription of tonnage of ship—Misrepresentation in contract—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 10, 13, 14, 18, 19—Condition precedent. The defendants in Bombay chartered a ship from the plaintiffs, which was described in the charter-party as of the measurement of about 2,700—2,800 tons nett register. The ship had never been in Bombay, and was wholly unknown to the defendants. Evidence was given that in the negotiations for the charter-party the plaintiffs stated to the defendants that the ship was certainly not more than 2,800 tonnage register. She, however, turned out to be of the registered tonnage of 3,045 tons, and the defendants refused to accept her in fulfilment of the charter-party. Held, by PARSONS, J., that the defendants were entitled to treat the contract as void by reason of the erroneous statement of the plaintiffs with regard to the size of the ship. (Contract Act, IX of 1872, ss. 10, 13, 14, 18, 19.) Held, on appeal by SARGENT, C.J., and FARRAN, J., (i) that the representation in the charter-party as to the tonnage of the vessel was intended to be a substantive part of the contract between the parties ; (ii) that the statement in the contract was a condition precedent of which the defendents were entitled to avail themselves whether or no they would have suffered loss had they accepted the ship ; (iii) that the facts justified the defendants in repudiating the contract. 8. ——————— Optional clause—Choice of ports to load cargo—Election of port. The plaintiff chartered the defendants' ship to proceed from Bombay to Jedda and thence carry a cargo of pilgrims to Calcutta. The charter-party contained the following clause :—"Owners to have the option of requiring the charterer to ship salt at Ras Rawaya or at Aden to fill up the lower holds of the steamer, at a lump sum of R12,000, payable before delivery at the port of discharge. R2,000 to be deposited by the charterer on account of the above freight, out of which R1,500 to be paid here (Bombay) 48 hours before sailing, and R500 before departure of the steamer from Jedda." Before the ship left Bombay, the plaintiff was called upon to pay and paid the R1,500 advance freight. On the ship's arrival at Jedda, the plaintiff was required by the defendants' agent to name the port where he intended to load the salt, and pay the Rs. 500 named in the charter-party. The plaintiff, in reply, named Aden and paid the R500, which the defendants' agent acknowledged as received "for filling up salt to go to Aden." This was on the 22nd July. The captain, however, believing that the plaintiff would not find salt at Aden for Calcutta, refused to sail to Aden to load the salt, unless the expense of going there and returning to Jedda for the pilgrims was guaranteed by the plaintiff, which the plaintiff refused to do. Subsequently, on the 30th July, the captain, on the instructions of the defendants, informed the plaintiff that the choice of the port to load salt was with the defendants, and that they named Ras Rawaya as the port where the plaintiff was required to load his salt, and refused to go to Aden. The plaintiff refused to go to Ras Rawaya. There was, to the defendants' knowledge, no salt at Ras Rawaya. There was plenty of salt at Aden, though none offering for Calcutta, owing to the prices ruling at the latter port. The captain refusing to load the pilgrims unless the balance of the R12,000 salt freight was paid in advance, the plaintiff paid it, and brought this suit to recover the whole of the said sum. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed (i) because by the true construction of the contract the choice of the port must be taken to be with the plaintiff, who had to do all that was necessary to provide the salt; the option given by the contract to the owners being as to whether they should require salt to be loaded or not; and (ii) because, if the election of the port was with the defendants, they, through their agent at Jedda, conclusively determined their election in favour of Aden at latest on the 22nd July when they accepted the R500 "for filling up salt to go to Aden." 9. ——————— Mistake in date—Mistake mutual or unilateral—Rectification or rescission of contract. The plaintiffs required a steamer to sail from Jedda "fifteen days after the Haj," in order to convey pilgrims returning to Bombay. They chartered a steamer from the defendants in June 1891 for that purpose. The defendants chartered their steamers by English dates. The date inserted in the charter-party was "the 10th August 1892 (fifteen days after the Haj)." "The 10th August 1892" was given or accepted by the plaintiffs in the belief that it corresponded with the fifteenth day after the Haj. The defendants had no belief on the subject, and contracted only with respect to the English date. The 19th July 1892, and not the 10th August 1892, in fact corresponded with the fifteenth day after the Haj. On finding out the mistake in March 1892, the plaintiff brought this suit for rectification of the charter-party by the insertion of the correct date, the 19th July 1892, instead of the erroneous date, the 10th August 1892. Meanwhile the defendants had let all their steamers, and could not give the plaintiff one for the 19th July 1892. Held, that the agreement was one for the 10th August 1892, and that, as that date was a matter materially inducing the agreement, there could be no rectification, but only cancellation, even if both parties were under a mistake. Held, further, that the mistake was not mutual, but on the plaintiffs' part only; and, therefore, there could be no rectification. A plaintiff seeking rectification must show that there was an actual concluded contract antecedent to the instrument sought to be rectified and that such contract is inaccurately represented in the instrument. 10. ——————— Bill of lading—Freight—Rate of freight in charter-party—Contract by sub-charterer with shipper for freight at lower rate—Refusal by captain to sign bills of lading at lower rate than rate in charter-party—Payment by shipper of difference under protest. On 3rd March 1898, K D & Co., a firm of freight jobbers in Bombay, contracted to provide the plaintiffs with freight for 3,000 tons of cargo to Liverpool at 16*s.* 6*d.* per ton in a steamer to be subsequently named, and on the same day handed to the plaintiffs three shipping orders addressed to the captain of the ship, the name of which was to be afterwards inserted. In these shipping orders the higher and lower rate clause was at follows: "Bill of lading if required at lower or higher rate, difference payable here as customary." This clause the plaintiffs struck out from each of the shipping orders according to their usual practice. On 11th May 1898, the defendants chartered the steamship Paddington of which they were also the owners agents in Bombay, and on the 12th May assigned a half share of their interest under the charter-party to K D & Co. By the charter-party a full and complete cargo was to be loaded, and the freight was to be £1-10 per ton. The captain, however, was authorized to sign clean bills of lading at any rate of freight required by the charterers without prejudice to the charter-party, but at not less than the chartered rate, unless the difference was paid in cash before sailing. K D & Co. having thus sub-chartered the Paddington, declared that steamer to the plaintiffs for 2,747 tons of cargo under their contract of the 3rd March 1898 and the name of the steamer was then entered in the shipping orders for that amount of cargo. The plaintiffs thereupon commenced to load a cargo of wheat. By the 21st June, 2,100 tons had been put on board; mate's receipts were given to the plaintiffs and bills of lading were prepared by them, stating the rate of freight to be 16*s.* 6*d.* per ton as per the shipping orders, and were presented for signature to the captain. He refused to sign them unless the difference between 16*s.* 6*d.* and the chartered rate, viz., £1-10, was paid to him as provided in the charter-party. The plaintiffs thereupon refused to ship any more cargo, and demanded the return of the cargo already shipped on board the Paddington. On the 24th June the Paddington sailed from Bombay, the captain having previously authorized the defendants to sign bills of lading for him after his departure, provided they were in accordance with the charter-party. After some delay the plaintiffs on the 29th June accepted bills of lading for the 2,100 tons at £1-10, and paid under protest the difference between that rate and their contract rate (16*s.* 6*d.*) and certain other sums, for which the defendants as agents for the owners claimed a lien. The plaintiffs now sued to recover from the defendants the amount so paid under protest. The defendants contended that as agents for owners they were justified in refusing to give bills of lading until the sums due and for which they claimed a lien were paid. Held, that the defendants had no lien for the sums paid, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount claimed. Per CANDY, J. The plaintiffs were entitled upon demand to have the said 2,100 tons re-delivered to them by the captain. On 29th June the plaintiffs were entitled to clean bills of lading at 30*s.*, and the sum paid by them under protest in order to obtain such bills of lading was recoverable by them. Under the circumstances, the defendants had no lien for freight and demurrage. Per STARLING, J. The captain was justified in refusing to re-deliver the said 2,100 tons. The plaintiffs were entitled to clean bills of lading at 30*s.*, and there was no lien for freight and demurrage in respect of which the plaintiffs had paid under protest the sum claimed by defendants. 11. _____ Power to sublet—Sub-charter—Goods shipped under sub-charter and bills of lading authorized by time charter—Liability of such goods for lien given by time charter—Notice of time charter—"Without prejudice to this charter," meaning of—Form, construction, and effect of bills of lading—Lien for hire of vessel. A vessel was chartered by a firm of merchants in Bombay for six months from 20th August 1898 at a rate of freight, which came to ₹18,000 a month, payable in advance. By the charter-party the charterers had the option of subletting the vessel, and it was provided that bills of lading were to be signed at any rate of freight the charterers or their agents might direct "without prejudice to this charter," and that the owner was to have "a lien upon all cargoes for freight for charter money due under the charter." On 26th August the vessel was sublet by the charterers to the plaintiff for a sound voyage from Saigon to Réunion and back from Mauritius to Bombay. The vessel completed the voyage and on 2nd February 1899 arrived at Bombay with sugar put on board by the plaintiff as sub-charterer, at Mauritius, for which he had received bills of lading from the Captain, who signed them without obtaining payment of the month's freight then due under the time charter. The freight on the sugar was prepaid at Mauritius by the plaintiff's agents, so that on the arrival of the vessel at Bombay nothing remained to be paid by the plaintiff to the shipowner in respect of the bills of lading freight. Delivery of the sugar was, however, refused, the shipowner claiming a lien on it for the ₹18,000 due under the time charter. In a suit against the owner and the Captain of the vessel to recover the sugar, or its value and damages for its detention, the defendants relied on the lien under the time charter, and alleged that the Captain had been induced to sign the bills of lading as he did by misrepresentations of the plaintiff's agent. It was found that the plaintiff knew of the time charter, and the amount of and terms as to the freight, but that there had been no misrepresentation as alleged. Held, that the Captain was authorized by the time charter to sign the bills of lading and therefore the shipowner had contracted with the plaintiff to carry the sugar on the terms of the bills of lading. Colvin v. Newberry, 1 Cl. & Fin. 283, and Small v. Moates, 9 Bing. 574, distinguished. The bills of lading were not mere receipts for the goods shipped; they entitled the plaintiff to delivery of the sugar on payment of the freight due on them, notwithstanding that he had notice of the time charter. Such notice had not the effect of incorporating into the bills of lading any terms inconsistent with them and which the Captain was not bound to embody in them. Fry v. Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, L. R. 1. C. P. 689, and Gardner v. Trechman, 15 Q. B D. 154 followed. The words in the time charter "without prejudice to this charter," meant no more than that the rights of the shipowner against the time charterer, and vice versâ, were to be preserved. Hansen v. Harrold Brothers, 1 Q. B. 612, followed. Those words did not override or limit the power of the Captain to issue bills of lading at different rates of freight, or entitle the shipowner to a lien on the goods of persons, who had come under no contract with him conferring a lien for the freight, payable under the time charter. A right to seize one person's goods for another person's debt must be clearly and distinctly conferred before a Court of Justice can be expected to recognize it. Held, therefore (affirming the decision of the High Court on appeal), that the claim of the ship-owner to the lien provided by the time charter could not be supported. He was, however, entitled to the benefit of any lien, which the time charterer had on the goods of the plaintiff under the sub-charter. TURNER v. GOLAM MAHOMED (1904) . . . I. L. R. 28 Bom. 573

There was nothing to show that any commission was appointed under s. 58 or that any report was submitted under s. 61 of the Act. It was found that the lands were not chaukidari chakran and were not part of the plaintiff's estate. Held (PARGITER, J., dissenting), that the defendant was entitled to question the Collector's right to make the transfer; there is no presumption, merely because of the Collector's action under ss. 48 to 50 of the Act, that there was a prior valid resumption, that the Government acted under s. 58 or that a report was submitted under s. 61 on all the points indicated in it. Per WOODROFFE, J. The meaning of s. 114 (e) of the Evidence Act is that, if an official act is proved to have been done, it will be presumed to have been regularly done. It does not raise any presumption that an act was done, of which there is no evidence and the proof of which is essential to the plaintiff's case. An order of the Collector under s. 50 of the Chaukidari Act transferring the land to a person other than the person within whose estate it lies is ultra vires and a nullity. 1. ——— Want of dishonest intention —Penal Code, s. 415. To induce a son to pay his father's debts, by acting merely on his fear of consequences to his father, is not cheating. To describe these consequences as more serious than they were likely to be, may be to deceive but is not cheating, if done without any fraudulent or dishonest intention. QUEEN v. RAJCOOMAR BANERJEE

2. ——— Dishonest intention at time of taking money. The mere taking money one day, and dishonestly running away without paying the next day, is not necessarily cheating. There must be an intention to deceive and defraud at the time of taking the money, and the subsequent conduct of the prisoner would only be evidence to show the previous dishonest intention. (1), Illus. (o); 15, Illus. (a).* On a charge against the accused of cheating by falsely representing that he was the dewan of an estate and could procure for the complainant appointment to the vacant post of manager to the estate, and thereby obtaining a sum of money as a pretended security deposit, evidence of instances of similar but unconnected transactions with other persons, before and after the date of the offence charged, is admissible under ss. 14 and 15 of the Evidence Act not to establish the factum of the offence but to prove that the transaction in issue was one of a systematic series of frauds, and that the intention of the accused on the particular occasion in question was dishonest and fraudulent. Explanation (1) and Illus. (o) to s. 14 of the Evidence Act render facts showing the existence of a state of mind relevant only if they establish that such state of mind existed in reference to the particular matter in issue. Section 15 is an application of the general rule laid down in s. 14, and the words of the section as well as of Illus. (a) show that it is not necessary that all the acts should form parts of one transaction, but that they should be parts of a series of similar occurrences. Reg. v. *Holt, Bell C. ——— Refusal by Bench of Judges to hear affidavits in support of application for transfer of trial to another district—Application to the Chief Justice to appoint another Bench to hear and determine case—Interlocutory order in criminal matters, finality of—High Court Charter Act (24 & 25 Vic., c. 104), s. 14. Where a rule had been obtained on behalf of a prisoner, calling on the prosecution to show cause why the case should not be transferred for trial to some other Court of Session than that in which it was then pending, on the ground that such strong feeling and prejudice existed in the district against the accused as to render it unlikely that he would get a fair trial, a Division Bench of the High Court, duly constituted, consisting of two Judges, refused to allow the affidavits in support of the application to be read and discharged the rule. Subsequently, an application was made to the Chief Justice to appoint another Bench of the High Court to hear and determine the rule on the ground that it had not been heard, and that consequently the order passed by the Bench discharging it was null and void. Held, that the Chief Justice, having once appointed a Bench under s. 14 of the Charter Act (24 & 25 Vic., c. 104) to hear any particular case, has no power to interfere when the case has been disposed of by that Bench. Held, also that the refusal of the Bench to hear the affidavits read, if an error at all, was simply one of law in the course of dealing with a matter clearly within their jurisdiction ; and that, therefore, the decision could not be treated as a nullity, or its legality questioned by the Chief Justice. Held, further, that whether the judgment had been signed or not, previous to the application being made to the Chief Justice, an interlocutory order of such a nature in a criminal matter is not final, but may be reviewed or reconsidered, or a similar application may be entertained as often as the Court in its discretion may think proper. In the matter of the petition of ABDOOL SOBAN.

——— ss. 2, 3 (c), 4-12—Meaning of the words "holder" and "heir"—Capacity to mortgage. The words "holder" and "his heir" are used throughout the Chota Nagpore Incumbered Estates Act in the sense of the holder of the property at the time of the determination of the debts and liabilities under s. 8 of the Act and his heir. The word "heir" in the Act always applies to the person who is the holder's heir at the time of such determination of the debts and liabilities, and to no other heir, nor to the heir's heir. The estate of F came under management under the Chota Nagpore Incumbered Estates Act in 1880. He had several sons, of whom B was the eldest and J the next in age. F died in 1884, and, according to the custom of the family, B succeeded him to the estate, and on B dying in 1892 without leaving a male issue, J succeeded him. On the 8th June 1894, J mortgaged a village which had been granted to him by his father for his maintenance, and which never came under the management of the Incumbered Estates. Held, that there was nothing in s. 3, cl.
